Rails Ban East Coast Exports, 200 Ships Idle

Extended Embargo Covers Baltimore; Two Dock Strike Meetings Monday

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—The rail embargo on export freight was extended to all major East Coast ports today as the dock workers' strike immobilized almost 200 ships.

The Association of American Railroads placed a ban on nearly all goods destined for overseas shipment out of Philadelphia, Baltimore, Wilmington, Del., and Hampton Roads, Va. This was an extension of the embargo clamped yesterday on freight moving to New York and Boston.

The ordinary weekend lull minimized the effects of the strike of some 65,000 longshoremen on its first official day.

But the usually teeming waterfronts were expected to be deserted Monday. Marshall Plan shipments as well as ordinary commercial maritime business will be hit drastically if the walkout is a long one.

A survey indicated these ships were tied up by the strike: Baltimore 95, New York 52, Philadelphia 32, Boston 8 and Hampton Roads 3. Actually 202 vessels were idle in New York's great port but customs officials indicated only 52 of these could be attributed to the longshoremen's walkout.

Joseph P. Ryan, president of the AFL International Longshoremen's Association, who called the strike for last midnight, said he expected no developments until Monday when two union meetings are scheduled. One of the sessions will involve all AFL maritime unions.

Ryan said he was going to play golf over the weekend but could be reached in the event Mayor William O'Dwyer wants to talk. The Mayor, who has interrupted a California vacation because of the tieup, is due here Sunday morning by plane.

Ryan said yesterday the necessity for the walkout was a "national calamity." He called it after ILA members had voted by a large margin to reject a wage settlement negotiated with shipping operators by the union's leaders.

Federal mediators got the parties together after the union vote was announced, but the employers said they would not raise their 10-cents-an-hour increase offer turned down by the ballots of the rank-and-file longshoremen.

The shutdown in United States Atlantic Coast ports made a boom town out of Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Several transatlantic liners were diverted there, including the Mauretania and the Britannic of the Cunard White Star line and the Veendam of the Holland-American line.

United States customs officers were flown there to expedite handling of passengers. Special trains

AFL Would Oust Reds in Canada Trade Congress

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—The AFL today opened a drive to throw Communists out of the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress.

AFL President William Green told a news conference the executive council will meet Sunday with a delegation of AFL unionists from Canada to plan the drive. The job is expected to be completed successfully in a year.

Green said the council undertook the fight against Canadian Communists at the insistence of George M. Harrison, council member and president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks. Harrison told reporters he demanded that the AFL "clean the Commies out of its Canadian branch or get the hell out ourselves."

$75,000 Fire Injures Seven At Old Fort

Warehouse, Once Officers' Club, Razed At Fort Washington

Fire destroyed about $75,000 worth of stored equipment and leveled the old officers' club and mess hall at historic Fort Washington, on the Potomac in nearby Maryland, last night.

Seven firemen were injured. Loss was estimated by Chief Thomas Barber of the Fort Washington Volunteer Fire Co.

The story-and-a-half frame building, 400-by-200 feet with an additional small wing, was used as a warehouse for the last year and a half by the National Park Service. Destroyed in the flames were beds, mattresses, tires, cooking ranges, a quantity of other wartime barracks equipment and—ironically—more than 1000 hand fire extinguishers.

Barber believes the blaze started near what was formerly the kitchen of the building, shortly after 6 p. m. At its height, flames soared more than 100 feet into the air and ignited a tree 50 feet across the road. Embers were still smoldering at the base of the blackened chimney after a 4-hour battle by about 60 volunteer firemen from the fort company and six surrounding Prince Georges County towns.

Casualties Listed

The injured firemen are:

Roy E. Morris, jr., 24, a Bolling Air Base technical sergeant living on the fort, jaw fractured and five teeth knocked out when he lost control of a hose line; admitted to Bolling Base Hospital.

William Connor, 42, proprietor of Connor's Tavern, 9931 Old Fort rd., Oxon Hill, and a member of Oxon Hill Fire Co., suffered a heart attack while fighting the blaze; admitted to Casualty Hospital here for observation.

Lindy Kirby, 21, of 7051 Livingston rd. se., Oxon Hill fireman, overcome by smoke; admitted to Casualty Hospital for observation.

Car Dealers Summoned To Hearings

House Subcommittee Subpenas 2 Firms In Profiteering Probe

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

Representatives of the Kearney Oldsmobile Co., 7 New York ave. ne., and the New York Avenue Motor Co., 606 New York ave. nw., new car dealers, have been subpenaed to appear before the House Subcommittee to Investigate Questionable Trade Practices this week.

The subcommittee has been investigating new car transactions in the Washington metropolitan area for more than three months.

Its chairman, W. Kingsland Macy (R., N. Y.) has charged, as a result, that automobile buyers here have been victimized to the tune of $4,400,000 in prices paid for trade-in used cars and in the sale of new car extras and accessories which the buyers did not want. The estimate was for the first seven months of 1948.

R. Harry Kearney, jr., and Raymond J. Kearney, co-owners of the Kearney Co., have been summoned to appear at the first public hearing, scheduled by the subcommittee for 10 a. m. Monday at

Controversy Blocks Requests

Three Va. Doctors Thwarted In Bid to Treat D. C. Cases

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Requests by three nearby Virginia physicians for permits to treat patients in the District have been held up as an outgrowth of a long controversy between District and Virginia health officials, it was disclosed last night.

Such permits, known as "borderline" certificates, have been issued by the District Healing Arts Commission on Licensure Practice for several years to doctors in nearby Maryland and Virginia instead of full licenses to practice here.

The Maryland Medical Board has reciprocated the courtesy by issuing such permits to District physicians who want to treat patients in nearby Free State counties.

Virginia, however, through its State Board of Medical Licenses, has contended it has no present legislative authority to do so and has refused to issue such cerificates.

Old Dominion officials did not attempt to prosecute actively District physicians failing to take out Virginia licenses, but two months ago questioned a District company doctor treating a company employe at the worker's home in nearby Virginia.

When this action was made known to Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer and secretary of the Healing Arts Commission, he directed a ban on further issuance of permits to Virginia doctors. The commission will meet December 13 to discuss what steps to take next.

Chiang May Give Up Base At Suchow

Withdrawal Plan Reported as Reds Bombard Airfield; Nanking Gloomy

Nanking (Sunday), Nov. 14 (AP).—Reliable sources said today the government plans to withdraw its army headquarters from Suchow, the big base around which eddies a decisive battle for China.

Official quarters were silent on this report, but it was acknowledged that encircling Communist forces were shelling the airfield 5 miles east of Suchow.

The field is the one remaining link between Suchow and Nanking, 200 miles to the southeast, now that the railway has been cut.

Informants said the government headquarters would be moved 100 miles south to Pengpu. The railway city of Pengpu is 108 miles by rail northwest of Nanking.

Air Activity Halted

The Communist radio asserted the Reds had all but encircled General Huang Po-tao's Seventh Army Corps on the eastern flank of the Suchow front, where only two days ago the government claimed a major victory on the Grand Canal.

If this is correct, the whole Suchow position is endangered and the government must retreat to Pengpu or risk encirclement. The Grand Canal covered the east flank of Suchow.

Heavy concentrations of fighter-bombers resumed their strikes, after a brief lapse early today, in an attempt to relieve the Seventh Corp's position.

It appeared the Communists were following their usual pattern of concentrating strength against a single segment of a defense line, nibbling off the government defenders piece by piece.

Chinese officers who were happy two days ago over the news of victory east of Suchow again lapsed into despondency. Their feelings usually are a good barometer of the war's progress.

Evacuation Plans Reported

Reliable sources said members of the Legislative Yuan were told at a private meeting facilities would be provided for removing members and their families who want to leave Nanking.

(If true, this indicated the government was going ahead with plans for abandoning Nanking if necessary, despite previous denials.)

The tension which had relaxed among government officials after the report of the Grand Canal victory was again apparent.

The progovernment reports of the shelling of the Suchow airfield did not say whether the field was still in use.

Late Saturday night dispatches to progovernment papers and to the official Central News Agency said the Nationalists had broken the Communist line at Chanchuan village, near the Grand Canal some 40 miles east of Suchow, and had recovered two other villages.

2 Proposals Advanced in Greek Crisis

Super Government Without Regard to Parties Is Called Possible Solution

Athens, Nov. 13 (AP).—Two possible solutions of the Greek government crisis emerged tonight from negotiations of political leaders.

First of these was that Constantin Tsaldaris, Foreign Minister in the resigned coalition government of Themistokles Sophoulis, might form a cabinet from his Populist (monarchist) and former opposition parties. The Populists hold more Parliamentary seats than any other party.

Second possibility was that Liberal Party Leader Sophoulis might head a "super government" chosen without regard to party connections.

This is the program sought by Deputy Liberal Leader Sophocles Venizelos, who forced the old government's resignation on grounds it failed to crush the Communist guerillas because it was too much concerned with politics.

Would Want Free Hand

Sophoulis told newsmen he would accept a mandate to form a cabinet only if he had a free hand to choose men from all parties.

Earlier he had said the only solution was for Tsaldaris to reach agreement with former opposition parties, but it seemed he had been won over to the Venizelos viewpoint.

First it appeared Sophoulis might head a government merely reshuffled from the old one.

Tsaldaris got his mandate from King Paul at a two-hour meeting. Political leaders said his first move would be to confer with Sophoulis and if they agreed Sophoulis would be recommended to form the new government.

Tsaldaris did talk with Sophoulis for an hour tonight. He said he expected to see Sophoulis again Sunday.

Venizelos Participates

Participating in the conference was Sophocles Venizelos, deputy Liberal Party leader, who brought about the resignation of the government on the grounds it had failed to crush the Communist guerillas.

Venizelos also talked privately with Sophoulis. Some observers believed Venizelos might participate in the new government.

The old government, a coalition of Liberals led by Sophoulis and Populists (Monarchists) led by Tsaldaris, had been in office 14 months.

Upon leaving the royal palace, Tsaldaris said it was the desire of the King to end the crisis "as soon as possible, if possible by Monday."

He said the situation must be solved by radical changes so as to permit the struggle against Communist guerillas to be pressed without compromise.

"We will not allow Greece to become a Czechoslovakia," he asserted.

Crowds Wait at Palace

Doctor Who Will Deliver Royal Baby Takes Up Vigil

London (Sunday), Nov. 14 (AP).—Sir William Gilliatt, who will deliver Princess Elizabeth's baby, took up an all-night vigil at Buckingham Palace early today in preparation for the birth of the princess' child, expected this weekend.

Sir John Weir, the royal family physician, has not yet been called to the palace. This fact was interpreted as meaning that Sir William's decision to stay overnight after three visits to the princess yesterday was precautionary.

Sir William decided to remain overnight after having been called back to the palace shortly after 10 last night (5 p. m. EST). He had paid a previous visit to the 22-year-old princess at 8 p. m.

Yesterday morning Sir William and Sir John paid routine visits to the palace. Shortly after midnight palace correspondents were informed that Sir William would spend the night in the room which had been made ready for him days ago.

Throughout yesterday hundreds of persons crowded around outside the palace to await the birth of the baby that will be a second-in-line heir-presumptive to the throne of England.

The crowd swelled this evening when workers, who obviously had come straight from shops and offices, joined in the watch. Overalled women in shabby cloth coats brushed shoulders with the be-furred gentry. Sleek automobiles slowly circled Victoria Memorial before the palace gates, nudged along by tooting little taxis.

Crowds dwindled away by midnight to scattered strollers. Earlier in the evening the crowds numbered over 1000.

The excitement, typical of London, swept rumors back and forth.

The princess was going for a drive, said someone. Quickly the crowd moved to the driveway gates. It turned out to be Prince Phillip, the expectant father, going to a Sea Scouts rally.

There he told officials of the Navy League that Princess Elizabeth "is very well and in excellent spirits."

Crowds cheered the prince with cries of "Good old Philip."

Many in the throng were mothers.

"I do hope it's a boy and I hope, too, they will name him Philip," said one.

"Wouldn't it be marvelous if they made the announcement while we are here," came an oft-repeated wish.

At dark many drifted away. But a few lingered, still watching the palace windows. But it is doubtful if anybody saw anything.

A few may have caught a glimpse of the princess when she took a stroll in the gardens behind the palace before noon in the bright sunshine.

Elsewhere in the island and empire final touches were put to arrangements for a great jubilee when the birth is announced. These range from the official firing of the 41-gun royal salute at all military and naval establishments and the formal ringing of great cathedral and small church bells to local celebrations.

Typical of the local celebrations are the arrangements for a huge bonfire and a procession of torches at the village of Fleetwood.

Lie, Evatt Appeal to Rulers Of Big 4 to End Berlin Dispute

Paris, Nov. 13 (AP).—Two top United Nations chieftains appealed directly and urgently to the chief executives of the four big powers over the heads of their U. N. delegations today to settle the Berlin dispute for world peace.

The unprecedented action was taken by Dr. Herbert V. Evatt of Australia, president of the General Assembly, and Trygve Lie, U. N. secretary-general, in the midst of a bitter East-West clash over arms reductions.

The appeal was transmitted to President Truman, Prime Minister Stalin, Prime Minister Attlee and Premier Queuille in the form of a joint letter handed to the heads of the United States, Russian, British and French delegations here.

It was known by many that Lie and Evatt were in consultation, but few expected them to deliver an appeal above the level of the delegation chiefs.

Lie and Evatt said:

"Every day that the deadlock over Berlin continues, the danger to the peace and security of all nations continues undiminished.

"Fear of another war is crippling the efforts of all nations to repair the damage of the last war and return once more to the ways of peace. The work of the General Assembly and of the United Nations as a whole in every field of its endeavor is being delayed and undermined.

"It is within the power of the leaders of the great nations, to which this communication is addressed, to end this danger to the peace."

Evatt and Lie reminded the four great powers they had voted, with everyone else in the U. N., for a Mexican resolution which called on the big powers to try to settle their differences peacefully.

Finally, the two U. N. officials offered to give the big powers all possible assistance in ironing out the Berlin crisis.

With that deadlock out of the way, they said, the big powers could resume negotiations on the

French Reds, Police Clash; 20 Injured

24-Hr. General Strike Is Partial Success; Miners Kidnap Three

Paris, Nov. 13 (AP).—More than 20 persons were injured today when bitter fighting between police and Communists broke out in three widely scattered parts of France.

One of those injured was Arthur Ramette who is considered one of the top six Communists in the country. He is a member of the French National Assembly.

Ramette was hurt by a tear-gas grenade near Douai, in the northern coalfields, when police broke up a forbidden public meeting.

The bloodiest clash was at Puteaux, a western suburb of Paris, where 20 were injured in a battle between stone-throwing Communist demonstrators and police. The police fired pistols. Three demonstrators were reported to have been struck by bullets.

Another incident in the Communist coal strike occurred when workers marched on a mine in south central France. They kidnaped three police officers and

Not Planning To Resign Soon, Marshall Says

Paris, Nov. 13. (U.P.).—United States Secretary of State George C. Marshall declared today that he has no plans at present to resign in the near future.

Marshall issued a brief statement contradicting an article in today's Paris edition of the New York Herald Tribune

"I regret that my remarks at a press conference yesterday have been misconstrued," Marshall said in his statement. "I thought I had made it obvious that I would never take a decision of this nature without discussing it with the President, and that he and I have never discussed the matter."

Red Says U. S. Plots Atomic 'Pearl Harbor'

Russian Arms Slash Proposal Is Beaten In Acid U. N. Session

Paris, Nov. 13. (U.P.).—Soviet Delegate Andrei Y. Vishinsky today accused the United States of planning an atomic "Pearl Harbor" attack on Russia but the United Nations Political Committee voted down, paragraph by paragraph, the Soviet resolution calling for a one-third reduction in the armaments of the Big Four nations and a prohibition on atomic weapons.

A nearly identical Polish proposal was also voted down. The committee adopted the Belgian plan referring the problem of armaments to a U. N. commission.

The Russian resolution was defeated by a vote of 36 to 6, with seven nations abstaining. The Belgian proposal was adopted 40 to 6, with one abstention.

Red States Vote Alone

On both ballots, the six states of the Soviet bloc voted together and alone. The abstainers were mostly Arab states.

The vote ended three days of the bitterest East-West debate ever heard in the U. N. Climaxed by Vishinsky's charge that the United States Air Force plans to "slink" long-range atomic bombers into Russia from bases in Britain.

The Soviet spokesman quoted an article written by Air Force Gen. George Kenny for Newsweek magazine as proof that America is planning a surprise attack on Russia.

"You (Americans) are preparing a Pearl Harbor for the Soviet Union, are you not?" he demanded. "With your connivances, with your intolerance, you are inciting this war, and now you want to shift the blame on us who are not even dreaming of anything the likes of that."

He was replying to yesterday's speeches by Frederick C. Osborn of the United States and Hector McNeil of Britain, which accused Russia of maintaining a massive war machine and challenged Vishinsky to confirm or deny reports

Tel Aviv Quotes Truman

U. S. Said to Have Told Britain Joint Palestine Policy Is Off

Tel Aviv, Israel, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Informed sources said tonight that President Truman has notified Britain he no longer felt bound to follow a joint American-British policy on Palestine.

The President told the British, these sources said, that he would support full U. S. recognition of the Jewish state.

He further informed British officials that he would propose that a conciliation committee be formed to work out a final Palestine peace.

He warned the British, these sources said, that the United States will not support United Nations sanctions against Israel if the Jewish state refuses to pull its troops out of the disputed south Palestine Negev area.

The U. N. would be asked by the United States to take full responsibility for the 500,000 Arab refugees now dispersed through the Middle East, according to the President's reported statement.

It was believed here that without the full and active support of the United States, the plan of the late Count Folke Bernadotte, U. N. mediator, to divide the Negev between Trans-Jordan and Egypt could not possibly come about.

The Negev, it was pointed out, is now under nearly complete control of the Israeli army.

(In Washington, State Department spokesmen said the department knew nothing of Mr. Truman's reported message to Great Britain. White House spokesmen could not be reached immediately for comment.)

Proposal Maps Duties Over U. S. For 15 Million In Case of War

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Peacetime training of a half million citizens in a civil defense program designed to include 15 million in case of war was urged yesterday in a report to Defense Secretary Forrestal.

Prepared at the Pentagon by a special group of civilians called into Government service for the job, it urges the immediate creation of local atomic defense, medical, air-raid warden and other such units as part of a detailed civil preparedness program.

Absence of such a setup today leaves us "most vulnerable" to attack, and constitutes a "missing link" in our current national defense structure, the report declares.

Directed by Hopley

The group, known as the Office of Civil Defense Planning, was formed last March by Secretary Forrestal with President Truman's concurrence. Russell J. Hopley of Omaha, on leave as president of the Northwestern Bell Telephone Co., headed the office and signed the 300-page report. It proposes:

Establishment of a national Office of Civil Defense, under the Secretary of Defense or the President, to provide top-level leadership of the program. Hopley "guesses" that the permanent Federal Civil Defense setup could be held to 200 people.

Leaving basic operational responsibility in the States and communities, but with mutual assistance plans and mobile supporting units to assist in emergencies.

A permanent Nationwide organization, established on the regional, State and municipal, as well as Federal levels, which would have paid employes, but with maximum utilization of existing governmental agencies, private clubs, organizations and volunteers.

Special Forces Needed

Creation of well-organized units within local communities, which would be both trained and equipped to meet any type of attack by an overseas enemy. This involves establishment of diverse special forces to relieve cities devastated by bombing or other attacks.

Intensive planning at Federal, State and local levels to meet atomic or normal bombing poison gas and special weapons attacks.

Forrestal Flies To Berlin After Parley in London

London, Nov. 13 (NYHT).—James Forrestal, Secretary of Defense, flew to Berlin today after conferences with British defense leaders as representatives of the five western European union powers were reportedly approaching agreement on a draft North Atlantic defense pact.

Mr. Forrestal had lunch with American and British leaders here and it is believed significant that one of the guests was George A. Garrett, American Minister at Dublin. It is understood that Eire, with its vital ports, has been under pressure to join the Western powers as a major move in mapping strategic plans in event of war.

Forrestal's visit was believed connected primarily with budgetary problems involved if America supplied equipment to western European nations under the proposed North Atlantic pact.

Joe Ryan Worked Hard on New York Docks Till Bad Luck Put Him in $20,000 Life Job

A sling of misfortune proved to be the lucky break of a lifetime for Joe Ryan, brawny boss of the 45,000 longshoremen striking on the East Coast. The mishap initiated Ryan's rise from an $10-a-week dock walloper to the $20,000-a-year president-for-life of the International Longshoreman's Union (AFL).

A brawny boss

Joe, then a youthful Samson, was laboring in the hold of a ship when a 500-pound load of ingots broke loose from its sling. Somehow, Joe survived the deadly shower of metal, but he was laid up for weeks with broken bones, and he with a wife and two girls to feed.

Local 791—the "Irish" local, whose members work the ships along the Chelsea Docks of New York Harbor—came to Joe's rescue by electing him financial secretary. That was in 1912.

Fifteen years later Joe was elected president of ILA, and over the years he built up virtual dictatorial authority over some 75,000 "longies" along the ports of the Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico.

Longshoremen the world over are hard-living, hard-fighting, hard-drinking men. Joe had to demonstrate more than once that he was tougher with his fists and tactics than any challengers. In 1945 he crushed a major revolt, started by his own local. The present strike, too, began with a wildcat walkout of the same "Irish" local, which in recent years has been growing restive under Ryan's iron-fisted rule.

Today, at 64, red-haired, bushy-browed Joe Ryan is still a formidable, if paunchy, figure. Some 220 solid pounds spread over a massive body indicate that Joe can, if necessary, still take care of himself in a free-for-all.

But though Joe lives and works among harbor huskies, he eschews rough speech and rowdy manners. He quaffs but little, and swears not at all, and regularly attends Catholic services with his wife. He wears expensive blue serge suits, striped shirts, bright ties, and is careful about his fingernails.

Joseph Patrick Ryan was born in Babylon, Long Island. His parents were Irish immigrants from County Tipperary. By the age of 9, he'd lost both parents, and was brought up by his stepmother in a Manhattan tenement with five other kids. She was kind to Joe, and to this day the burly boss of the longshoremen chokes up when he recalls that she it was who taught him not to lie or swear.

He had to quit parochial school in order to fend for himself. He knocked around on odd jobs, and while still in his teens turned to the docks for his livelihood. Joe started at 35 cents an hour—when and if he could get the work; today his larrikins get $1.75 an hour plus overtime. In 1943, the union held one of its conventions—scheduled for every fourth year—and expressed its appreciation for Joe's service by electing him president for life.

Joe Ryan is obviously a controversial public figure. His admirers point to his ability to maintain labor peace on his union docks. And it is true that the current strike is the first official coastwise walkout in Joe's 21-year tenure as ILA's president. His critics say that Joe has robbed his union of democratic rights and has—up to now, at least—signed contracts with the shipping industry without so much as a nod to the wishes of the rank and file.

In 1934, when Harry Bridges was leading a maritime strike on the West Coast, Joe flew out there, signed a contract for his dockwallopers, and announced the strike was over. Fearless, Ryan faced the outraged stevedores and ordered them back to work. Three years later, unable to overthrow Ryan, Bridges led the Pacific ship loaders out of the ILA into a new CIO-affiliated International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union. Since then, the two labor leaders hate each other's guts.

A series of murders, culminating in the strangling of an insurgent leader in the Brooklyn "Italian" local shook the ILA in 1939, but nothing ever came of the police investigation. Ryan and other union officials have been accused of racketeering, and charged with violation of the antitrust laws. Nothing ever came of these charges, either.

Ryan's friends point to the work record of the longshoremen during the war. They point to his ban on strikes for the duration. They point to Joe's insistence—when he was elected ILA president for life—that the union also elect the Negro vice president for life "as an object lesson to the entire labor movement that unity can be achieved by elimination of race, creed and color prejudice." They say he never forgets an old friend, needy longshoreman, or the hungry family of a jobless dockwalloper.

Red-headed Ryan hates Reds. He traces all his troubles in and out the union to Harry Bridges and the Reds. He's proud of his fight against the Communists in the labor movement. He says: "ILA stands for 'I Love America'."

A-Attack Results Pictured in Report

Defense Secretary Forrestal yesterday made public an official report proposing a Nation-wide educational program "to dispel the current unjustified fear" of the radioactive dangers following an atomic attack.

The document—setting forth in simple language the prospects of death or survival in case of an A-bomb attack on this Nation—was prepared by the Office of Civil Defense Planning, an agency set up in the Pentagon last March.

Outling what military men feel might happen in case of an atomic assault on the United States, the report calls for the creation of special units to defend civil communities against the after effects of an atomic attack.

"Our national security demands immediate development and implementation of a specific plan for radiological defense as a part of the national civil defense program," says the report.

Defense Plan Given

The document did not go into the entire field of atomic warfare, but merely the question of "radiological defense"—passive activity to guard against danger from contact with an area blasted by an A-bomb.

"Education of the public in respect to the true potentials and actual limitations of atomic warfare is the only means by which the civil population may be adequately prepared to meet the eventualities of atomic attack," states the report.

"No previous type of warfare has offered such rich opportunities to exploit fear of the unseen and the unknown. It is, therefore, obvious that the primary objective of a program of education of the public in respect to atomic warfare should be to dispel the current unjustified fear of the radiological hazards involved in such warfare and to develop a wholesome understanding of and respect for the potentials of atomic weapons."

While the report did not elaborate on this statement, it was obviously intended as a suggestion that life can continue after an atomic attack and the public had better get prepared for it.

Postattack Picture

The Hopley report gives the following picture of what might happen in an A-bomb assault on this Nation:

The bomb probably would be detonated well above the earth's surface, as at Hiroshima and Nagasaki, rather than on the surface or under water.

One bomb would produce 100,000 casualties—40,000 of them fatal. Half of the latter would be killed outright.

Except for "chance shielding" and other special factors, it is said, the casualties would run as follows:

1. Within 500 yards—100 per cent immediate fatalities.
2. Between 500 and 1000 yards—Nearly 100 per cent fatalities, with deaths occurring during the succeeding three weeks; in many cases, death would be due to radiological causes.
3. Between 1000 and 1500 yards—Probably 50 per cent casualties, with more flash and flame injuries than radioactive burns.
4. Between 1500 and 2500 yards—Probably 15 per cent fatalities, largely due to other than radiological causes, though many nonfatal casualties would be due to the latter.
5. Between 2500 and 3000 yards—Few fatalities.
6. Beyond 3000 yards—few, if any injuries.

Ashes Hazard Small

"In an aerial burst," it was stated, "the first, and by far, the most injuries to people, is caused by the intensive gamma radiation and the vast shower, or "flux" of neutrons released during the split-second period of actual detonation.

"It may be expected to result in death to practically all persons within 1000 yards."

But the second type of radiological hazard—due to "bomb ashes"—are of only minor importance in an aerial burst of an A-bomb, it is stated. They are swept skyward. Only with surface or subsurface explosives of A-bombs—not to be expected but neither to be disregarded—will there be lingering radiological hazards.

Detailed provisions are made for the establishment and training of special local radiological defense units. High school and college physics teachers and those in allied sciences will be recruited for such forces, under the plan. It is planned to maintain such units "two deep."

The detailed program for organization of the atomic defense units calls for preparation of a special radiological defense code for civil defense work. It is designed for speed, not secrecy.

A comprehensive program also was prepared for "war gas" civil defense, which despite its not being used in World War II remains a worry among war planners. The report does not mention biological warfare—one of the present day major fears—but this was due to the secrecy surrounding "BW".

Rail Export Ban Extended

took travelers to and from New York.

Foreign mail was piling up in New York. Postmaster Albert Goldman said 15 ships scheduled to take mail overseas had been held up.

The agreement rejected by the dock workers called for a hike in day shift straight-time pay from $1.75 to $1.85 an hour, and in the night and weekend overtime rate from $2.62½ to 2.77½. Ryan said the union now was going back to its original demand of a 50 cents an hour raise.

The walkout began in New York unofficially Wednesday after several ILA locals had announced they would not accept the settlement. Ryan had helped negotiate the agreement but he backed the union members in their refusal to accept it.

It originally had been indicated the strike would be extended to South Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports but union leaders said the men would stay at work there for the present.

Strikers Picket Office Of Their Union Head

New York, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—There weren't any pickets on New York's strike-bound docks today, but members of the striking International Longshoremen's Association (AFL) picketed their union head for allegedly treating them unfairly.

Five pickets, who said they represented 350 members of two Brooklyn locals, paraded up and down in front of ILA President Joseph P. Ryan's office. They said he doublecrossed them and failed to protect their jobs in a dispute with the AFL Teamsters Union.

Agreement in Principle Reached on Hiring Hall

San Francisco, Nov. 13 (AP).—"Agreement in principle" on at least one major issue—the hiring hall—was reached today in the 73-day-old maritime strike.

A joint statement by the Waterfront Employers Association and the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (CIO) said both sides had agreed to continue the hiring-hall system.

Little Effect Expected Here From Walkout

The East Coast longshoremen's strike is expected to have little or no effect in Washington, but it was considered probably responsible for a substantial increase in traffic yesterday through the Potomac freight yards.

The five railroads using the yards handled more carloads of freight there yesterday than they had on any day for five months, according to C. E. McCarty, manager.

Austria Rejects Reds' Spy Charge Against Officials

Vienna, Nov. 13 (AP).—The Austrian government rejected today a Soviet charge that government officials are engaged in espionage for the western powers.

The charge was made yesterday in the Allied Council by Col. Gen. Vladimir Kurasov, Russian high commissioner.

It followed a heated discussion on the recent arrest by the Russians of Dr. Margarethe Ottillinger, section chief in the Austrian Ministry of Economic planning.

The government said in a communique that Dr. Ottillinger was working only for the interests of Austria, and "these interests are never espionage and never include work against any of the occupying powers."

proposed local mobile reserve battalions—in natural disasters as well as peacetime drills and manuvers.

Establishment of a "National Civil Defense Training Center"—possibly here—and other units over the country.

Model Statutes Suggested

The detailed program, drawn up by Hopley and his associates, is being referred to the various States, Federal agencies and Congress. A model State act and suggested outline for municipal ordinances was prepared by the group, as well as a draft of a congressional bill.

Secretary Forrestal, to whom the report was made, said he is making it public prior to consideration by his office so that it will receive the "widest public understanding." He praised the group for its effort.

Said Hopley, in submitting the report:

"In the event of a future war, which might come to our shores, all of the people, all of the facilities and all of the skills and energies of the Nation must be utilized to the fullest extent. To successfully carry out this program will require the cooperation of every man, woman and child in this Nation."

SECRETARY FORRESTAL
Receives report

He estimated that 15 million persons would be required in wartime to actively carry on civil defense. Intensive training for 500,000 men and women is contemplated immediately after the program is launched. This apparently does not include the lesser training contemplated for great numbers of sector and block wardens which would be appointed under the plan.

"The newness and strangeness of some of the possible weapons of attack," declares the report, "emphasize the difficulties and point up the need for an immediate training program."

The plan proposes that all involved in civil defense, whether full-time, paid employes, or part-time volunteers, should take a loyalty oath. When questioned, Hopley said his office had not gone into the matter of whether loyalty investigations also should be conducted.

He said that cost estimates of the plan were not complete, but that it contemplated the fullest use of existing agencies and keeping expenditures to the minimum.

Splinter Movements Avoided

The proposed organization, it was made plain, avoids any "States' Righters'" objections by handling all matters through established channels. The Federal office will establish policy and techniques, and recommend procedures to the States, which in turn will submit them to local civil defense organizations.

Consideration also was given to regional Federal offices and "metropolitan area" civil defense organizations where State lines are crossed. These are provided, but the plans are drawn in lightly.

In other respects, the report constitutes a manual for setting up a Nation-wide civil defense system. Often it goes into the minutest detail—such as listing the equipment for an atomic bomb defense unit, the distance from an explosion to medical-aid stations, the exact number of deputies for a local unit and establishment of dispersed morgues in a blasted city.

Other even more detailed manuals of various phases of civil defense are in preparation, it is stated.

Four Stages Outlined

Hopley outlined four stages of civil defense in the event of attacks:

1. Self-help, wherein a community takes care of its own needs.
2. Mutual aid of one community to another, plus sending of mobile reserve battalions organized for the purpose.
3. Military aid to civilian communities.
4. Martial rule, which Hopley states should properly come last.

While some staging of local civil defense organizations is proposed, for the most part the Hopley report urges full-fledged planning, organization and training on Federal, State and local levels.

It advocates establishment of a permanent Federal office under a highly qualified director with four deputies. The office should be represented on the Munitions Board and Research and Development Board, it is urged. Organizational charts are included both for the Federal office and its regional field branches, but also State and local setups.

The value of dimouts and blackouts is questioned in the report, but it said that local civil defense units must be prepared to impose them if demanded by the military.

Urging that the civil defense plan not interfere with Selective Service plans, the report urges that, "wherever possible, women be used."

Army Prohibits Uniform Wearing At Red Affairs

By The Associated Press

The Army wants it known that the "occasions of ceremony" at which its uniform may be worn do not include Communist affairs.

A circular now being sent to all commands states:

"The wearing of the uniform in a Communist-sponsored demonstration of activity of any nature by any person in the active service of the Army of the United States or by any person on the Regular Army retired list . . . (or) by a member of the civilian components not on active duty is prohibited . . ."

While Army regulations cannot apply to veterans no longer members of civilian components or on the regular retired list, the Army has sought to discourage the use of the uniform in Communist-sponsored demonstrations.

Missing Effects Puzzle Police in Glen Burnie Case

Baltimore, Nov. 13 (AP).—Thomas Alexander Edwards, the Negro sugar refinery worker accused of killing John H. Mahlan and Mary C. Kline, was in Baltimore City jail today awaiting grand jury action.

A statement by Governor Lane's office two days ago said the husky Anne Arundel County man had confessed the dual slaying.

Anne Arundel County State's Attorney James C. Morton, jr., said Edwards' case would be presented to a county grand jury Tuesday.

Police investigators meantime concentrated on the still unsolved problem of two missing articles. Miss Kline's wrist watch and Mahlan's wallet. A search for these valuables was undertaken. Police said Edwards denied having robbed the pair.

Joan Crawford Ill

Hollywood, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Film star Joan Crawford was hospitalized today after collapsing from overwork. Miss Crawford has been trying to care for her four children while completing a picture and the strain became too great when she caught a bad cold, her doctor said.

D. C. Plan Reaches Deep in City Life

Establishment of a national civil defense organization along the lines advocated by the Hopley report—submitted yesterday to Defense Secretary Forrestal—would materially alter the municipal government and community life of the District of Columbia and nearby towns and cities.

The blueprint for a permanent, peacetime CD setup—considerably more extensive than that existing during the war—would reach into all sectors of the metropolitan area. It provides:

(1) Reestablishment of the air-raid warning system, with sector and block wardens, on an even more comprehensive basis than in wartime. Volunteer block wardens would be called upon to make detailed surveys of persons, vehicles, buildings and facilities in their areas.

(2) Appointment of a local director of civil defense—the term is "civil" not "civilian" defense today—with five deputies. All should be "high caliber" war veterans, if practicable, it is urged.

3. As far as possible, civil defense should use existing municipal facilities. That is, the regular head of police or his representative should serve as the chief of the CD police division, the DC engineer chief handle public works matters for the civil defense director, etc.

4. It is recommended that the local government establish an evacuation office under the civil defense chief, a civilian relief section to plan for mass feeding and housing of bombed-out persons, a rescue division to prepare for taking people out of demolished buildings, and an air-raid spotting service is proposed.

5. Establishment of a "mobile civil defense battalion" for the District of Columbia. This uniformed outfit of 500 men would be one of at least 100 to be organized in continental United States.

Twenty-fourth Battalion

Already designated as the "Twenty-fourth Battalion" in the Office of Civil Defense Planning blueprint, the local outfit would include engineers, firefighters, police, medical, radiological defense, chemical defense, and rescue workers. At least six planes of the Civil Air Patrol would form part of each battalion.

The units would be created in peacetime and given training in same manner as military reserve units, under current plans. Members would be paid for active service and be entitled to disability and death benefits, under the Hopley proposal.

The plan advocates recruitment of police and firefighter reserves to be trained to serve in emergencies. They would replace regulars who would form part of the "mobile battalions" whenever called upon for duty.

Police Chief Robert Barrett recently proposed the establishment of such police reserves locally. He served as a consultant to Director of Civil Defense planning Russell J. Hopley during the study.

Two similar units—the Twenty-second and Twenty-third Civil Defense Mobile Reserve Battalions—would be set up in the Baltimore area, and another—the Twenty-fifth—would be established in the Richmond-Norfolk sector, under the plan.

Intensive Training Urged

Intensive training of such forces and other civil defense units is urged in the report. Proposal is made that a "control center" be established for the civil defense director—a protected "command post" for use in wartime.

Establishment of "rescue stations" with three squads of rescuers trained to take people out of demolished buildings is planned for every 50,000 population sector of each city.

While the proposed civil defense setup is planned in "stages," much importance is placed on the relatively early establishment of the section and block wardens.

"The success or failure of the civil defense program will depend considerably on the systemic organization of neighborhood leaders—the warden service," states the report. "Much reliance must be placed on them for assistance, information and coordination effort."

The report sets up specific duties for each block warden appointed under the program, such as dissemination of information, meeting of all persons in the block, gathering of records about people, vehicles, businesses, special skills, etc., maintenance of maps.

Nonpartisan Selection

"All members of the Warden Service," it states, "should be selected in a nonpartisan manner and as prescribed by local authorities. Loyalty, ability and trustworthiness should be major considerations.

"All should be as nearly as possible residents or employes of the community in which they serve. Each block or neighborhood warden should be well acquainted with its residents and be the type of person who can secure their cooperation.

"As nearly as possible, the Warden Service should be composed of men who are not subject to military service nor persons otherwise assigned, and women who are housewives or not employed away from their residence . . .

"All wardens should take a general training course in the organization and operation of civil defense."

Federalists Meet

Author Calls Rearmament Bad 'Betting'

Minneapolis, Nov. 13 (U.P.). James P. Warburg, former banker and author, warned tonight that the United States may be betting on a wrong-way horse by putting 15 billion dollars a year into the rearmament race as a sure way to clear the course for world peace.

Warburg told the second National Assembly of the United World Federalists that he would prefer to see that amount of money spent on the economic and social forces which could stamp out the breeding ground for Communism. At present, the United States is spending only six billion dollars on this method, he said.

"I believe that the best thing we could do for ourselves and for the world would be to reverse the amounts we are betting on each," he said. "The way to stop Communism is not by attempting to erect a fortified barrier against its encroachment, but by cutting the ground of mass discontent from under its feet."

"We are not going to have a war during the next five years, but neither are we going to reach complete agreement with the Soviet Union during that period," Warburg continued. "In other words, we may look forward to a period of more or less continuous crisis, during which we shall either see a gradual relaxation of tensions leading eventually to agreement, or a gradual exacerbation of tensions leading eventually to open conflict."

The answer, he asserted, is to organize a world government, with or without Russia, and make the rest of the world so strong that Russia cannot afford to remain aloof.

Seven Injured In Fort Fire

glass, and James Thorne, Oxon Hill Fire Co., broken thumb, all treated on the scene by crews of ambulances from District Heights, Bladensburg and Brentwood.

Extra Aid Dispatched

The three ambulances and volunteer fire companies from Oxon Hill, Silver Hill, Clinton, Morningside, District Heights and Accokeek were dispatched to the blaze by the Prince Georges County Fire Board when the Fort Washington Co. called for help.

The fire alarm was sounded after an unidentified woman telephoned Park Police Corp. John A. Hendricksen, resident officer at the fort, that she thought there was a grass fire near the warehouse. Hendricksen telephoned Chief Baber, who found that the building itself, not grass, was ablaze.

The big structure is in a clearing in woods across the river from George Washington's home at Mount Vernon. Heat was so intense when firemen arrived they had to play their hoses from the edge of the woods more than 50 feet away.

Pipes in Disrepair

The firemen laid three hose lines to hydrants as far as 2000 feet away. Heavy rains some time ago washed out pipes to two nearer hydrants and they never had been repaired. When the fire was out, only a section of brick fire wall, a twisted steam pipe and the chimney stood on the concrete foundation.

At the height of the blaze, the flames lit up the sky for miles around and attracted more than 1000 motorists who jammed the roads for some distance around.

Fort Washington had another spectacular fire on September 8, 1940, when a two-story, frame barracks building was destroyed and two others were damaged.

About 70 families live on the 354-acre, Government-owned reservation, 18 miles south of Washington. It was used as an officers' candidate school during the last war and, for a time afterward, as a rest home by the Veterans' Administration. It was turned over to the National Park Service in January, 1947, for operation as a Government housing project and as a historical site.

Established in 1645

The fort, on a bluff at the junction of the Potomac River and Piscataway Creek, was the site of an Indian stockade before the Maryland Assembly established a garrison there in 1645. George Washington later selected it as the site for a fort to guard the approach to the Capital. Major l'Enfant, who laid out the City of Washington, designed defenses which were started there in 1808.

Some years ago the fort proper was restored to its Civil War state, and it since has been an attraction for thousands of visitors annually.

UMT May Be Enacted in '49 If Asked, Rep. Durham Says

By the United Press

An informed Democratic Congressman last night said a universal military training program may be approved next year.

Representative Carl T. Durham of North Carolina, fourth-ranking Democrat on the House Armed Services Committee, told reporters UMT stands a better chance in a Democratic Congress than it did in the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress.

That is assuming, however, that President Truman will ask for the legislation again next year. The Administration has not yet announced whether it will ask the new Congress to approve the program.

UMT legislation was approved by the House Armed Services Committee under GOP leadership last year. But the House Rules Committee stopped it. Durham said this won't happen with Democrats in control.

Durham said he expects a close vote in the House when and if the issue gets to the floor.

Universal training had no strong Republican support in the House last year, except among GOP members of the Armed Services Committee. Democrats also were divided. But there appeared to be more support among Democrats than Republicans.

Durham said he also expects the next Congress to approve an excess profits tax on corporations, public housing legislation and some modifications in the Taft-Hartley labor law.

Water, Beach Stinger Craft Described

By the United Press

The Navy last night belatedly described its radio-controlled, one-way mission "stinger" vessels developed near the end of the war for softening up enemy shore and beach defenses.

The vessels were loaded to capacity with explosives and directed from offshore control craft toward beaches. They were used only once—during the invasion of southern France in 1944.

The stinger vessels ranged in size from small "X-craft," which carried 1200 pounds of explosives, to huge cargo ships, landing craft, and destroyer escorts capable of carrying up to 7000 tons of explosives.

The small X-craft, called "Salamanders," traveled 17 miles an hour in the water and 15 miles an hour on land. They could be directed from the water onto the beach and exploded by remote control among the enemy's land defenses.

The larger vessels were equipped with depth charges and television cameras to give the remote-control operator full view of the objective.

If the enemy seized the control ships, most of the drones would automatically destroy themselves. This was accomplished by equipping them with automatic detonators that would go off if the proper radio signal from the control craft was delayed a certain length of time.

Unique Swiss Craft Smuggles Under Water

Milan, Italy, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Frontier guards today smashed a 10-foot-pedal-propelled wooden "submarine" designed to travel at a depth of three feet. They then arrested the pilot, Porenzo Catotti, and charged him with smuggling cigarets from Switzerland to Italy under the surface of Lake Lugano.

Standley Sees No Immediate War With Reds

Manila, Nov. 13 (AP).—Admiral William H. Standley, United States wartime ambassador to Russia, said in an interview today he felt "there was no immediate threat of war because Russia is not prepared."

The admiral, on a business trip to the Far East, said he had an opportunity to travel freely in Russia and "from what I know of them Russian agriculture and industry have not been sufficiently geared for immediate war."

Neutral Palestine Region Is Ordered

Paris, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, United Nations mediator, today ordered the Israeli and Egyptian armies to establish a neutral no-man's land in Palestine's disputed Negev Desert. Presumably this plan would require the Jews to withdraw from recently won territory.

The plan, approved by the seven-nation Security Council committee, would set up "truce lines" to keep the warring forces apart. Since the Israeli army defeated the Egyptians during the brief Negev fighting, it would lose ground under Bunche's plan.

Although neither side formally accepted or rejected the plan, Israeli delegates here made it clear the Jews would be most reluctant to draw back from the land they have just acquired. The Security Council set up a special subcommittee to study possible punitive measures if the Jews refuse.

Today's order provides the first major test of Security Council authority in Palestine since mid-October, when the Jews seized control of most of the Negev.

At British behest a full Security Council meeting will be called Monday to consider issuing a withdrawal order for Galilee in northern Palestine, where the Jews also scored a military success.

The British contend the Israeli army violated the standing Security Council cease-fire order.

The council already has voted to ask Jewish troops to withdraw in the Negev to the positions they held before October 14, but so far there has been no compliance.

Help Assured

DP Group Is Organized In Md. Area

Displaced-persons committees have been organized in nearby Maryland counties and are already functioning, committee chairmen said yesterday.

Organization of the committees, set up to help administer the Displaced Persons Act, began six weeks ago. The committees receive applications from persons wishing to sponsor displaced persons coming to this country from overseas and upon approval forward them to the State committee.

In Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties more than 30 applications have been received. The application blanks may be obtained from the Maryland Department of Employment Security Offices in Hyattsville and Silver Spring and are limited to persons who can provide employment and lodging for the displaced immigrants.

In Arlington and Fairfax Counties the Virginia State Employment Service Office refers individuals interested in the plan directly to the Displaced Persons Commission in Washington.

Montgomery County committee members are: James D. King, Germantown, chairman; S. Gilbert Brown, Silver Spring; O. W. Anderson, Rockville; Wilson C. Poole, Sellman; Kenneth Windham, Gaithersburg.

In Prince Georges County: Harry W. Townshend, Mitchellville, chairman; Marguerite R. Miller, Hyattsville; P. E. Clark, Upper Marlboro; Rogers Naylor, Westwood; Harold C. Townshend, Upper Marlboro.

French Reds, Police Clash lowered them into a mine shaft with a supply of provisions.

The clash in Puteaux resulted from today's 24-hour general strike in Paris and the suburbs. The fight was an outgrowth of the arrest of Communist union members who gathered at a factory entrance this morning. During the afternoon some 500 workers marched on police headquarters to seek their release.

The marchers stopped two buses operating regularly despite the strike and sought to persuade the drivers to leave the job. Police squads arrived and the crowd began throwing paving stones. Police retaliated with pistols, wounding three. Others were reported injured by nightsticks.

Police said 17 of their own number were injured. All but six continued on duty.

The general strike, called by Communist unions as a protest against "police brutality" in handling an Armistice Day demonstration on the Champs Elysees in which 150 persons were injured, was far from the success its leaders had expected.

Jewish DP Camps In Germany Seen Eliminated by 1950

By the United Press

Dr. William Haber, adviser to the Army on Jewish affairs, reported yesterday that Jewish displaced persons camps in Germany should be eliminated by 1950.

Haber told Army Secretary Royall that the Jewish DP problem has entered the "liquidation stage." The refugees are leaving the United States zone of Germany at the rate of 4000 a month, he estimated.

About 15,000 have left the zone for Israel since May 15, 1948, he added. Haber said top Israeli immigration officials informed him that all Jewish DPs who want to settle in Israel will have the chance by September, 1949.

Haber estimated about 25,000 Jewish DPs are eligible to emigrate to the United States under current law.

today, emphasizing that if peace is coming, war is still here.

More than five hours of this warm Indian Summer Saturday were shattered by gunfire in southern Jerusalem, along the Bethlehem Road.

Volcanos of dirty gray smoke erupted among olive groves as Jew and Arab mortars dueled across the valley and the deafening crash of three-inchers trying to knock out an Israeli position in the next block was heard.

There was no more than 10 minutes all day long when the sound of gunfire could not be heard from some part of the Holy City. At times it was a single rifle shot from an outpost in the Judean Hills; at other times it was a loud explosion that caused shoppers to wince at an artillery burst in the Romena sector.

Most of the fighting was clearly visible from midtown vantage points.

Today's exchange began at midmorning when Egyptian artillery bombarded Ramat Rachel on the upper slope above the Bethlehem Road and the Israelis replied from Jerusalem with heavy mortars.

The communique disposed of today's fighting with: "Egyptian forces shelled the southern section of Jerusalem. We returned the fire."

U. N. Approves $30,000,000 Aid for Arabs

Paris, Nov. 13 (NYHT)—Provision of almost 30 million dollars of emergency relief aid to more than half a million destitute Arab refugees in the Middle East was approved without opposition today by the social committee of the United Nations General Assembly.

This action capped two weeks of subcommittee debate on a joint American-British-Belgian-Netherlands resolution indorsing acting Palestine Mediator Dr. Ralph J. Bunche's estimate that refugees from strife-torn Palestine will require at least $29,500,000 assistance during the next nine months. if "disaster is to be avoided."

The joint resolution, introduced October 29, authorizes U. N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie to advance immediately up to five million dollars from the U. N.'s working capital fund for use in relief activities in the Middle East.

The United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund has pledged six million dollars of aid to the Palestine homeless. Other funds are to come from voluntary contributions made in kind or in currency by member and non-member states of the U. N.

The total amount envisaged in the resolution is almost equal to the annual budget of the entire United Nations organization.

The resolution adopted today 'urges all states members of the United Nations to make as soon as possible voluntary contributions in kind or in funds sufficient to insure that the amount of supplies and funds required are obtained."

Contributions may be made in currencies other than the United States dollar, it is specifically provided. They are to be paid into a special fund established by the secretary-general and administered as a separate account.

Koo Puts China's Needs at Billion

Costello Predicts

Eire to Cut Last British Crown Tie

Dublin, Eire, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Eire will cut her last formal tie with the British crown and will have "complete independence" before Christmas, Prime Minister John A. Costello predicted today.

The Irish leader made his statement on the eve of the 150th anniversary of the Irish revolt of 1798 against the British, which Dublin will celebrate Sunday.

Costello told the United Press in an exclusive interview that complete independence will be accomplished by the repeal of the external relations act of 1936, last statute that binds Eire to the British King under the commonwealth.

Repeal of the act "will take the guns out of Irish politics," the Prime Minister said. "It will give us complete independence, with a republican form of government."

He added that the energies of the nation could then be concentrated on ending the "partition" between Eire and Northern Ireland, six counties of which are still part of the United Kingdom and are garrisoned by British troops.

A motion for repeal of the external relations act will be presented to the Dail Eirean (parliament) when it reconvenes Wednesday after a summer recess.

By The Associated Press

Chinese Ambassador Wellington Koo estimated yesterday China needs approximately one billion dollars in new American economic and military aid to wage an effective fight against the Communists.

Koo

Koo, also voiced hope the United States will make a general policy statement declaring the solidarity of the two countries to boost the morale of Chinese military forces and civilians.

(In Key West, Fla., President Truman's aides said he will not call a special aid-to-China session of Congress. They said the Administration will wait until the new Democratic-controlled Eighty-first Congress meets January 3 before taking action on China's appeal for more help.)

'Plots' Discovered

Martial Law Invoked in South Korea

Seoul, Korea, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—An official spokesman said today that martial law had been clamped on one-fourth of American-occupied South Korea to deal with reported new plots" against the government.

He described the move as a "precautionary measure," taken after "subversive" documents were captured by the Korean national army. The provinces of North and South Cholla were affected by the order.

At the same time it was disclosed that the army staff would be purged and reshuffled as a result of the preliminary investigation of the army revolt at Yosu and Sunchen last month.

Chief of Staff Che Byong Dok said many officers and enlisted men already had been imprisoned for investigation and the number to receive punishment "may exceed 2100."

The National Assembly approved President Syngman Rhee's program to recruit 50,000 reservists from seven organizations to double the size of the army. Under the program, all youth groups will be merged into a national defense youth corps with an expected strength of almost one million.

Chinese May Give Up Base

Communist casualties in the four days of heavy fighting around Suchow were raised to 50,000.

Raising some doubts of the government claims of more than holding its own against the Communist onslaught, one press report told of an unidentified village changing hands three times on Saturday alone.

Red Radio Claims

A Central News account also mentioned fighting on both sides of the Grand Canal. It was at that ancient waterway that the government was credited Friday with repulsing more than 20 Communist attempts to cross.

(The Communist Radio, heard in San Francisco, continued to claim successes. It said another army headquarters and two divisions of "encircled" government troops had been "wiped out" east of Suchow on Friday.

(The Communists also announced capture of Hulutao, south Manchurian resort which the government yesterday said it had abandoned.

(A further Communist broadcast reported capture of Gen. Liao Yaohsing in Manchuria. He was the commander of 12 divisions which the Communists said they had annihilated in October. The government had listed him as slain in battle, and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek praised his heroism.)

Airlift Threat Stirs Sharp British Reply

Berlin, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—The British military government warned the Russians tonight that any attempt to force down British airlift planes will be regarded "as a matter of utmost gravity."

The warning came in a letter from Maj. Gen. E. J. Westropp, chief of the British Combined Services Division, to Lieut. Gen. G. S. Lukyachenko, chief of staff of the Soviet military administration.

It was in reply to Lukyachenko's letter to both the British and American chiefs of staff Thursday in which the Russians warned that they would force down any airlift planes straying from the 20-mile-wide air corridors into this blockaded city.

The British reply was more sharply worded than the American answer, which said simply that the Russians would be held responsible for any accident caused by Soviet tactics.

Fog almost choked off the airlift again today. By night only 35 planes had taken off from American fields in western Germany. American planes were shuttled to British fields and flights to Berlin continued on a reduced scale.

The German News Agency Dena, meanwhile, reported new Russian troop concentrations. It quoted a high German official from Russian-occupied Thuringia as saying that four brigades of mechanized Soviet troops totaling 50,000 men had been stationed near Eisenach, 100 miles northeast of Frankfurt, at the border of the United States and Russian zones.

[The New York Herald Tribune news service said the increasing flow of reports that sizable Russian troop movements are taking place were discounted by American officials as reflecting the normal movements of Russian troops into winter quarters.]

King's Arbiter In Greek Crisis

CONSTANTINE TSALDARIS, the Greek Foreign Minister, has received a mandate from King Paul to settle the government's crisis

Red Arms Cut Plan Is Beaten

that Russia has 4 million men under arms three years after the end of the war.

Vishinsky declined to quote figures on Russia's armed strength, but said the demobilization decrees of 1945 and 1947 had ended the service of "all the contingents called to arms in wartime."

He said the Red army today consists only of the regular draft "classes" of 1926 and 1927—men born in those years and eligible for military duty.

"Is not this sufficiently accurate information about the Soviet armed forces?" he demanded.

He added that if McNeil and Osborn knew, as they claimed, that Russia had four million men under ams, "why are they asking questions?"

Vishinsky denied Osborn's charge that Russia wants world revolution. To prove his point, he quoted the 1936 interview of Soviet Premier Josef Stalin with Roy Howard, president of the Scripps-Howard newspapers. According to Vishinsky, Stalin told Howard that it was "nonsense" to believe that Russia is planning world revolution.

"The stories that we plan to 'export revolution' are a lot of nonsense," Stalin was quoted. "Every country will carry on a revolution if it wants it. If not, it will not. But to assert that we want to put through a revolution by interference in other nations' internal affairs is saying something that does not exist."

Vishinsky accused the United States of "working overtime to create this atmosphere of mistruct, of dread, of fear."

"Behind the back of your friend, France, you Americans have prepared to return the (German industrial) Ruhr to the people of Hitler," he charged. "You have violated international agreements by returning the Ruhr to the German aggressors . . .

He then accused Britain and the United States of "establishing western Germany as a counterbalance to the Soviet Union."

Vishinsky said the western powers had "put obstacles" in the way of a peace treaty for Japan by seeking a conference of all the powers that fought the Far Eastern nation rather than merely a meeting of the Big Four Foreign Ministers.

He said Osborn's statement yesterday was "an example of psychological preparation for attacks on the Soviet Union."

To 4 Big Powers

Joint Plea For Berlin Settlement

Paris, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Text of the joint letter requesting direct settlement of the Berlin crisis, which was sent today to the United Nations delegations of the United States, Britain, France and Russia by U. N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie and U. N. General Assembly President H. V. Evatt:

WE HAVE THE honor to address this communication to the chairman of the delegations of powers signatory to the Moscow agreements of 24th December, 1945, and to request that it be transmitted to the respective chiefs of government for their urgent consideration.

On Wednesday, 3rd November, 1948, the General Assembly of the United Nations, sitting in plenary sessions at Paris, unanimously adopted "an appeal to the great powers to renew their efforts to compose their differences and establish a lasting peace." In this resolution the Generay Assembly declared that disagreement between the great powers "in a matter of vital importance to all the United Nations is at the present time the cause of deepest anxiety among all the peoples of the world . . ." And that "the United Nations in performance of its most sacred mission is to afford its assistance and cooperation in settlement of a situation, continuation of which involved grave dangers for international peace."

"The resolution then recommends "the powers signatory to the Moscow agreements of 24th December, 1945, and powers which subsequently accede thereto, to redouble their efforts in a spirit of solidarity and mutual understanding to secure in the briefest possible time final settlement of the war and conclusion of all peace settlements."

REPRESENTATIVES of all powers signatory to the Moscow agreements spoke in unqualified support of this resolution and voted for it. They have accepted the recommendation and the world rightly expects them to take active steps toward carrying it out without delay.

We believe the first step is to resolve the Berlin question. This case still is pending before the Security Council. We believe the history of Security Council consideration of this case demonstrates that it can be solved.

Every day the deadlock over Berlin continues, the danger to the peace and security of all nations continued undiminished. Fear of another war is crippling the effort of all nations to repair the damage of the last war and return once more to the ways of peace.

The work of the General Assembly and of the United Nations as a whole in every field of its endeavor is being delayed and undermined.

It is within the power of the leaders of the great nations to which this communication is addressed to end this danger to the peace.

WE THEREFORE respectfully urge upon the governments of France, the U. S. S. R., the United Kingdom and the United States, signatories of the Moscow declaration, the desirability of immediate conversations and of taking all other necessary steps toward solution of the Berlin question, thus opening the way to prompt resumption of negotiations for conclusion of remaining peace settlements for Germany, Austria and Japan.

We also believe that the great powers should lend their full and active support to efforts at mediation of the Berlin dispute by the president of the Security Council (Juan A. Bramuglia of Argentina).

For ourselves we stand ready to lend all further assistance, such as the currency study now being made by the secretary-general, as may seem most helpful to the great powers in solution of the problem.

We await an early reply to this communication in order that the members of the United Nations now assembled here in Paris may be informed of the progress in implementation of the General Assembly's unanimous appeal "to the great powers to renew their efforts to compose their differences and establish a lasting peace."

peace treaties with Germany, Austria and Japan.

Western power delegates reacted cautiously to tne letter, saying it was up to higher quarters to make any statement.

British and American delegates said privately the Western Powers would not negotiate on Berlin under pressure of the Russian blockade.

Secretary of State Marshall immediately sent the letter to Washington. It was expected here it would be forwarded to President Truman on vacation at Key West, Fla.

An American delegation spokesman said the reply will be given by Marshall after consultation with Mr. Truman and with Britain and France.

Western Comments

Western delegates made these points concerning the letter:

There is some danger of too many mediators being involved, the note seems to suggest that disagreement over Berlin's currency is the root of the trouble whereas it is the blockade, and it tends to leave out of account that the case is still before the Security Council.

Juan Bramuglia of Argentina, who has led the six neutrals of the Security Council in efforts to negotiate a compromise, said he had declined signing the Lie-Evatt letter because it emanated from the General Assembly and had no connection with the Council.

Nevertheless, he praised the move, saying it "vigorously ratifies" efforts made in the Council.

He continued his own efforts, talking with the six neutral council members today and arranging to see them again Sunday.

French sources said there would be no immediate statement from their government. The Lie-Evatt letter, they commented, seemed addressed more to Stalin than to the other three executives. Otherwise, they said, it added little or nothing new to the Berlin situation and seemed at first glance to be just a sort of "moral gesture."

The Russians merely said it would have to be studied.

Lie-Evatt Intervention Is Victory for Russia

Paris, Nov. 13 (NYHT).—Russia scored a definite victory today with the intervention into the Berlin dispute of Trygve Lie and Dr. Evatt.

Their communication not only appeared to be contrary to the sense of a recent Security Council resolution but appeared to support a major argument advanced by Andrei Y. Vishinsky, chief Russian delegate.

Vague on Blockade

In reply to the Soviet demand for direct negotiation of the conflict they called for "immediate conversations." In reply to a western demand that the land blockade of the city first be lifted, they spoke only vaguely "of taking all other necessary steps toward the solution of the Berlin question."

Thus, the Russian delegation, perhaps because of the efforts of Vishinsky, has escaped neatly from whatever onus was attached to its refusal to acknowledge the competence of the United Nations to deal with the problem. It also has been freed from whatever criticism was leveled against it for its October 25 veto of another solution that was backed by 9 of the 11 members of the Security Council.

For Four Powers Only

Vishinsky's case against action by the United Nations was based on the argument the matter was one for four-power discussion only. His veto was applied because the Security Council called for an end to the blockade prior to negotiation whereas he had demanded negotiation while the blockade was in force.

The Lie-Evatt plan, therefore, falls easily within the framework of the Soviet position and to this extent it must be listed to the diplomatic credit of the Russian delegate.

By the same token it must be recorded as a defeat for the Western delegations who brought the dispute to the Security Council precisely because they were determined not to negotiate under the duress of the blockade.

Should Go to Stalin Alone, Bloom Says

The State Department wouldn't comment yesterday on an appeal by United Nations officials for a big-four meeting on the Berlin crisis. But the man who probably will be chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee in the next Congress said:

"What is the use of asking us to get on this merry-go-round again?"

The appeal, Representative Sol Bloom (D., N. Y.) said, should be addressed to Soviet Premier Josef Stalin "alone, because he is the man who is barring the road to successful negotiation of the Berlin crisis."

A Republican Congressman, Representative Walter Judd, Minnesota, said the appeal indicated "wishful thinking" by Lie and Evatt.

"It is a refusal to face the fact that the Soviet Union does not want a solution," Judd said. "The Soviet objective is confusion, and the world should realize it by now."

Blackett Atom Ideas Attacked

Lake Success, Nov. 13 (NYHT). So much Soviet praise is being heaped on the atomic control views of Britain's lastest Nobel prize-winning physicist, Patrick M. S. Blackett, that the British United Nations delegation has sent other delegations a denunciatory analysis of Professor Blackett's ideas.

The 3500-word British critique was disclosed today to have been prepared by Richard T. G Miles, delegation political adviser and a leading drafter of the U.N. Atomic Energy Commission's majority control plan. The majority plan won a 40-nation indorsement last week in the assembly—the same day Professor Blackett won his Nobel prize.

Miles' statement declared that "perhaps Professor Blackett is not actually a fellow traveler, but he seems to represent that myopic viewpoint which assumes that the intentions of the western powers are dishonorable, while those of Russia are entirely just."

Member of Britain's wartime advisory committee on atomic energy, Professor Blackett, in his new book, "The Military and Political Consequences of Atomic Energy," contended the majority plan, initiated by Bernard M. Baruch of the United States, was "put across" only because of hysteria. He held Russia justified in rejecting it, and during the current General Assembly in Paris Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky has repeatedly lauded the Blackett book.

Attlee Attacked In Churchill Note

London, Nov. 13 (AP).—Winston Churchill attacked Prime Minister Attlee today for refusing to name a bipartisan delegation to the committee which will seek ways to strengthen western European unity.

Churchill delivered his attack in a letter to the Prime Minister published at the same time the government released a letter in which Attlee turned down demands for Conservative representation on the committee.

The committee is being set up by Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg of the western European union to draft plans for expanding European unity.

Point of Responsibility

Attlee said he was naming only members of the Labor Party to the committee because they are "to be responsible to the government" which in Britain consists of members of the majority party.

Churchill expressed fear the Labor government's attitude "will exercise a depressing effect upon the movemen for European unity" and added:

"There will be lively disappointment in the United States at the narrow and partisan view which your letter seems to indicate."

He charged Attlee was trying to make the cause of western unity "a monopoly of the British Socialist (Labor) Party.

Long-Standing Dispute

Today's exchange reflected the long-standing disagreement between the wartime Prime Minister, Conservative Party leader, and the present Labor government over the nature of the western European union.

Churchill's "United Europe" movement has proposed a European assembly of representatives of various political parties elected by parliaments of the member countries.

Attlee has favored a smaller organization of representatives responsibile to the various governments. Attlee pointed out that the government of France is a coalition, hence its delegation will contain representatives of the various parties.

Harvard Teaches Mobilized Economy

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 13 (AP).—An economic mobilization course opened today at Harvard University attended by more than 200 reserve officers of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

The two-week course is under the auspices of the Industrial College of the Armed Forces. Dr. Donald K. David, Harvard business school dean, said the courses help "the businessman understand the problems of the military, and the military to understand business and industry."

T. S. Eliot to Speak On Influence of Poe

T. S. Eliot, recently awarded the 1948 Nobel Prize in literature, will speak on "Edgar Poe and His Influence in France" at 8:30 p. m. Friday, in the Coolidge Auditorium under the sponsorship of the Library of Congress. Eliot is now associated with the library as a Fellow in American Letters.

Auto Makers Celebrate 100 Millionth Car

Detroit, Nov. 14 (U.P.).—The automobile industry today paused to celebrate the production of the 100,000,000th car built since the first gas buggies were born 48 years ago in a cluster of Detroit alley shops.

Plagued by steel shortages, high prices and labor conflicts, the business nevertheless looked forward to 1948 as one of the best production years in its turbulent history.

An unprecedented demand for postwar cars has spurred production lines on so that the Automobile Manufacturers Association estimates that more than five million vehicles will be built this year, second only to the all-time high of 5,358,000 cars produced in 1929.

The AMA confessed that it didn't know exactly where or when the historic car rolled off assembly lines, but it was somewhere in one of 112 plants scattered over 77 cities in 24 States.

Predicting a rosy future for the still-growing business, the AMA speculated that the second 100 million vehicles will be produced in less than half the time required to build the first 100 million.

The AMA said that there are 40 million United States built cars still operating in this country, one for every four persons, as compared to the 15,500,000 still rolling in other countries out of the 24 million cars produced in foreign plants.

Today's cars are built to last about 100,000 miles—four times as long as cars produced 25 years ago, when the rate of production was not half the present high-speed assembly line process.

Today 56 firms producing 21 makes of passenger cars turn out about 30 new cars and 10 trucks every minute of the working day.

In a special report to its members, the AMA credited Charles E. and J. Frank Duryea with building the first gasoline-powered auto in the United States at Springfield, Mass., in 1893.

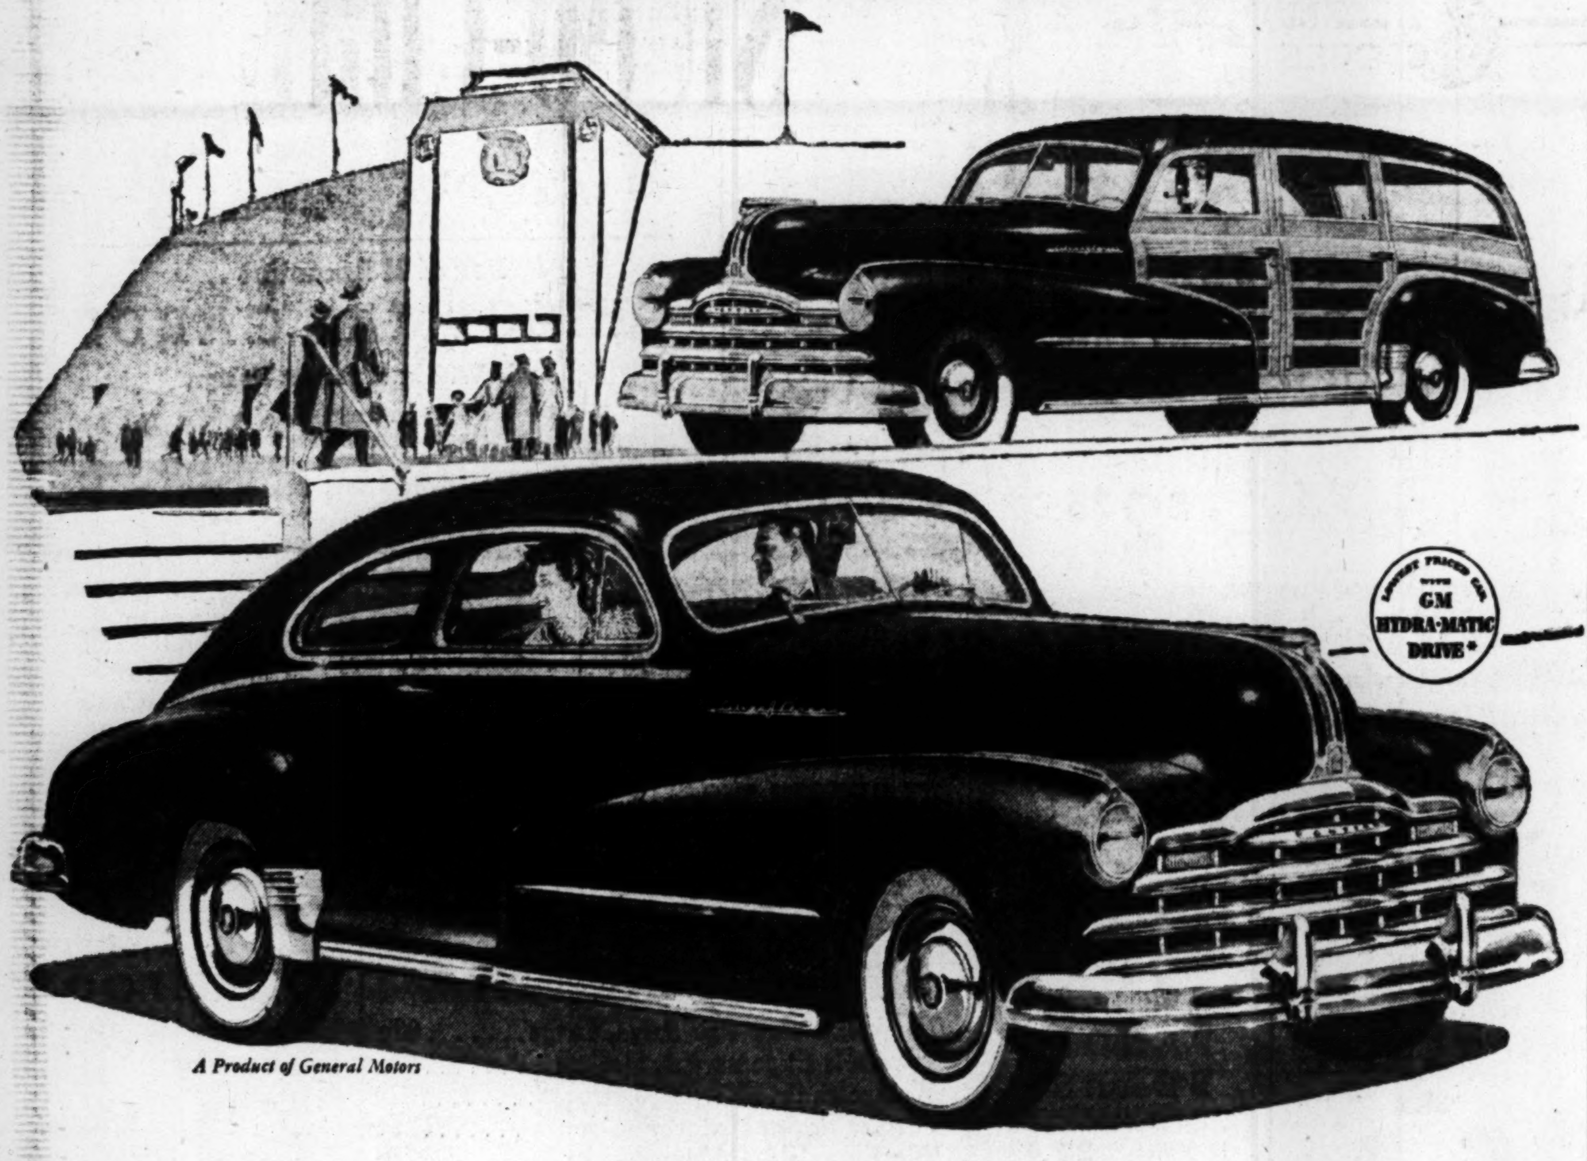
PONTIAC



LOWEST PRICED CAR WITH GM HYDRA-MATIC DRIVE*

A Product of General Motors

Above everything else . . a good car!

A FINE CAR MADE EVEN FINER

New Silver Streak Design • Unisteel Body by Fisher • No-Draft Ventilation • Shockproof Knee-Action • Triple-Cushioned Ride • Smooth, Economical 6 and 8 Cylinder L-Head Engines • Vacuumatic Spark Control • Scotch-Mist Quick Warm-Up Manifold • Full-Pressure Metered-Flow Lubrication • Multi-Seal Hydraulic Brakes • Gaselector • Tru-Arc Safety Steering

In striving to design and build a motor car that will merit the increasing goodwill of the American public—Pontiac has one manufacturing principle which takes precedence over all others:

Pontiac must always be a good car!

There is no other motor car quality which people value so much as goodness. That's why Pontiac engineers and production specialists spend so much time and energy and money to insure Pontiac quality. Pontiac cars must last long—and they must last well—and they must function through the years with a minimum of upkeep cost.

Owners have been quick to appreciate this. Some of the testimonials they send to the factory, and to Pontiac dealers, tell of performance feats that seem almost impossible of attainment.

Pontiac has many other outstanding virtues, of course. It is a wonderful performer. It is delightfully comfortable and easy to handle. It is a great beauty, and unusually distinctive in appearance.

But its greatest virtue is goodness. This year, or any year, you just can't beat it for faithful, dependable performance.

Livestock Prices Take Sharp Drop

Chicago, Nov. 13 (AP).—Hogs, cattle and sheep were quoted at substantially lower prices in the livestock market today than a week ago. A heavy outpouring of meat animals from the country met a limited demand all week.

Hogs tumbled $2 to $3 for the week in what the Agriculture Department described as "the most severe decline of the current marketing season." Prices ended at the lowest point for November since 1945 with the best grade bringing $22.85 a hundred pounds.

In the cattle section, steers suffered the widest losses, dropping 50 cents to $2 a hundred pounds. Lambs fell $1 to $1.25.

Farmers sent large numbers of livestock to 12 major markets. The Agriculture Department estimated cattle receipts at 265,000 head against 205,000 in the previous week, hogs 344,000 against 286,000 and sheep 192,000 against 172,000.

In Grange Talk

Farm Price Aids to Stay, Brannan Says

Portland, Me., Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Federal price support and soil conservation programs will be continued, Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan assured members of the National Grange today.

Addressing the organization's eighty-second annual meeting, Brannan said these programs would help assure America of permanent farm prosperity by "keeping the land productive and teaching people how to live with abundance.

"By assuring producers against loss, price supports have certainly brought much greater abundance," he said. "This, of course, is the most important restraint that can be put on inflation."

Brannan said the past few years "have brought the greatest prosperity American agriculture has ever enjoyed and he suggested a five-point program to "prevent the pendulum from swinging as far in the other direction as it has in the past."

The program:

1. Maintenance of full employment and good wages, which he said was essential to farm and city balance.
2. An adequate foreign market.
3. Extension of Government programs to take up the slack of commodities in temporary surplus.
4. Adequate land, water and forest conservation.
5. Programs to make agriculture more efficient and enable rural populations to share equally in modern conveniences and services.

To illustrate the last point, Brannan said a big electrification job still remains ahead although about 70 per cent of American farms now have electric power as compared with about 11 per cent in 1935 when the Rural Electrification Administration came into being.

Columbus Main Breaks, Cutting Water Supply

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 13 (AP).—Water trickled and gurgled slowly through the pipes of this city's water system today, after a broken main cut off service throughout Columbus.

City water officials restored limited service about 9:30 a. m. (E.S.T.). The break was by-passed with smaller lines.

The break produced the Ohio capital's worst water emergency since the 1913 flood. The area's 500,000 citizens must get along with less water for two days until the broken main can be repaired.

line" permits since they cost only $1, compared to State license fees of $50, and are issued on satisfactory evidence of holding a license without further examinations and interviews, as are often required in license-granting procedures.

Members of the commission, in addition to Dr. Ruhland, are Commissioner John Russell Young, U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay, Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning and the U. S. Commissioner of Education, who has not yet been appointed.

Issue to Be Studied

Dr. Guy Horsley of Richmond, chairman of the Virginia State Board of Medical Examiners, said last night that his board will consider the matter at a meeting December 1 in Richmond.

He declared that, until recently, relations between health officias in the District and Virginia have been "most cordial," and said he had received no reports on the denial of District permits to nearby Virginia physicians.

District officials have asked the board to consider issuance of "borderline" certificates to District doctors, but this would require additional legislation, he reported. He said the proposal will be discussed at the December meeting.

Oxford Confers Degree On Mrs. Roosevelt

Oxford, England, Nov. 13 (AP).—Oxford University awarded the honorary degree of doctor of civil law to Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt today.

Lord Halifax, chancellor of the university and wartime British Ambassador to the United States, conferred the degree. He described Mrs. Roosevelt as "a pillar of world affairs and a visitor most dear to British hearts."

Two Dealers Summoned

Room 1302, New House Office Building. The names of 21 other witnesses called for that session were not divulged yesterday.

Summoned for the subcommittee's Tuesday session, at the same hour, were William E. Adlung, president, and George E. Adlung, manager, of the New York Avenue Motor Co., with other witnesses not identified.

The subpenaed auto dealers declined to comment yesterday on the subcommittee action.

No charges have been made public against the two dealers whose representatives have been called to testify. John T. M. Reddan, counsel for the subcommittee, has said previously that the subpena power would be used if necessary to get desired data from a "few" dealers refusing to give information to the House group.

Macy said that since the Kearney concern is an authorized Oldsmobile dealer and the New York avenue firm is an authorized Hudson dealer, the General Motors Corp. and the Hudson Motor Car Co. also have been requested to send representatives.

The House group has been informed that Harry Banks, assistant general sales manager of General Motors, and N. K. Vanderzee, sales manager for the Hudson Motor Co., would attend the hearing. Chatham T. Nottingham, District license superintendent, who has made investigations of sales and financing practices of local used car dealers, has also signified he would be present.

Also invited were the president of the National Automobile Dealers Association, Ben T. Wright, who is not in Washington and is not expected to attend, and Earle O. Baker, president of the Washington Automotive Trade Association.

The subcommittee has received more than 200 complaints against dealers from local residents, and besides checking these complaints, has sent out questionnaires to some 20 dealers on their sales practices.

Main complaints have charged undervaluation of trade-in cars, refusal of dealers to sell new cars without trade-ins and holding of deposits too long.

Factions to Clash At CIO Convention

By The Associated Press

The right and left wings of the CIO may clash more openly than ever before at the CIO convention which is about to start in Portland, Oreg.

But the organization probably won't split in two. The left wing, which has been losing strength for two years and suffered a heavy blow in the election showing of Henry Wallace, probably will get a convention spanking, but stay in the organization.

That is the opinion held by many observers of CIO politics, as of today. The picture could change, however.

Board Meets Wednesday

The 51-man CIO executive board starts sessions in Portland Wednesday. The convention opens Monday, November 22.

The term "right wing" in the CIO does not mean "conservative." It simply means "actively anti-Communist."

Not all "left-wingers" are Communists, but they frequently go along with Communist programs. They don't go in for attacking Communists.

Left-wing leaders in CIO unions have fought against the Marshall Plan, and they supported Wallace for President. In both instances they departed from CIO policy. CIO President Philip Murray and a heavy majority of CIO union leaders favor the Marshall Plan, and they supported President Truman for reelection.

"Third Party" Out

Politics is a subject that is sure to be discussed at the convention with a great deal of delight and back slapping.

If the Democrats had lost the election there might have been a debate over whether to support the formation of a new third party. Now the third-party idea—including plans of the United Auto Workers to form one after the election—seems likely to be quietly junked. The CIO is pretty happy in the Democratic Party just now.

'Sham' Charged

CIO Attacks Rent Control Chief Woods

By the United Press

The CIO last night went after the scalp of Rent Director Tighe E. Woods. It said Woods is fighting only a "sham battle" for tighter rent controls.

Director Leo Goodman of the union's housing committee charged in a statement that Woods had failed to comply with a provision in the rent law requiring "representative" local rent boards.

Goodman blamed Woods specifically for a 20 per cent rent boost ordered yesterday by the Emergency Court of Appeals for Oklahoma City. He said the Oklahoma City Rent Board, which proposed the boost, is weighted with property interests.

Woods replied that to the best of his knowledge the Oklahoma City board is "in balance." Of charges that he is not sympathetic to rent control he said:

"During the week I have been criticized now by both sides. To me that means I must be going down the middle. I am sure that is where the American people want me to go."

Goodman said the CIO will "take every possible step" to block the increase ordered by the court in Oklahoma City.

4 Killed, 5 Hurt As Fire Engine, Car Crash, Burn

Newark, N. J., Nov. 13 (U.P.). Four men were killed and five were injured today when a fire engine racing to a fire collided with an automobile and burst into flames at a busy intersection.

The fire to which the truck was going was a small one in a dry cleaning plant and was extinguished without difficulty.

The fire truck was rounding a corner by its station house when the automobile crashed into its side. Three passengers were trapped in the car and burned to death when the gas tank of the fire engine exploded. Fire Capt. William Mangner, 37, died later of burns.

The other dead were Kenneth Reilly, Newark; David Milbauer, New York, and Francis Granito, Lynbrook, L. I.

Four firemen were burned seriously by flaming gasoline, and a fourth passenger in the automobile was injured.

Truman and Family Tour Dry Tortugas

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Key West, Fla., Nov. 13.—President Truman took his family and his friends and aides on an all-day cruise aboard the yacht Williamsburg today.

The party stopped at Fort Jefferson on the Dry Tortugas, in the Gulf of Mexico, 68 miles west of Key West.

Having been there before, Mr. Truman was able to play guide for the First Lady, Miss Margaret Truman and other sightseers.

It was at Fort Jefferson that Dr. Samuel A. Mudd, Maryland physician, performed an act of heroism that won him a pardon from President Andrew Johnson in 1869.

Yellow Fever Hero

Dr. Mudd set the broken leg of Fugitive John Wilkes Booth, assassin of President Lincoln. He was sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor, and arrived at Fort Jefferson July 24, 1865.

A major epidemic of yellow fever struck the island prison in 1867, and one of the first to be struck down was Maj. Joseph Sim Smith, the post surgeon. Dr. Mudd, with the help of Dr. D. W. Whitehurst of Key West, worked day and night to arrest the fever scourge. About 300 men were stationed at the fort and 270 of this number were stricken.

President Truman, a keen student of American history, also was able to tell his party today why the islands were fortified by the United States in 1846. The American strategists of that day, remembering Andrew Jackson's fight with the British at New Orleans, felt that a base on the islands would make it possible to protect shipping in the Gulf of Mexico and also head off an invasion of the Gulf Coast.

Clamps Lid on News

Mr. Truman clamped a "lid" on all news today as he set forth on his cruise.

As a matter of fact, he has been trying to discourage anything that smacked of news from the time of his arrival here.

He has had to sign some official papers and look over official documents, such as a Thanksgiving Day proclamation. But the pouches that have been coming down here on a courier plane have been loaded, for the most part, with letters of congratulation on his victory of November 2.

So far as is known, Mr. Truman has called no formal meeting with his advisers to consider such matters as Cabinet replacements.

President Proclaims Nov. 25 Thanksgiving

President Truman yesterday proclaimed Thursday, November 25, as Thanksgiving Day. He urged citizens to "render generous assistance to the hungry and homeless in other lands, thus renewing our devotion to the cause of good-will among men."

The President asked divine guidance in helping to safeguard the "right to live in freedom and peace."

Newsmen With Truman Have Holiday in Cuba

Havana, Cuba, Nov. 13 (AP). — Newsmen and photographers who cover the White House in Washington flew to Havana on a holiday today.

During the afternoon, there was a special program of horse races at Oriental Park in their honor. Featured was the "President Harry S. Truman" race. Other races were dedicated to Ernest B. Vaccaro, AP staff correspondent and head of the White House Correspondents Association; Jack Doherty of the New York Daily Neys; Thomas Reynolds of the Chicago Sun-Times; Bryson Rash of American Broadcasting Co.; Edward T. Folliard of The Washington Post and Joe Fox of the Washington Star.

Congress Expected to Delay Civil Rights Issue Showdown

By the United Press

Democrats indicated last night that they will put off a showdown fight on civil rights in the new Congress until most of the remainder of President Truman's legislative program is out of the way.

Administration leaders want to stretch out the expected Truman-Congress honeymoon as long as ossible.

Senators on both sides of the civil rights issue hope that by the time that they get around to it Northern and Southern Democrats will have reached a compromise to avert a bitter, party-splitting fight.

Some Southerners already have put out feelers for a civil rights truce. They were offering to hold off a filibuster against antipoll-tax and antilynching bills if President Truman will drop, or at least drastically soften, demands for fair employment practices legislation.

If compromise efforts fail, the showdown will be in the Senate, where Southerners can filibuster. House rules do not permit filibusters.

There apparently is enough support in both houses to pass civil rights bills and the Southerners' only chance to stop them will be to talk them to death in the Senate.

An influential Democrat conceded that Mr. Truman may insist that congressional administration leaders use every means possible to put through his entire civil rights program.

Vice President-elect Alben A. Barkley recently gave what might have been a tipoff that a civil rights compromise is in the works.

He said he expected Administration forces to carry out President Truman's campaign promises on a civil rights program. But when asked if Administration plans call for breaking a Senate filibuster, he said that bridge will be crossed when Administration leaders come to it. And, he added, they may not come to it.

Raid Protest Goes Unheard

Three members of the Civil Rights Congress called at police headquarters yesterday to protest a police raid on an interracial private party here October 3, but were denied an audience by Police Chief Robert J. Barrett.

Barrett send word to the representatives of the CRC, which has been labeled a Communist-controlled oroganization by Attorney General Tom C. Clark, that if they presented affidavits they would be entitled to a hearing before the new civilian trial board.

He said that otherwise he could not discuss the case until there was a final disposition made.

The CRC has alleged "improper" conduct on the part of Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the vice squad, and other policemen during the raid.

Loring Black Sued By Wife for $38,668

Loring Black, former Congressman from New York and now residing at the Shoreham Hotel, was sued by his estranged wife yesterday for $33,668 stated to be due under separation agreements.

The wife, Beatrice E. Black of Brooklyn, N. Y., said in her District Court suit that the money is due under separation agreements signed in 1938 and 1939. Her attorney is Robert E. Lynch.

Sen. Lucas Suggests Balcony Inaugural

Hawaiian 'Dems' Seeks His Ouster

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

GOV. INGRAM M. STAINBACK, of the Territory of Hawaii, yesterday mapped a two-pronged fight against Democratic leaders who are demanding his ouster. The party's Territorial Central Committee Friday night approved a resolution calling on President Truman to fire Stainback. It charged Stainback cold-shouldered the party during the recent presidential campaign.

Although President Truman hasn't named the head man for the January 20 inauguration ceremonies, there already has been at least one proposal as to what that man can do in his job.

It came yesterday from Senator Scott Lucas (D., Ill.), who proposed that the ceremonies be held on the "Truman family balcony" at the White House, and that expensive and elaborate preparations already under way for ceremonies at the traditional place—in front of the Capitol—be discontinued.

Senator Lucas got what was described as a "very cool reception" from White House officials on his suggestion.

Capitol Architect David Lynn, who has been supervising construction of the inaugural platform in front of the Capitol, said last night he had "no expression whatever to make" on Senator Lucas's suggestion. He explained that the platform and grandstands at the Capitol are expected to be completed by December 15.

While local Democrats and the District Commissioners have stated they hope the President will name the general inauguration chairman soon, because of the details to be handled, Mr. Truman has given no indication as to when the appointment will be announced. Local Democrats believe Melvin D. Hildreth, Washington attorney and party stalwart, has a good chance for the job.

Meanwhile, Senate President Arthur H. Vandenberg yesterday announced revision in the Senate membership of the Joint Congressional Committee handling inauguration arrangements.

Senator Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.) and Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) were named to replace Senator Alben W. Barkley—Vice President-elect, and Senator C. Wayland Brooks (R., Ill.), who was defeated for reelection.

Similar revision of the House of Representatives group is expected to be made by Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr.

A Weak, Run-Down Feeling Is Often A Warning

That The Red-Blood Is Getting Low

If you do not feel like your real self, do not have the urge to be up and doing, why not check-up on your blood strength? Look at the palms of your hands, your fingernails, your lips, the lobes of your ears—are they pale and off color?

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Anteaters to Feast On Wild Duck Tuesday

The Anteaters Association, a group of local sportsmen who enjoy such esoteric delicacies as bear, buffalo and venison, will hold the first of five weekly luncheon meetings Tuesday in the restaurant at the Rock Creek Park Zoo.

The hungry club members, including Dr. William Mann of the Zoo will spend from 11:3 . m. to 3 p. m. devouring a meal featuring wild mallard duck, marinated for several days in red wine and then roasted with special herbs by Chef Russell Deremer. The dinner costs $3 a plate, and there is enough duck for only 320 of the club's 1200 members.

Godfrey Can't Afford to Let Band Snicker

By The Associated Press

Anybody who wants to can laugh at radio Comedian Arthur Godfrey's jokes—except the musicians on his program.

He won't let them, he says, because it costs too much under union rules.

Godfrey was asked yesterday to explain why he kept telling his musicians Friday night they could not laugh.

Under union rules, Godfrey said, if the musicians laugh or sing, they will come under the American Federation of Radio Artists (AFRA), instead of just the AFL Musicians Union.

And that, Godfrey said, would cost him extra nearly $3000 in weekly pay for that bit of laughter or singing.

"For three years," the comedian said, "the six boys in my band and I have been having all kinds of fun. They'd sing choruses and we'd kid each other.

"Then all of a sudden AFRA begins to squawk and says they can't do it. If they open their mouths to sing they come under AFRA's jurisdiction. That adds the extra salary."

George Heller, national executive secretary of AFRA, said in New York:

"We feel that if musicians sing on a program they should be paid the AFRA scale for singers. There is a good deal of unemployment among singers and the ruling is for their protection."

He said nothing about any ban on laughing.

Heller said there was no intention of singling out Godfrey's program.

"The rule applies to all programs where a similar situation exists," he added.

As for the ribbing Godfrey gave the union ruling on his program last night, Heller said:

"If he wants to poke fun at a legitimate union ruling that will protect singers that's his privilege."

Godfrey belongs to four unions—two musicians locals in Washington and New York, plus Equity and AFRA.

'Major Force'

His Party Beat Dewey, Wallace Says

Chicago, Nov. 13 (AP).—Henry A. Wallace said today the Progressive Party "was the chief moving force" in the Republican defeat Election Day and "is far more important right now than it ever was."

The Progressive presidential nominee said he has "just begun to fight" and "we already demonstrated our might as an 'influence' party."

In his first major speech since the election, an address to a planning meeting of third party leaders, Wallace said the Progressives should:

1. Use "counter pressure" in the State Legislatures.
2. "Get in a financial position to use the radio extensively."
3. "Hold political action schools in every State and community."
4. Oppose "the backswing of reaction" in Congress by "electing our own candidates" in 1952 and doing more than "holding meetings and sending telegrams and delegations to Washington."
5. "Give President Truman in his own right the opportunity to demonstrate whether or not he is prepared to change the cold war policy. It certainly will not be many weeks before we know."

Wallace and Senator Glen Taylor of Idaho, his vice presidential running mate, met with party chiefs in closed-door sessions to map the party's future. C. B. Baldwin, party secretary, will outline the plan late today. Discussions will continue through Sunday.

Wallace said "it was our all-out fight for the Progressive cause which was the chief moving force in causing the American people to reverse their fatally reactionary 1946 trend" on November 2.

House Small Business Group Calls Hearings

The House Committee on Small Business announced yesterday that hearings will begin Monday on allegedly monopolistic and unfair trade practices turned up in its investigations this year.

Heading the list of witnesses will be Thurman Arnold, former Government trust buster, who will present recommendations for strengthening the Nation's antitrust laws.

Others will include Arne C. Wiprud, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the antitrust division; Frank A. Fetter, Princeton University professor; Walter Wooden, chief trial counsel of the Federal Trade Commission, and Thomas Hewes, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Representative Patman (D., Tex.), creator of the committee, and a coauthor of the Robinson-Patman Act to protect small business, announced the committee will continue its work in the next Congress.

He was the group's first chairman, from 1941 until January, 1947, and will succeed the present chairman, Representative Ploeser (R., Mo.) when the House returns to Democratic control in January. Ploeser was defeated for reelection.

The hearings, expected to last most of the week, are the climax of others in a dozen Midwest cities, the committee said. Government officials have been invited to hear what the committee has found out about competitive conditions facing small business throughout the country.

MEET THE

Star Performer for '49!

You're invited to drive the New Hudson—the car that's nimble and rugged beyond anything you've known before!

"The modern design for '49"

HUDSON FLOORS are recessed down within the frame (as shown above), seats are lowered, so you get ample head room in this car with the new lower center of gravity.

YOU RIDE DOWN within a base frame (as shown to the left), and rear seats are positioned ahead of the rear wheels so that full body width becomes available for wonderfully roomy seats. Box-section steel girders completely encircle and protect the passenger compartment.

TRY AUTOMATIC GEAR SHIFTING in forward speeds as provided by Hudson's Drive-Master transmission—by far the easiest of all ways to drive. You can accelerate as long and as fast as you like in pick-up gear, then lift your toe momentarily, and you're in high. The shift into high comes only when you are ready! Button control on the instrument panel provides instant change to conventional driving if ever desired. Drive-Master transmission is optional on all New Hudsons a small extra cost.

The only car you step down into

NEW Hudson

Come in, try Hudson with the all-new, high-compression Super-Six engine (the most powerful American six built today) or the masterful Super-Eight. Both provide wonderfully alert and sustained power for a new type of motor car with an exclusive "step-down" principle of design that puts it 'way ahead in roadability, comfort and safety!

Millions say the New Hudson is the reigning beauty in the automobile parade—but you can't really know this great car until you drive it—and you're invited to do just that—now—at the nearest Hudson dealer's.

From the moment you touch the starter button, you know you have hold of something thrilling; a car so alive, so eager to do your bidding that it belongs in your scheme of things!

Hudson, with the new, 121 h.p., high-compression Super-Six engine or the masterful Super-Eight, takes you away with new zip, and outstrips the field with staying power.

But amazingly alive engines aren't the whole story of this star performer for '49—not by a long shot! Hudson has a new hug-the-road way of going in cross-winds and on every conceivable kind of highway. The way in which this car takes even the sharpest curves will just naturally spoil you for any other type of automobile!

This all happens because—as is widely known—the lower to the ground a car can be built, the more stability it will have and the safer it will be. And Hudson has the lowest center of gravity in any American stock car!

This remarkable car has floors recessed down within a base frame—Hudson is the only car you step down into! This use of a "step-down" zone in an exclusive, all steel Monobilt body-and-frame* enables Hudson to build the lowest car on the highway, only five feet from ground to top—while maintaining more than adequate head room!

You sense a delightful conformity to the road, resulting from this new design, the minute you begin to ride, and this, plus the assurance of riding encircled by a sturdy box-section steel frame, gives you a grand feeling of safe well-being! This feeling is further enhanced by the ease with which this car is operated, and by the restful quiet with which Hudson glides along—thanks to the superb sound control engineered into this advanced automobile.

See and ride in the car with "The modern design for '49" today! Come in, let us show you why Hudson's great engines and fabulous "step-down" design principle put this car so far ahead it is a protected investment in motor car value!

*Trade-mark and patents pending. The many important advantages in Hudson's new "step-down" design principle are fully explained and illustrated in a booklet which is yours for the asking at the nearest Hudson dealer's.

Alexandrian Dies in Crash

A man identified as Joseph Sisson, 431 S. Washington st., Alexandria, was burned to death yesterday in a two-truck collision on a small bridge near Marshall, Ill.

The huge transport trucks caught fire after the crash, police there reported. The wreckage and flames tied up traffic for more than four hours.

Two other persons were also reported dead from the crash. They were identified as Tom Newkirk, Effingham, Ill., driver of the other truck, and Ronald E. Lowery, Benton, Ark., who was riding with Sisson.

Students Injured

Five North Carolina University students and a girl companion were injured early yesterday when their car ran into a tree in the 4000 block of Nebraska ave. nw.

Police said the accident happened about 2:25 a. m. when the students, in Washington for the North Carolina-Maryland football game, were taking two girls home from a party. The car was demolished.

The driver was identified by police as Lewis R. Watson, 19, of 3702 R st. nw. He was admitted to Georgetown University Hospital with cuts on his chin and forehead and possible internal injuries.

Also admitted to the hospital were Charles Molster, 20, of 3521 R st. nw., who suffered face cuts and head injuries, and Oscar Gupton, 23, cuts and possible internal injuries.

Victims Treated

Treated were Charlotte Zirpel, 26, and Irving Zirpel, 22, of 3108 Jennifer st. nw., and Ray Swigert, 23, of Norfolk, Va. The second girl, uninjured, was not identified by police.

It was announced by the coroner's office yesterday that inquests into two recent District traffic deaths have been set for 11:30 a.m. Monday.

One will be into the death of Dr. Sara Winifred Brown, 80, of 1330 13th st. nw., a retired physician, who was struck and killed by a Capital Transit bus Friday at 12th and K sts. nw.

The operator of the bus, William H. Evers, 28, of 13-U Ridge rd., Greenbelt, Md., was charged with failing to give full time and attention and failing to yield the right of way to a pedestrian.

The second death was that of Mrs. Caroline McCauley, 67, of 1954 Columbia rd. nw., who was killed by a Capital Transit streetcar November 6 at Columbia rd. and Mintwood pl. nw. The operator of the streetcar was William F. Watson, 51, of 1019 B st. ne., according to police.

BLOODY VICTIM—James G. Coakley, 19, of 494 H st. sw., is comforted by a passer-by as he awaits removal to Casualty Hospital. Coakley was injured in a rainy, predawn crash yesterday when the auto in which he was riding crashed into a light pole on Benning rd. ne., east of the bridge crossing Kingman Lake. At Casualty Hospital his condition was called "good"

6 Die, 18 Hurt As Transport Hits Bomber

Fairbanks, Alaska, Nov. 13 (AP).—Six men were killed and 18 injured last night in the flaming pileup of two planes at nearby Eielson Field. One was a B-50 bomber from Tucson, Ariz.

The Ladd Field information office said a C-47 transport plane careened off the runway on an attempted takeoff and crashed into the bomber. Injured and dead included men from both planes, the report said, but names and addresses were withheld.

2 Die as Plane Crashes On Way to Bolling Field

Attica, Ind., Nov. 13 (U.P.).—A C-45 air force training plane crashed near here today, killing two crew members, police announced.

The plane left Chanute Field, Ill., early today for Bolling Field, Washington, D. C. The cause of the crash was not known.

Police Chief Lavon Carson said two bodies had been found in the wreckage. He said he understood that the plane had carried only the two crew members.

10 Forced Down on Island Picked Up by Flying Boat

Guam, Nov. 13 (AP).—A Navy flying boat late today picked up the ten crew members of an Air Force B-29 forced down on little Fais Island 400 miles southwest of Guam.

The men were all reported in good condition. They were being taken to Saipan, the flying boat's base, for return to Guam.

Another B-29 with 12 men aboard remained missing after a week of search. It disappeared on a routine flight from Okinawa to Guam.

Tar Heels Come to Town But Fail to Plant Flag at White House

A delegation hit town yesterday from the South, suh, where a man's a good football player.

Shouting "Rah, Rah, Carolina, 'lina," these cohorts from the gentlemanly State of razzle dazzle paraded through Washington streets, yelling at the top of their mixed voices that justice would prevail at Griffith Stadium yesterday.

It, or a reasonable facsimile thereof, did prevail, with North Carolina drubbing Maryland by the score of 49-20.

But while the major event of the day was the football game, Washington police of all grades and varieties took an active interest in the Tar Heels' activities for quite another reason.

That Confederate Flag

Word got around that the Carolina lads, who carried a huge Confederate flag along with their blue and white university banners, were going to make a rebel, do-or-die attempt, to plant that flag on the White House lawn.

The first word was that during their parade, which formed at 11 a. m. in Franklin Park and went down 13th to E, on E to 10th, and 10th back to K, some of the boys were going to break ranks and surge over to the White House, and plant that flag.

One Carolina student confided, "There'll be 2500 of us, and only about 30 of them (White House police); we're bound to do it."

Police Were There

When police found out about this, there were no longer just "about 30" police available for White House duty. But the parade went off in orderly fashion.

Police then thought that if Carolina won, its stalwart supporters might make a postgame stand at the White House. Shortly after the game broke at about 4:30, a squad of headquarters plainclothesmen arrived to take up a stand on the White House grounds.

Park police on motorcycles patrolled the grounds at frequent intervals. White House police refused to say how many of their number were on duty. All the policemen assigned to day duty in the First, Second, Third and Thirteenth Precincts were held over as they came off their shifts . . . just in case.

But as night fell, and a chill moon rose over the White House, the law enforcement officers waited in vain.

A few straggling Carolina cars came by. Occupants of some shouted, "Ray for Harry."

But nobody planted a flag.

Football Parking Jams Stadium Neighborhood

The crowd of 34,588 that set a record for college gates at Griffith Stadium yesterday for the Maryland-North Carolina football game also gave police and residents in the area an all-time record headache.

High-spirited out-of-town motorists parked their automobiles just about everywhere but on front porches. Thirteenth Precinct police were swamped with complaints of cars parked in or otherwise blocking private driveways, but there was little they could do about it.

Six automobiles were towed away by police for more flagrant violations, Capt. Albert I. Bullock said, and dozens of parking violation tickets were put out. But most of the violators seemed to be from North Carolina, from which State the District has no reciprocity agreement, so the tickets meant nothing.

On some streets leading to the stadium cars were parked diagonally on the sidewalks for two blocks, and pedestrians had to walk in the street. Some fans going to the game by taxicab found autos parked so solidly eight blocks from the park they had to get out and walk. Bullock said he could have used twice as many policemen as he had to handle the traffic.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Hoover Commission Proposes Widening Of Civil Service

Herbert C. Hoover meant exactly what he said when he revealed that his commission had tentatively agreed on a step toward the establishment of a "first-rate career system" in the Federal service. This is the real story behind that statement:

The plan before the 12-man commission studying Government reorganization would bring tens of thousands of additional Federal jobs under the Civil Service system.

It suggests the repeal of special laws which exempts from Civil Service the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Atomic Energy Commission, Central Intelligence Agency, Tennessee Valley Authority, and the Federal Reserve Board among other agencies.

An assistant secretary for administration would be set up in each department and major agency and the new jobs would be filled by career people who wouldn't be subject to politics and changes of Administration, and,

Other jobs such as lawyers in all agencies, doctors, dentists, and nurses in the Veterans Administration, some 20,000 postmasters now subject to Senate confirmation, and a few other presidential appointees would be brought under the protection of the Civil Service system.

Under Civil Service now are about 92 per cent of all Federal jobs, but the people in those jobs don't all have Civil Service status. The plan under study, it's reported, would raise this total to upwards of 99 per cent.

The only single exception—outside of the obvious, the cabinet and other such jobs—even considered by the Hoover group, it was learned, is State's foreign service. At this moment the commission is reported to be split on the suggestion tha' the foreign service also be brought under Civil Service.

The agencies and groups of employes not now under Civil Service were exempted by both the Congress and the President on the argument tha' Civil Service hampered them; that its rules and regulations were rigid, etc. That argument would no longer be valid under the new and different role the commission would play under the Hoover plan.

Under it, the agencies would examine and hire their own people under standards laid down by Civil Service. All examinations, appointments, and personnel actions in general would be subject to inspection—a post audit—by Civil Service. In fact, Civil Service would cooperate with them in examining and the selection of personnel.

Actually, the commission has been moving in this direction for the past year or so—the direction of decentralization. It has set up hundreds of local boards of examiners to examine and appoint qualified people to Federal jobs. The agencies themselves, in effect, select their new employes through the board process. It is this system that would be extended throughout the Federal service under the Hoover plans.

To keep the record straight, the Civil Service Commission hires only its own employes; it does not hire for any other agencies. The stories that appeared after Mr. Hoover's conference said the commission would be stripped of its "hiring functions" which, of course, isn't true.

PAY: Mr. Hoover only hinted at it, but the personnel report before his group also would have the effect of bringing most Federal workers under the salary-fixing Classification Act. In Government today are literally scores of different salary rates for this and that group—rates which make very little sense.

The Classification Act was enacted in 1923 with the objective to pay Federal employes equal pay for equal work no matter where they were employed. In recent years the enactment of special laws for special groups of employes has riddled that act, and in doing so, made Federal salary scales complicated and cumbersome.

As pointed out here the other day, a bank examiner in the Treasury Department is paid $18,000 but the Treasury secretary is paid only $15,000 and his undersecretary and assistant secretaries get only $10,000. There are scores of similar screwball cases throughout the Federal government which the Hoover group would correct.

BOOSTS: Generally overlooked is the fact that the Hoover group would go a great deal further than the Flanders-Baldwin-O'Conor bill in raising the salaries of Federal executives. The Senate bill would boost the salaries of about 225 executives, mainly in the Cabinet and sub-Cabinet levels.

Mr. Hoover is for pay raises for employes who are paid $5000 and more. His plan would include the bureau chiefs, the general counsels, executive officers, and other high-ranking executives who are ignored in the Senate bill. It's no secret that when the Senate Civil Service Committee has hearings next month on the Flanders-Baldwin-O'Conor bill it will be urged by Administration spokesmen to enlarge the bill to include 10 times the number of executives.

DEPARTMENT? Mr. Hoover also revealed his commission was studying a plan to set up a department of administration to relieve the President of some of his duties. In the proposed agency, presumably, would be the Budget Bureau, Civil Service Commission, and the Government's procurement and space agencies. However, there is opposition to this plan among some of the President's advisers.

Three 'Movie Stars' Go Back to School Grind After Technicolor Debut in Documentary Film

The Washington Post

ANOTHER 'TAKE'—This time it's a "still" for those Leland Junior High School stars—Arline Beman (left), Bill Taylor and Barbara Van Devanter. They had silent roles in the documentary, "We Walked With Lincoln," recently filmed here

Three movie stars are roaming the halls of Leland Junior High School these days, but the modest trio makes light of its recent taste of fame.

The Bethesda teenagers, silent stars in a recently filmed documentary called "We Walked with Lincoln," are Barbara Van Devanter, 14; Arline Beman, 14, and William Taylor, 15, residents of 19, 26, and 22 Woodhaven blvd., respectively.

The 22-minute Technicolor movie will be released by the Institute of Visual Education in January to schools all over the country. It chronicles the reactions of a typical high school class to a few of Washington's public wonders, and was prepared by the Proprietary Ass ciation of America with the help of the Federal Security Agency.

Along with 20 Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School students who formed the supporting cast, the Leland students were excused from classes several days for the filming during late October. None of them expressed regret over this.

They were the center of the camera's eye for various shots, taken as they gazed at the Lincoln Memorial, the Ford Theater, and the White House state dining room.

"All we did was act exactly as if the camera weren't there," says Arline, who admitted however, that the proper wonder and amazements were a little hard to conjure up after a long day of shooting.

Impressed the first time they saw the Memorial, the students said they were "just bored" by the time the long filming sessions were over.

"At the Ford Theater we spent about 2 hours waiting for the sun to come out and about 10 minutes shooting," said Arline.

A night scene, taken at the Lincoln Memorial, took from 7 p. m. until 2 a. m. because of missing equipment and involved lighting arrangements.

Spectators were "lined up four deep" that night, Arline noted, but the one big thrill came, the three agreed, when a police escort conducted them from the Memorial to a nearby hotel for sandwiches in the wee hours of the morning—and through a red light, at that.

Both girls disclaim any Hollywood inclinations, but Bill, who has acted in dozens of school plays, says that for about two years he has intended to make the movies his career.

Trade Board To Sponsor Radio Series

In preparation for its sixtieth anniversary a year hence, the Washington Board of Trade will sponsor a weekly radio broadcast starting Sunday, December 5, according to an announcement made yesterday by President Leon Chatelain, jr.

The programs will be featured as a public service by Station WTOP from 1:15 to 1:30 p. m. each Sunday. They will be produced by the local C. B. S. and Trade Board staffs, jointly with Robert Lewis of the Station WTOP newsroom as moderator.

The initial broadcast will come within three days of the fifty-ninth anniversary of the board's incorporation on December 1, 1889. Its original membership of 200 has grown to approximately 8000 representative business and professional men in the metropolitan Washington area.

Significance of this newest development in Board of Trade public relations policy is outlined by President Chatelain as follows:

"The officers and directors of the Board of Trade are very happy to learn that our weekly radio program is soon to be inaugurated. Through this medium, the board will be better able to support its committee activities and inform all Washington citizens of our viewpoint on important community issues. Within our large membership there are competent authorities on practically all subjects who, I am sure, will be willing to participate in the programs. We are already at work on planning the first four broadcasts in December with the cooperation of Station WTOP and its staff."

Many phases of the board's activities and topics of wide community interest will be presented in the weekly programs. They will include highlights of District fiscal studies, congressional relations, special events assoc ated with the sesquicentennial celebration in 1950, convention and tourist program under the Greater National Capital Committee, metropolitan area planning on highways, traffic and allied subjects—in addition to recommendations from some of the board's nearly 40 standing committees as approved by the directors.

The topics will be enlivened by "cut-backs" to the Washington of half a century ago—as well as forecasts on what lies ahead of the Capital City after 1940.

Home For the Aged Sets Donation Party

The Home for the Aged of the Little Sisters of the Poor will hold its annual donation party and open house reception today from 2 to 5 p. m.

The event is sponsored by the Washington General Assembly, Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus, and is open to the public. The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, will pronounce the solemn benediction at the conclusion of the reception.

Berwyn Woman

County Police Seek Man in Alleged Rape

Prince Georges police sought a man about 32 years old last night for alleged rape of a 41-year-old Berwyn, Md., housewife and larceny of her automobile and purse.

The woman suffered a sprained wrist and cuts and bruises on the face in the course of the struggle, police reported.

She told Prince Georges County Detective Earl Huber that she met the man in a beer tavern at Riverdale, Md., and that he asked to ride with her when she went to a Brentwood tavern to look for her husband.

When she failed to find her husband and decided to return to Riverdale, the man asked if he might ride along. She stopped at a Berwyn tavern to get a glass of beer, but he overpowered her and drove the car away to a gravel pit near Berwyn, where he threatened her life if she did not submit, she told Huber.

To gain time, she suggested they get out of the car and then tried to run away, but was caught and attacked, she said.

After the attack, she again ran and this time found a car in which another couple was seated. She told them of the attack and they took her to her home in Berwyn. She found herself locked out and had to return to a tavern to call police.

Meanwhile, the man had escaped in her automobile and with her purse containing about $6 and a $60 telephone company check.

The assailant was described as about 5 feet 6 inches in height, with black curly hair and weighing about 175 pounds. He was wearing a blue suit, blue shirt and necktie with red predominant in the color scheme, Huber said.

Council to Meet On Alexandria Hospital Plight

A special meeting of the Alexandria city council hospital committee will be called some time this week to discuss the serious financial plight of Alexandria's Hospital, threatened with closing January 1 due to lack of funds.

Councilman R. Samuel Luckett, committee chairman, said he would ask the group to meet to consider a statement by hospital officials that the institution might have to close if additional revenue is not received.

The statement was given the city council at a closed meeting Thursday night, when hospital officials asked for an outright grant of $60,000 to meet present expenses, and an allocation of $50,000 for the care of indigent patients next year. No action was taken at the time.

Luckett revealed yesterday that the council's financial committee already has approved the $50,000 allocation sought for care of indigents, although no action has been taken on the requested $60,000 grant.

The $50,000 fund, he said, was set up in a tentative budget prepared by the local welfare department several months ago, and was approved by the finance committee in a closed discussion of next year's budget needs.

Luckett said he had talked informally with several members of the hospital committee, and all felt that more information should be obtained from the hospital

Women Give Cancer Fund For Training

Clinic Volunteers Raise $1917 for Technician Study And Promise More

Not content with giving their time as volunteer workers to the Warwick Memorial Cancer Clinic, a group of 30 women yesterday made possible the training of several cancer technicians.

The women, members of the Washington section, National Council of Jewish Women, presented a check for $1917 to Dr. Calvin T. Klopp, director of the clinic at 1339 H st. nw., with the promise of "a little more to come."

The presentation was made by Mrs. George Nordlinger, chairman of the group, which had raised the money among relatives and personal friends.

Mrs. Theodore Peyser, president of the Washington section; Ernest Edinger, director of the District division of the American Cancer Society, and Dr. Walter Bloedorn, dean of the George Washington University Medical School and medical director of its hospital, with which the Warwick Clinic is affiliated, attended the simple presentation party.

Training At Hot Springs

Dr. Klopp, surprised and gratified at the amount of the check, said it would pay the expenses of several technicians while they are being trained without charge at the United States Public Health Service cancer clinic at Hot Springs, Ark., in detection of cancer of the uterus.

The specific work in which the technicians will be trained involves taking cells from the cervex of the uterus, putting them on glass slides and, after they have been stained, referring those that are other than normal to a doctor for interpretation.

In about 90 per cent of the suspected cases cancer will be found, Dr. Klopp said. Among those cases where other symptoms have not yet become apparent, the percentage of curability is very high, he said.

The lack of trained personnel for the work has been a handicap, Dr. Klopp said, and the gift should help increase the curability rate in the District.

The volunteer group is headed by Mrs. Nordlinger as administrative chairman; Mrs. Paul Lynn Hiller, a registered nurse herself, who directs the nurses' aides; Mrs. Robert Wildman, director, and Mrs. Lawrence Kling, assistant director of volunteers.

They have been giving a minimum of six hours' work a week to the clinic since March 29, working as typists, receptionists, file clerks, dictaphone operators and nurses' aides. They have also done special assignments, such as compiling synopses of patients' medical records.

A feature of yesterday's ceremony was presentation of American Cancer Society volunteer workers' pins to 13 of the women who have worked at the clinic six months or more.

The recipients included Mrs. Allen de Ford, Mrs. Bernie Burgunder, Mrs. Joseph J. Kahn, Mrs. Harry Ullman, Mrs. Helene Rich, Mrs. Allen Ogus, Mrs. Joseph De Young, Mrs. Frank Luchs, Mrs. Lawrence Kling, Mrs. Emanuel Haas, Mrs. Arthur J. Stephens, Mrs. Estelle Kauffmann and Mrs. Edward B. Sonneborn.

Tibet's Gifts to Roosevelt Now on Exhibit at Museum

The Washington Post

TABLE FROM TIBET—Harriet Wrolstad, an employe of Northwest Airlines, of McLean Gardens, admires the gold-embossed, pure silver pitcher, teapot, jugs and bowls sent from Tibet to the late President Roosevelt. They are now on exhibit at the National Museum

Four sealed and brass-bound wooden packages, each weighing about 80 pounds, arrived at the White House from Tibet late in 1945, addressed to the late President Roosevelt, and the contents are now on display at the National Museum.

The packages traveled eight months by horse over the rough mountains of Tibet, and then were dispatched to this country aboard the S. S. China Mail from Calcutta, India.

Unpacked, they revealed 17 elaborately decorated pure silver bowls, jugs and teapots, hand stamped, etched and embossed in gold with sacred Buddhist emblems and motifs from Chinese folklore.

An accompanying scroll was dated "the 24th day of the second month of the year of the Woodbird" (1945) and directed the gifts to "the Great President Franklin Roosevelt who wields immense power over a country of vast wealth," according to a State Department translation.

Signed by "Pandit Takdak Yongzin Rimpochhe, the Regent of Tibet with a Silk Scarf," it said the gifts were sent as a token of thanks for wireless equipment given Tibet during the war, including six receiving and three transmitting sets.

Most of the utensils were designed for use in the homes of wealthy lamas, Smithsonian Institution experts say, although two "butter lamps"—so-called because the wick is placed in a lump of yak butter—are probably for altar use only.

The vessels, which remained in the Cabinet Room of the White House until October of this year, have been given by President Truman to the Smithsonian Institution. They are on display now in the foyer of the National Museum at 10th st. and Constitution ave. nw.

ABC Hearing On Grill Up Again Tuesday

The District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board will resume hearings on 57 charges against Mitchell's Grill, 235 G st. nw., at 2 p. m. Tuesday in the Municipal Center.

The hearings thus far have resulted in spectacular charges by Pvt. Frank N. Manthos that a fellow policeman, Pvt. Samuel T. Wallace, had admitted "framing" the establishment's owner, Henry David.

Police Supt. Robert J. Barrett directed Inspector George Wallrodt to probe "all angles" of the case. He also transferred Manthos, Wallace and a vice squad associate of Wallace, Pvt. Miles Richey, from plainsclothes duty to foot patrols.

Manthos, who was known as a "one-man vice squad" for his many arrests, was transferred from the First to the Sixth Precinct. Wallace was moved from the Vice Squad to the Fourth Precinct and Richey from the Vice Squad to the Seventh Precinct.

Yesterday Wallace, who previously had been in the Fourth Precinct, patrolled the area west of 7th st. from E st. to the Mall, while Manthos and Richey toured their precincts in cruisers to learn the areas.

Goin' to Grandpa's

Tot and Sister Found After 8-Mile Trek

Robert Wagoner, 4½, and his sister, Janice, 2½, were found yesterday after they walked 8 miles in the Washington suburbs to "visit grandpa."

The two young children were following the road their father usually took when going from his home, 3720 Ely pl. se., to the residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Wagoner, 3714 41st ave. Cottage City, Md.

The children had been left with neighbors before 10 a. m. while their parents went to a football game.

At 3 p. m., 8 miles distant from their home, the children were discovered on Kenilworth ave. by Diane Schley, 4817 Frolich Lane, Tuxedo, Md. Miss Sechley called police who armed themselves with cheese popcorn and took the children to the Hyattsville Police Station.

There the children gave their name as "Wagner." Police were stymied because of the spelling. Finally Robert told them that he lived on Ely place.

Washington police were notified and reported that they had been searching for the children for five hours. Then Grandpa arrived and took the children in tow.

Prince Georges County Policemen Corp. Roland Sweitzer and David Dudley said the children were weary. Given enough time they probably would have reached "Grandpa's," which was about 16 miles distant from Ely pl. via Kenilworth ave.

Plan to Raze 11 Buildings For Parking Lot Revived

Survey Is Launched To Determine Space D. C. Employes Need; Most Units Vacated

The District Commissioners have revived a plan for razing 11 antiquated, rat-infested buildings adjoining the Municipal Center and converting the tract into parking lots, it was learned last night.

At a meeting last week, the city fathers heard a report that almost all District agencies have been removed from the structures preliminary to razing, and a survey has been ordered to determine how much of the space should be assigned to District employes' vehicles and how much set aside for leasing as a public parking lot.

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, said he had directed Lieut. Col. L. E. Cox to make the survey. At present, only Gino Simi, director of apprenticeship training, and the Foster Day Care and Counseling Association, a Community Chest project, have not found other space, according to Property Officer Paul Chalupsky.

One Building Excluded

One building in the C st., 6th st., Indiana ave. tract will remain, Chalupsky said. That is the six-story building at 462 Indiana ave., now housing the public assistance division of the Welfare Department.

At 468 Indiana, the only occupants are some guinea pigs used in Health Department research. The three-story structure at 470 has been vacated except for the apprenticeship and Foster Day Care agencies on the second floor, Chalupsky said.

The next building at 472 is vacant and the one at 480 is empty except for a nearby parking lot employe, William Ellis, who temporarily has taken some space on the third floor.

On 6th st., the Charles A. Gibson garage has a lease for space at 309, but this can be ended on short notice, Chalupsky reported. This District Motor Vehicles Sign Shop at 307 is moving to the harbor garage at 8th and H sts. sw., and the District Property Warehouse at 301 is moving to 458½ C st. nw.

Pistol Range Must Move

Three two-story, garage-type buildings on C st. at 483, 485 and 487 have been emptied except for the police pistol range on the second floor of 483. This is scheduled to move into the basement of the Municipal Center within 30 days after the lunchroom there is closed.

A police impounding lot for vehicles next to the buildings is being moved to the grounds of the former Jefferson Junior High School at 6th st. and Virginia ave. sw., Chalupsky said.

General Young said after the survey is completed, he will ask the Commissioners to let contracts for razing the structures and leveling them for parking use.

Armed Bandit Gets $270 at Liquor Store

An armed bandit held up Berger's liquor store, 300 Massachusetts ave. ne., at about 6:40 last night and escaped with $270.

The same store was held up and robbed of $1300 in June, 1946, by Reginald Wheeler and Jesse James Patton who are now awaiting execution in District Jail for the holdup killing of a druggist.

The owner of the store, Morris Berger, and his wife, Anna, were alone in the store last night when the bandit walked in. He asked for a bottle of scotch and Mrs. Berger turned, picked out a bottle and set it on the counter.

She observed then that the man had a .38-caliber nickel-plated revolver leveled at her. At his direction, she opened the cash register and handed him $270 in bills. The holdup man told the couple, "Don't call police," and then ran from the store and fled east on D st. ne.

The bandit was described as a dark-skinned Negro of about 45 years with a rough skin, about 5 feet 9 and weighing between 175 and 180. He was wearing a dark overcoat and dark hat.

Inauguration Police Badges Are Ordered

Six hundred badges for use by out-of-town policemen during the inauguration ceremonies were ordered yesterday by District Purchasing Agent Roland T. Brennan.

In past inaugurals, policemen from other cities have been imported for special duties during the ceremonies.

The badges were ordered with the knowledge of Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett, according to Lieut. James H. Cox, police purchasing and accounts officer.

The badges, which will carry the inscription, "Inauguration of Harry S. Truman, Alben W. Barkley, 1949," were ordered from the Lamb Seal and Stencil Co., Inc., 824 13th st. nw., at a price of $576.

Major Barret has proposed establishment of a citizens' auxiliary police force. One of the first events at which the force could be used would be the inauguration, he said. The Commissioners are expected to discuss the proposal Tuesday morning after receiving an opinion on the legality of such a force from Corporation Counsel Oliver Gasch.

Nurse Finds Dog Killed

A Spitz-Chow dog, owned by Mrs. Mary A. Ackerman, a nurse at Prince Georges General Hospital, was found with its throat cut last night when Mrs. Ackerman returned to her home, 5816 Quintana st., Hyattsville, after work.

The dog was "very friendly" and played with small children of the neighborhood, its owner said. She could suggest no reason for the killing.

Neighbors reported seeing a man loitering on the front porch about 1 p. m., and a bloody footprint was found on the rail of the back porch where the killer apparently climbed over to the adjoining yard.

For First Family

Blair-Lee, Blair Houses To Be Joined

The Blair and Blair-Lee houses are going to become the Blair-Blair-Lee House for presidential occupancy.

White House aides announced yesterday that an arched doorway is being cut between the two houses on the first floor. This change and other minor repairs on the temporary Executive Mansion are expected to be completed when the Trumans return from Key West, Fla., about November 21.

President Truman and his family are moving out of the White House to permit extensive repairs to the second floor.

White House Architect Lorenzo Winslow, who predicts cost of the revamping will run about a million dollars and take a year to complete, will submit an appropriation request to the next Congress. How long the Trumans live in the Blair-Blair-Lee House depends on how quickly Congress provides the funds.

A White House official said there is more bedroom space at Blair and Blair-Lee Houses than at the White House, making it possible to have more overnight guests.

However, presidential entertaining will not include large receptions which have marked past social seasons.

The move will make two kitchens available for use of the Trumans. One in the basement of the Blair House will be used for the family. The Blair-Lee House kitchen will be used for guests.

Plans are to store most White House valuables in the National Gallery of Art. Only personal items and china will be moved to the temporary residence.

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

Reversing the trend at the half, Shepherd School, 14th and Kalmia sts. nw., swept over Whittier School, Fifth and Sheridan sts. nw., to win yesterday's "Quizdown" by a margin of 90 points.

The scores stood 360 for Whittier and 300 for Shepherd at the end of the first round of questions on the weekly quiz show, sponsored by The Washington Post and broadcast by Station WTOP from 10 to 10:30 a. m. from Wilson Teachers College, 11th and Harvard sts. nw. The final chalkup was 550 for Shepherd and 460 for its opponent.

Shepherd's emotion was put into words by one of its youthful supporters, who said with satisfaction: "Whittier beat us at football, but we beat at Quizdown!"

Eyes Moistened

Several pairs of eyes in the Whittier lineup moistened when the final scores were announced, but there were no tears.

The two sextets, composed of well informed fourth, fifth and sixth graders, matched their knowledge of facts before an audience of nearly 600 persons who crowded Wilson Teachers College auditorium, causing the Standing Room Only sign to be hung out.

Carrying Shepherd's green and yellow school colors high was a 4-B grader, Sandra Steward, 9, of 7742 16th st. nw., only contestant to answer both her questions correctly and thereby score a total of 200 points.

Sandra, nicknamed "Sandpile," a white barrette gleaming in her dark hair, correctly named two ways of telling time before the clock was invented and the number of beats a whole note gets in four-four time.

"The sun dial and the position of the sun itself in the sky," and "four beats" were Sandra's answers.

Harriet Stone, a 9-B grader at Shepard, who lives at 7928 Orchid st. nw., and likes fish for pets, correctly answered Quizmaster Vern Hansen's opening question, "What are the three primary colors?"

Names Colors

"Red and yellow and blue," said Harriet, who twisted and turned as she stood before the microphone, and who wants to be a housewife when she grows up.

Whittier's first man before the microphone was Franklin Cooling, 9, a 4-B grader, who lives at 5910 3d st. nw., and likes rabbits and electric trains.

Looking serious, he correctly answered "five lines and four spaces" when Quizmaster Hansen asked him how many lines and spaces there are in the musical staff.

Whittier's second man before the mike was James Kallis, 9, a 5-A grader living at 5913 4th st. nw. His voice was so strong that he was previously allowed to read the list of Quizdown prizes for Announcer Lee Vickers.

The list included a 19-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia for the winning school; a Rand McNally International Edition Atlas for the losing school; Emerson table model radios for both schools; ball point pens for members of the winning teams and automatic pencils for members of the losing team.

Kallis, who would like to play center field for the Senators some day, was just as sure-voiced when he added 100 points to Whittier's score by answering "Magellan" when asked "whose expedition was the first to sail around the world."

These and other questions were selected by a committee from suggestions of grammar school students.

Also on Whittier's team were Loretta Lowe, 11, 6-A grade, of 5211 Sheridan st. nw.; Rita Lee Wertlieb, 9, 4-B., of 501 Quackenbos st. nw.; William Kay, 12, 6-A, of 6310 Seventh st. nw., and Billy Bartlett, 10, 5-A, of 618 Rittenhouse st. nw.

Also on Shepherd's team were: Stephen Grisoff, 9, 5-A grade, of 1448 Primrose rd. nw.; Daryl Reich, 11, 6-A grade, of 1303 Ballard st., Silver Spring, Md; Debora Taff, 11, 6-A grade, 1734 Poplar lane, and Lee Seligman, 10, of 7816 16th st. nw.

Judges on yesterday's show were the following public school faculty members: Mrs. A. F. Campbell of Rudolph School, R. A. Hiltz of Bancroft School and Raymond Israel of Truesdell School.

Yesterday's Quizdown was the second of a series of 30 under the direction of Mrs. Hazel Kenyon Markel, WTOP director of public service and education, and produced by Larry Beckerman. Programs originating in the public schools are produced in cooperation with Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent, and coordinated through the radio committee of the District Public Schools, of which Clyde Huber is chairman.

Bradford Dies At 52; South's Noted Writer

New Orleans, Nov. 13 (AP).—Roark Bradford, versatile author of "Old Man Adam and His Chillun," from which the stage hit "Green Pastures" was adapted, died at his French Quarter home today. He was 52.

Mr. Bradford

Mr. Bradford, also noted for his other Negro folk tales, had been in ill health for some time.

Mrs. Bradford said he died from amoebiasis, which he contracted while serving with the United States Navy in French West Africa in 1943.

Mrs. Bradford said the author thought burial archaic and that in accordance with his wishes his body will be cremated and the ashes dropped into his beloved Mississippi River.

At various times Mr. Bradford had been a reporter, city editor, soldier, sailor, cowboy, boxer and baseball player.

In his youth, Mr. Bradford tried to sell short stories about China and the South Seas, where he had never been, and about whaling, which he had never done.

One day he saw a Negro fishing in the Mississippi River, a bell tied at the end of his pole to jingle and awaken him when a fish bit. He sold a story on the incident to the New York World and from then on drew on his background—his boyhood on the family plantation near Lauderdale, Tenn.—for Negro tales.

Mr. Bradford also wrote other novels, including "John Henry" and "The Three-Headed Angel." His short story, "Child of God," won him the O. Henry Memorial award as the best short story of 1927.

Besides the widow, the former Mary Rose Himler, who also acted as his literary agent, Mr. Bradford is survived by a son, Richard, 16.

Sheehy Attacks Kinsey Report

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 13 (AP). A Catholic educator said today the Kinsey Report "has made the most devastating inroads on Christian morality in this century."

Msgr. Sheehy

The best-selling book, "Sexual Behavior of the Human Male," was described by the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Maurice S. Sheehy as "the most antiregigious book of our times."

In an interview with the Jacksonville Journal, Monsignor Sheehy, head of the Department of Religious Education at Catholic University in Washington, declared:

"With all its array of tables (the Kinsey Report) is a most unscientific work. It is such because it went to institutions chiefly for its data; because its sampling method was wrong; because it trespassed upon the right to privacy which precluded sensitive people from testifying and because . . . Dr. Kinsey does not know how to use statistics."

He said the book on present-day sexual habits "ignores" the relationship between sex and the birth of children.

"This work is not intended to be an attack upon religion," he asserted. "But I still maintain that in its general attack upon morals, it is the most antireligious book of our times . . .

"Dr. Kinsey's report gives the impression that if one has not some hidden or overt means of sexual expression he is beyond the pale of normalcy."

Monsignor Sheehy came here to address the fourth regional congress on the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine.

'Alcoholic Woman'

Fight Spurs Demands For Book

Disclosure that suppression of "The Alcoholic Woman" is being sought by a Volunteers of America official led to a brisk demand for the medical work in Washington bookshops yesterday.

Most curiosity seekers were disappointed, however, as booksellers, treating as routine the book by Dr. Benjamin Karpman, chief psychotherapist at St. Elizabeths Hospital, had stocked few copies, and Jean Karr, wholesale book jobber, stopped handling the book.

The demand for the book's suppression came from Lieut. Col. Walter O. Ulrey of the Volunteers of America. After reading "the high spots," Ulrey said it was "pornographic."

Members of Police Lieut. Harry Blackman's special investigation squad reportedly were unable to find any copies on newsstands as Ulrey had claimed.

Blackman reportedly was named with Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken of the Women's Bureau to investigate sale of the book by Chief of Police Robert J. Barrett. Captain Milliken said yesterday, howeevr, she had not seen the book and had had no request to investigate it.

Blackman said the book would be sent to the United States attorney's office for a ruling, and if it ruled against the book, it would be confiscated.

Colleges Enroll Record 2,410,000

Enrollments in the Nation's colleges and universities have climbed to a new peak of 2,410,000, the Office of Education reported yesterday.

An increase of 72,000 students above last year's totals was noted despite a drop of 100,000 in veteran enrollments.

Basing its report on figures furnished by substantially all of the Nation's 1800 institutions of higher learning, the Office of Education said that there are 2,410,000 students now enrolled as compared with 2,338,000 a year ago.

Veteran enrollment, now 1,021,041 students, was 1,122,738 a year ago.

36,748 in District

Universities and colleges in the District reported 36,748 students this year, an increase of 402 above a year ago. Veteran enrollment dropped locally 734 students, from 18,173 of last year to 17,439.

The Office of Education findings showed that fewer freshmen signed up this year than before. Last year's freshman enrollment was 593,000, while this year it was 569,000.

Fewer veterans and smaller freshman classes indicate that fewer students are dropping out of school, the office said.

Men still outnumber women almost 3 to 1, the same proportion as a year ago, the survey showed. The ratio is slightly less than 2 to 1 in the liberal arts colleges and is nearly even in the teachers' colleges.

Gain in Women Freshmen

The Office of Education also noted that the proportion of women freshmen in all types of institutions is slightly higher in 1948 than it was in 1947.

In a breakdown of types of schools, the survey shows that universities, colleges and professional schools have increased their enrollments this year by 78,000 students to a total of 1,961,000; teachers' colleges have increased by 8000 students to 170,000, junior colleges show a loss of 11,000 students and now have an enrollment of 208,000.

Negro institutions have lost students. Enrollments have dropped 3000 to 71,000.

Enrollments of major local colleges, secured from the registrars of the schools, show the following:

George Washington University with an enrollment in 1947 of 12,079 students now has 12,283. Last year the veteran enrollment was 7056 while this year it is 6997.

American University last year had 4959 students and this year has 5339. Last year the veteran enrollment was 1804 and this year it has dropped to 1707.

Georgetown University has increased its enrollment of 5476 of a year ago to 5677. Veteran enrollment has dropped from 3426 to 3218.

Catholic University shows an increase in veteran enrollment as well as in total enrollment. Last year there were 4215 students enrolled as compared with 4625 this year. Veteran enrollment of 1400 last year has increased to 1925.

Howard University shows a drop in both total and veteran enrollment. Last year there were 5976 students enrolled and this year 5231. Veteran enrollment of 2648 last year has dropped to 2243.

Blood Center Names Nelson Medical Chief

Nelson

Dr. Kenneth R. Nelson, 7819 12th st. nw., former Army Medical Corps captain who was in Hawaii when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor, will become physician-in-charge and technical director of the Red Cross Washington Regional Blood Center, 1730 E st. nw., on Tuesday.

Dr. Nelson succeeds Dr. John B. Ross, who is resigning, it was announced yesterday by Dr. Montgomery Blair, jr., chairman of the center's medical advisory committee. Schooled in Des Moines (Iowa), Chicago and the Army Medical Center here, Dr. Nelson has had 15 years of private practice and Army service. He has recently practiced in Vancouver, Wash., and Portland, Oreg.

Dr. Nelson brings considerable experience in blood collection and processing in Pacific combat areas to the local program, started last January.

The program is aimed at providing blood free to all physicians for their patients. The center and "bloodmobile" operating in nearby Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia, supplies blood from volunteer donors to more than 36 area hospitals.

15-Year-Old Girl's Ditty Wins $100 Prize in 'Saint' Contest

The Washington Post

Evelyn Conner, 15, of 357 Wesmond dr., Alexandria, Va., was the grand prize winner of the "Saint Slogan Contest," sponsored by The Washington Post, after charming three judges yesterday by singing her winning ditty over WINX.

The brown-haired George Washington High School junior wept for joy as Jay Owen of the "Anything Goes" program handed her a $100 bill for the best slogan or jingle boosting The Saint, a comic strip which appears daily in The Post.

Evelyn was one of nine young finalists in the contest who recited, sang or otherwise emitted into the microphone their original verse, jingle or slogan during Owen's program. A tenth finalist, Brian Annis of Blue Ridge Summit, Pa., was ill, and Owen read his entry for him. The nine runners-up received $10 prizes.

The winning ditty, sung in a contralto voice to the tune of "Bell Bottom Trousers," was picked by Owen, Raoul Blumberg, director of promotion for The Post, and John S. Hayes, WINX general manager, as the best presented. Four contestants were asked to repeat their renditions for the judges before the decision could be made.

Evelyn's ditty goes like this:

"T is for two of them, Simon and Hoppy,
H is for heroes, dashing and cocky,
E is for everyday, you see them in
The Post, for action and suspense, they have most.
S is for Simon, better known as the Saint,
A is for animation, different and quaint,
I is for interesting, hair-raising suspense,
N is for "New Post Comic," that has crime on the fence.
T is for Templar, and oh what a guy, he has the cops in a dither and we all wonder why,
Put them altogether and we have
The Saint, so let's sic him on the gangsters and watch them all faint."

Williamsburg Declared 'Catastrophe' in Style

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 13 (AP).—Henry Kamphoefner, dean of the North Carolina State College School of Architecture, has called the restoration of colonial Williamsburg a "catastrophe," architecturally speaking.

Kamphoefner, who believes architectural design should be indigenous to its surroundings, contended that restoration of colonial buildings at Williamsburg is having wide influence on design that sacrifices comfort to "stylistic expression. He spoke here last night before the Virginia chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

Ex-Colonel Is Fulfilling Vow to God

A 40-year-old retired Army colonel, who made a "covenant with God" while lying wounded on a Belgian battlefield, will begin his service in the Episcopal ministry next June if all goes well.

Col. Shinberger

He is John Baird Shinberger, 3766 Gunston rd., Parkfairfax, Alexandria, a West Point graduate and veteran of 18 years of Army service.

Shinberger is now in his senior year at the Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria. He is to be ordained a deacon in the church on successful completion of his final year of studies.

The father of two young children, Shinberger entered the seminary in October, 1946, to fulfill a pledge he made at a time when he "didn't know for sure he was coming back alive," he told The Washington Post yesterday.

Hit in both arms by mortar fire, and believing he had lost his right arm, Shinberger said he "looked into the heavens, prayed and told God that I would devote the rest of my life to His service" if he survived.

The pledge, Shinberger said, ended 18 years of indecision, during which he had mulled over the idea of entering the ministry, but had succeeded in dissuading himself because he believed he "just wasn't good enough."

A native of Norfolk, Va., Shinberger entered West Point in 1929 after spending a year at the University of Virginia while trying to make up his mind about going into the ministry. He was graduated from the academy in 1933 and decided to accept a second lieutenant's commission following another period of indecision.

After prewar service in "nearly all of the United States and the Philippines," he was sent to England early in 1943 and hit Utah beach on D-Day as commanding officer of the 2d Battalion, 60th Infantry, of the Ninth Army. Almost three months later he received the wounds that precipitated his decision to enter the ministry and, eventually, resulted in his retirement from the Army on physical disability.

After making his pledge to devote his life to God's service, Shinberger said he was convinced an act of "divine providence" assured his safe removal from the battlefield to a first-aid station. The jeep, in which he was carried with several other wounded men, was riddled by 37 German machine gun bullets, but none of the occupants was hit.

With his wife, Lisa, and their two daughters, Adelaide, 7, and Mary Baird, 2, Shinberger has lived in Alexandria since September, 1946.

Clean Sweep of Georgia Avenue . . .

SILVER SPRING SHINES UP—Five Silver Spring residents sweep Georgia ave. just north of the underpass, starting off the week-long campaign to "Clean up Silver Spring," which began yesterday. Fifty members of the town's Junior Chamber of Commerce, which is sponsoring the campaign, pitched in at 9 a. m. and swept Georgia ave. from the underpass to Colesville rd. It was an hour-and-a-half job. Among them were (from left), Benjamin Elliott, architect, 9802 Bristol rd.; Capt. Joseph B. Nolte, of the Silver Spring Police force; Montgomery County Commissioner Oliver O. Youngblood; Lawrence Lutes, president of Jaycees, 219 Williamsburg dr.; Byron Sedgwick, of M. S. Ginn & Co., of 905 Thayer ave.

Victory Seen Over Gag Rule

Maryland press group officials yesterday hailed release of the Edwards confession in the Glen Burnie double murder as a "significant factor" in their fight against the Baltimore courts' "gag rule" on crime news.

Governor Lane announced Thursday that Alexander Edwards, 23, of Freetown, Md., had confessed to the murder of John H. Mahlan, 25, and Mary C. Kline, 18, both of Glen Burnie, Md., September 17.

Bowie McCeney of Laurel, vice president of the Maryland Press Association, said the Governor's action "clearly indicates the undesirability of such a rule." He pointed out that the Governor's announcement was made "in apparent pride and as a means of relieving anxiety arising from the knowledge that a maniacal killer is on the loose."

Philip J. Austensen, president of the Prince Georges County Pres Association, and John W. Coffman, jr., president of the Montgomery County Press Association, jointly declared that they felt the Governor's action "clearly substantiates" their belief that the rule is not only unconstitutional but undesirable "because it is not in the public interest to secrete such information."

The public is entitled to know that an hour of danger has passed, the press officials said.

WITH and News Editor File Contempt Answer

Baltimore, Nov. 13 (AP).—Radio Station WITH and its news editor, James P. Connolly, today filed an answer to contempt of court charges, saying the proceedings were based on an unconstitutional press gag rule of the supreme bench of Baltimore.

The court has cited the station, Connolly, and four other stations for the broadcast of certain facts in the case of Eugene James, sentenced this week to hang for the knife-slaying of 11-year-old Marsha Brill. He is under indictment in Washington, D. C., for a similar slaying of 11-year-old Carol Bardwell in Rock Creek Park.

"A bargain buy in a bedroom suite for one Post reader—

And I have $100 to spend!"

"October 28 was a good day for both of us," says Mrs. Charles M. Montgomery of 1515 Patrick Henry Drive, Arlington. "The Washington Post reader who saw my ad and called me at 10 A. M. got an excellent bargain in my six-piece maple bedroom suite. It cost him only $100—but that $100 will certainly be useful for things I've been wanting to buy. I got two other calls that first day for my furniture, too. Post ads really do get results."

Haven't you something surplus to sell — bedroom pieces, baby equipment, a rug or a vacuum cleaner? Put a Post classified ad to work and see how quickly you'll make a sale. For service call NAtional 4200 and ask for an ad writer.

Fight Is Expected on Loan Regulations at Hearing Monday

District loan firm officials are expected to offer vigorous opposition to proposed regulations on their operations at a public hearing Monday at 10 a. m. in the board room of the District Building.

Jeff Lichtenberg, general counsel for the Washington Association of Finance Companies, last night said the organization, which includes 25 local firms, will not object to regulations on across-the-counter loans, but will oppose proposed control of conditional sales contract transactions.

The proposed regulations were prepared by Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester H. Gray, assisted by License Superintendent Chatham T. Nottingham and a committee of the District Bar Association, to clarify present statutes affecting loan firm operations.

Among those scheduled to discuss the regulations Monday are Harold Freeman, president of the Washington Association of Finance Companies; William J. Nolan, a member of the group; Mark H. Rosson, president of the Mark Corp.; Jack Deane, Seaboard Insurance Co.

Godfrey Munter, chairman of the Board of Trade laws and regulation committee and former head of the District Bar Association; Martin F. O'Donoghue, chairman of the Bar Association committee; Francis J. Buckley, committee member, and Louis F. Frick, Southeast Businessmen's Association, also are scheduled to appear.

Lichtenberg said his group had no objection to clarification of regulations on loan firm operations, but would oppose any attempted regulation of sales contract transactions as beyond the jurisdiction of existing legislation.

Crusade in Europe: Eisenhower's Own Story

Ike Wasn't 'Receiving' Captured Nazi Generals

By Dwight D. Eisenhower

This is a condensed serialization of Dwight D. Eisenhower's "Crusade in Europe." It contains highlights of the book to be published November 22, 1948, by Doubleday & Co. Copyrighted by Doubleday & Co., Inc.

VIII

IN DECEMBER we received word that the President of the United States and the Prime Minister of Great Britain, each accompanied by a considerable civil and military staff, would hold a meeting in Casablanca during the month of January. We were directed to make all preparations for the meeting.

I have never learned the exact reasons that led the President and the Prime Minister to choose Casablanca as the location for the conference. Possibly the spot was selected with the idea that Premier Stalin might be induced to come that far to join in a conference; possibly the President and Prime Minister saw certain psychological advantages in meeting at a place so lately seized by Allied forces.

At the time it seemed to us a risky thing to do, both because hostile bombers were occasionally visiting that area and because there were many dissident elements in the population, including numbers of fanatics who might be expected to undertake any kind of extreme action. Preparations for the meeting involved anxious care and a very considerable amount of work, not the least of which was spent to preserve secrecy.

The conference convened on schedule. During the course of its deliberations a number of British and American officers of all services were called before it in the role of professional witnesses. I spent a complete day at the conference, after a journey that suddenly and unexpectedly became somewhat hazardous owing to the loss of two engines. Under orders of the pilot, Capt. Jock Reedy, we flew the last 50 miles of the journey with all the passengers standing by the nearest exits, equipped in parachutes and ready to jump on an instant's notice. With an anxious thought for an old football knee, I was delighted that I did not have to adopt this method of disembarkation.

Uplift of Adventure

I HAD long talks with General Marshall, the Prime Minister and others. In the early evening the President sent word that he would like to see me alone. This was one of several intimate and private conversations I had with Mr. Roosevelt during the war. His optimism and buoyancy, amounting almost to lightheartedness, I attributed to the atmosphere of adventure attached to the Casablanca expedition.

Successful in shaking loose for a few days many of the burdens of state, he seemed to experience a tremendous uplift from the fact that he had secretly slipped away from Washington and was engaged in a historic meeting on territory that only two months before had been a battleground. While he recognized the seriousness of the war problems still facing the Allies, much of his comment dealt with the distant future, the posthostilities tasks, including disposition of colonies and territories.

He speculated at length on the possibility of France's regaining her ancient position of prestige and power in Europe and on this point was very pessimistic. As a consequence, his mind was wrestling with the questions of methods for controlling certain strategic points in the French Empire which he felt that the country might no longer be able to hold.

We went over in detail the military and political developments of the preceding 10 weeks; he was obviously and outspokenly delighted with the progress we had made. However, when I outlined some of the possibilities for reverses that the winter held for us, his manner indicated that he thought I took this too seriously. While both of us were aware that the Axis forces in Africa could not permanently withstand the pincers effect that Gen. Sir Harold R. L. G. Alexander's forces and our own were developing, President Roosevelt's estimate of the final collapse was, in my opinion, too sanguine by many weeks.

Under his insistence that I name a date, I finally blurted out my most miraculous guess of the war. "May 15," I said. Shortly thereafter I told Alexander of this and he, with a smile, said that in answer to the same question at the conference he had replied, "May 30."

Bent on Compulsion

I FOUND that the President, in his consideration of current African problems, did not always distinguish clearly between the military occupation of enemy territory and the situation in which we found ourselves in North Africa. He constantly referred to plans and proposals affecting the local population, the French army and governmental officials in terms of orders, instructions and compulsion.

It was necessary to remind him that from the outset we had operated under policies requiring us to gain and use an ally—that, far from governing a conquered country, we were attempting only to force a gradual widening of the base of government, with the final objective of turning all internal affairs over to popular control.

What bet did Churchill lose to Eisenhower on the capture of Pantelleria? (See Monday's installment.)

What general, who later commanded a famous airborne division, made a secret and adventurous trip to Rome to talk peace with Badoglio? (See next Tuesday's installment.)

To whom did Churchill promise command of the Normandy invasion before it was agreed that the job must go to an American? (See Wednesday's installment.)

How did Roosevelt and Eisenhower disagree on plans for the occupation of Germany by the several allies? (See Thursday's installment.)

What provoked the outspoken Patton to criticize Eisenhower, his long-suffering friend and defender? (See Friday's installment.)

How did King George prevent Churchill from overriding Eisenhower and participating in the D-Day crossing? (See Saturday's installment.)

To me, the most satisfying part of the whole conversation was the assurance I gained that the President firmly adhered to our basic concept of European strategy, namely the cross-channel invasion. He was certain that great results would flow from the spring and summer campaigns in the Mediterranean but he properly continued to look upon these as preliminaries to, and in support of, the great venture which had been agreed upon almost a year before as the true line of Allied effort for accomplishing the defeat of Germany.

When I later called upon the Prime Minister I was delighted to get a similar assurance. He said, "General, I have heard here that we British are planning to scuttle Roundup. This is not so. I have given my word and I shall keep it. But now we have a glorious opportunity before us; we must not fail to seize it. When the time comes you will find the British ready to do their part in the other operation." Roundup was the code name that was later changed to Overlord.

I departed from Algiers just after midnight on February 12, and, holding several conferences on the way, arrived at General Fredendall's headquarters on the afternoon of the thirteenth. It was my first trip as a four-star general, to which temporary grade I was promoted on February 11. I was still a lieutenant colonel in the Regular Army.

Days Against Hours

I FOUND a number of things that were disturbing. The first of these was a certain complacency, illustrated by an unconscionable delay in perfecting defensive positions in the passes. Lack of training and experience on the part of commanders was responsible.

At one point where mine fields were not yet planted the excuse was given that the defending infantry had been present in the area only two days. The commander explained, with an air of pride, that he had prepared a map for his mine defense and would start next day to put out the mines. Our experience in north Tunisia had been that the enemy was able to prepare a strong defensive position ready to resist counterattack within two hours after his arrival on the spot.

I spent the remainder of an exhausting night conferring with commanders and noting the matters that I wanted to take up with General Fredendall. Our little inspecting party started back before dawn, but we were delayed at Sbeitla by an outbreak of sporadic firing ahead of us.

After a reconnaissance in force, in which my aide, Captain Lee, and Lieutenant Colonel Akers composed the assault wave, while I with a .45 formed the mobile reserve, we remounted our cars and made our way through the town without incident. A short time later my driver fell asleep and we ended up in a shallow ditch, but with no casualties. Upon arrival at corps headquarters I found that the German attack had already struck. It was too late to make changes in dispositions.

Realizing by nightfall that reinforcements in men and equipment would be needed quickly and urgently, I hastened back to headquarters to hurry them forward. We scraped the barrel and then I started back to the front.

During the withdrawal the Americans fought a series of ineffective, though gallant, delaying actions on the way back toward Kasserine Pass, a spot clearly indicated as one to be strongly held. But there was a local lack of appreciation of exactly what was happening, and the troops assigned were neither numerous enough nor skillful enough to hold that strong position. The enemy armor pushed on through the hastily constructed defense in the pass.

Patton Remembered Lee

FINALLY, however, in spite of surprise and relatively large losses, our troops rallied in good fashion and fell back to cover the important center of Tebessa and the routes leading northward from Kasserine toward Le Kef.

The enemy's advance, by the twenty-second, was completely stalled. George Patton, who always liked to bring up historical precedent, remarked, "Well, Von Arnim should have read about Lee's attack at Fort Stedman." There, outside Petersburg, the last desperate Confederate counterattack was stopped and driven back in bloody retreat by strong Union reserves.

On the evening of the twenty-second I discussed the situation personally with General Fredendall and told him that the enemy was no longer capable of offensive action. I informed him that he was perfectly safe in taking any reasonable risk in launching local counterattacks that could be properly supported by his artillery.

By next morning it became apparent to everybody that the German was beginning his retreat. The enemy moved rapidly by night and, favored by cloud cover during the day, successfully withdrew a large part of his attacking force.

General Eisenhower and Gen. Henri Giraud, commander of the French forces, ride to the saluting base in Tunis to review the victory parade after it was all over in North Africa. It was June 5, 1943, and D-Day was one year distant

Technically, our embarrassment resulted from four principal causes. The first and vastly most important of these was the inescapable conditions resulting from failure in our long-shot gamble to capture Tunis quickly.

The second major reason was faulty work by intelligence agencies. Staffs were too prone to take one isolated piece of intelligence in which they implicitly believed and to shut their eyes to any contrary possibility.

The third reason was the failure to comprehend clearly the capabilities of the enemy and the best measures for meeting them.

A fourth cause was greenness, particularly among commanders. The American divisions involved had not had the benefit of the intensive training programs instituted in the United States following the actual outbreak of the war. They were mainly divisions that had been quickly shipped to the United Kingdom, and since transportation facilities had not yet acquired their later efficiency, they had been separated from their organic equipment for long periods.

Losses Were Equalized

THESE lessons were dearly bought, but they were valuable. Eventually the cost was reduced, since most of our personnel losses were in prisoners, whom we largely recovered at the end of the war. We suffered casualties in personnel and equipment, but by the time the enemy had succeeded in retiring to his former positions his losses in both categories were equal to ours. American losses from February 14 to 23 were 192 killed, 2624 wounded, 2459 prisoners and missing.

However, the stage was now almost completely set for the final all-out effort against the enemy position. Improving weather was eagerly seized upon by the air forces to harass the enemy's line of communications between Africa and Italy, and the Axis position grew more precarious. Under our growing air superiority our naval forces also pushed forward their bases and operations and added to the enemy's difficulties.

The results were speedily decisive. On the left the American Second Corps, with some detachments of French "Goumiers," advanced magnificently through tough going and captured Bizerte on May 7. Just to the southward the British First Army, under General Anderson, carrying out the main effort, was in Tunis at approximately the same time that the Second Corps reached Bizerte.

Some fighting continued until the twelfth, but by the following day, except for a few stragglers in the mountains, the only living Germans left in Tunisia were safely within prison cages. The number of prisoners during the last week of the campaign alone reached 240,000, of which approximately 125,000 were German. Included in these captures was all that was left of the Afrika Korps and a number of other crack German and Italian units.

Von Arnim surrendered the German troops, and Field Marshal Messe, in nominal command of the whole force, surrendered the Italian contingent. When Von Arnim was brought through Algiers on his way to captivity, some members of my staff felt that I should observe the custom of bygone days and allow him to call on me.

The custom had its origin in the fact that mercenary soldiers of old had no real enmity toward their opponents. Both sides fought out of a sense of duty or, more probably, for money. A captured commander was likely to be, for weeks or months, the honored guest of his captor. The tradition that all professional soldiers are really comrades in arms has, in tattered form, persisted to this day.

Stark Black and White

FOR me World War II was far too personal a thing to entertain such feelings. Daily as it progressed there grew within me the conviction that as never before in a war between many nations the forces that stood for human good and men's rights were this time confronted by a completely evil conspiracy with which no compromise could be tolerated. Because only by the utter destruction of the Axis was a decent world possible, the war became for me a crusade in the traditional sense of that often misused word.

In this specific instance I told my intelligence officer, Brig. Kenneth Strong, to get any information he possibly could out of the captured generals but that, as far as I was concerned, I was interested only in those who were not yet captured. None would be allowed to call on me.

I pursued the same practice to the end of the war. Not until Field Marshal Jodl signed the surrender terms at Reims in 1945 did I ever speak to a German general, and even then my only words were that he would be held personally and completely responsible for the carrying out of the surrender terms.

"Husky" was the code word used to describe the invasion of Sicily, the next step in the "Crusade in Europe" led by General Eisenhower.

In the ninth installment of his book, which will be published tomorrow, General Eisenhower outlines the plans which were made for this great undertaking. He also names the five pieces of equipment which helped most to win the war, and he describes how he won a bet of 40,000 centimes from Prime Minister Winston Churchill on the number of prisoners captured on Pantelleria.

Soviet Perjury Began 15 Years Ago

By Relman Morin

Associated Press Staff Writer

FIFTEEN years ago this week the United States recognized the Soviet Union, and history entered a first date in the ledger of promises broken by the Russians.

Recognition was accorded November 16, 1933.

It came after eight days of private conversations between President Roosevelt, who had initiated the project, and Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs. Sixteen letters were exchanged. The agreement finally embraced five points.

Two of these were little more than formalities, guaranteeing consular protection and freedom of religious worship for Americans living in Russia. Two others dealt with mutual claims for debts outstanding since World War I.

The fifth was supremely important.

It dealt with propaganda, agitation and activity directed toward the overthrow, by force, of the American Government.

In these succeeding 15 years, it has become one of the most cynical and calculated perjuries in the whole story of international relations.

(Nothing on the anniversary of recognition has been received from Moscow. Litvinoff was replaced as Foreign Commissar by V. M. Molotov in 1939 and the title later was changed to Foreign Minister.

(The Soviet Information Bureau announced in Moscow last February that Molotov replaced Litvinoff "because it was necessary to have at such a responsible post . . . a political leader with greater experience and enjoying greater popularity in the country than M. M. Litvinoff." Little is heard of Litvinoff nowadays.)

In one clause Livinoff pledged as a "fixed policy" of his government:

"To refrain and restrain all persons in government service, and all organizations of the government, from any act, overt or covert, liable in any way whatsoever, to injure the tranquility, prosperity, order or security of the United States . . . and in particular from any act tending to incite or encourage armed intervention or agitation or propaganda having as its aim the violation of the territorial integrity of the United States, or the bringing about by force of a change in the political or social order of the United States."

And so, on November 16, President Roosevelt handed Litvinoff a letter in which he had written: "I trust that our nations may cooperate for their mutual benefit and for the preservation of the peace of the world."

Litvinoff replied in kind.

The newspaper headlines, seen in today's light, make almost tragic reading—"All United States-Russian Issues End With Recognition" . . . "Pact Seen as Boon to Peace" . . . "World Hails Accord."

On the surface, this seemed to be so. The United States had broken relations with Russia in 1917, when the Bolshevists overthrew the government of the czars. Since that time the greatest capitalist nation and the great socialist state had been at loggerheads.

Meanwhile, the American Communist Party was fomenting strikes, agitating, undermining the armed forces and openly proclaiming—at a rally in New York—the imminence of the "American revolution."

But all that was to be ended. The United States and the Soviet Union had entered into full diplomatic partnership.

There were a few dissenters to the general jubilance.

In West Virginia, Congressman Hatfield a Republican, asserted that "in recognizing Russia, we are not only recognizing a government that would destroy our religion but what remains of our democracy."

Representative Fish, a New York Republican, called for legislation to empower the Justice Department to "keep in contact with Communist activities in the United States" and to permit deportation of alien Communists.

In a different and drier vein, Senator Carter Glass of Virginia remarked, "We've gone so far beyond Russia that I'm amazed that Russia is willing to recognize us."

Those were the days of the New Deal, so these statements probably lost weight, in the public mind, by their apparent connection with domestic politics.

Moreover, 1933 was a depression year and the eyes of America were focused on the problems at home.

Very few people seemed to notice the contradiction between Litvinoff's pledge, his statement of Russia's "fixed policy," and the activities of the Comintern in Russia and of the Communist Party in America.

These facts, too, seem now to have passed without notice:

On November 6, 10 days before recognition and the writing of the Russian pledge, the Comintern called the Communist faithful throughout the world to "work for the world revolution and to forge a unified front against world imperialism."

In the same week, an Associated Press correspondent, reporting on censorship in Moscow, cabled that "nothing whatsoever may be said about recognition except just what the Moscow censor wants to be said."

And American Communist leaders were traveling to and from Moscow—on orders from Moscow—to get large sums of money and advice from the Comintern on the means of bringing revolution to this country.

Maxim Litvinoff (left) was greeted by Secretary of State Cordell Hull when the Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs arrived in Washington November 7, 1933, for talks which led to recognition of Russia nine days later

Why was recognition granted against such a background?

The record indicates several reasons. This depression-bound Nation needed foreign trade. Doubtless, too, the anomaly of refusing to recognize the existence of a government that had existed for 16 years influenced the White House.

Pravda, the official newspaper of the Communist Party, as usual was forcibly blunt and unvarnished in its explanation:

"The biggest capitalist powers," it editorialized, "which not long ago tried to neglect the workers and peasants of this country, and moreover attempted to enforce the relations with bayonets, failed, and were compelled to establish normal relations with the Soviet Union."

"It is first our power, economic power and political power and military power. While our country is surrounded by capitalism, those factors have great importance."

In other words, while American leaders found a motif of "peace" in the action, the Russians were emphasizing force, bayonets and power. Their motif was continued struggle.

Fifteen years have passed since the day when "all issues" between the United States and the Soviet Union were ended by recognition. Since then, other promises have been broken in the view of American officials—the promises made at Tehran, Yalta and Potsdam and, more recently, those made in Moscow and disavowed in Berlin.

But November 16, 1933, was the date of the first, the initial, entry on the black record.

Reds Plan Tree-Belts To Alter the Climate

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

THE Soviet government is undertaking to make over the great wheat and rye belt of southern European Russia.

Detailed plans of the impressive program have just reached this country in special printings of Pravda and Izvestia. They fill six newspaper pages, along with a map showing much of the 15-year plan in detail.

The program is more than a soil conservation venture. It envisages changing the climate of the rich wheatlands of the lower Volga, the northern Caucasus and the central Chernozem regions, by diverting, with great forest belts 20 to 40 miles wide, the dry winds from the arid regions to the southeast.

This area is the great bread-grain producing belt of Russia. However, production per acre there is far below production in this country. Much of the area has a limited rainfall—as little as 10 inches a year. To properly understand the problem, the area should be compared to our old Dust Bowl; where the rainfall average is around 15 inches a year.

By diverting the dry winds (Sukhovei) with forest belts, the program hopes to bring in moisture-laden winds from the north, and thus increase the average rainfall.

There is virtually no way to compare the vast Russian moisture and soil conservation program with this country's conservation work. In Russia it is done as one huge, mandatory government project. In this country it is carried out by thousands of conservation districts, with the farmers voluntarily adopting programs applicable to their vicinity and needs.

Although this country has built 25,000 miles of forest belts in recent years, these, too, cannot be compared with the Russian plans. In width they are much smaller.

The area is the scene of recurrent droughts with almost complete crop failures. Naturally, with such a meager rainfall, any slight decrease in one growing year would have such a result. The area cannot be compared with our Great Plains, where rainfall averages about 10 inches a year better.

New Overall Agency

IN setting up its 15-year plan, the Soviet has assigned the task to three of the ministries of the Council of Ministers, Agriculture, Forestry and State Farms. In addition, it set up in the Council of Ministers a new controlling agency over the three old-line ministries for purposes of the shelter belt-forestry parts of the program.

The Council of Ministers sets out the program roughly as follows:

"The frequently recurring droughts in the prairie and timber-prairie regions are causing considerable damage to agriculture of the European USSR.

"At the same time science has shown, and experience of the advanced collective and state farms has confirmed, that with proper practices it is possible to insure high and stable crop yields and to establish a firm base for the development of animal husbandry.

"In order to achieve this, the Council of Ministers deems it necessary to begin in 1949 to introduce systems of agriculture based on the teachings of the greatest Russian agronomists, V. V. Dokuchaef, P. A. Kostichev and V. R. Williams, which have become known as the grassland rotation system of agriculture."

Instructions Are Detailed

THE "decision" then describes the system as including:

1. Planting of protective forest belts on watershed divides (or ridges), on field boundaries, on banks of ravines and gullies, on banks of rivers and lakes and around ponds and reservoirs; also afforestation and stabilization of shifting sands.

2. Proper land planning and introduction of "grassland field rotations" and of "feed crop rotations" with rational utilization of the various classes of land.

3. A proper system of tillage, proper crop management and widespread use of clean summer fallow, fall plowing and early plowing of stubble.

4. Proper application of organic and mineral fertilizers.

5. Use of selected seed, suitable to local conditions.

6. Development of irrigation, utilizing local runoff by means of ponds and reservoirs.

The set of measures ordered, the decision says, will:

1. Constitute a reliable weapon against drought.

2. Increase the fertility of soils.

3. Help to achieve high and stable crop yields.

4. Prevent soil erosion by floods and winds, arrest shifting sands and promote a more rational utilization of land.

At the same time "this system will furnish the basis for harmonious development of field husbandry, livestock breeding and other branches of farming, and ensure considerable progress in marketing farm production."

Forests in 'Layers'

THE program will cover about 300 million acres of the richest lands of the Ukraine, Crimea and neighboring regions—often referred to as the breadbasket of Europe.

A system of large state protective forest zones is to be created between 1950 and 1956, for the purpose "of protecting crops from the disastrous effects of dry winds, preventing erosion of the fertile soils of the Volga area, in the northern Caucasus and the blacksoil regions of central Russia."

These large forest zones also, according to the decision, are designed to improve "river and climatic conditions of these districts."

These eight zones will stretch for 600 miles along the Volga, the northern Donets River, the Don and Ural Rivers and from the Ural Mountains to the Caspian Sea.

Each state forest zone will consist of several belts 20 to 40 miles wide. The total length of the protective forest zones will be about 3300 miles.

The description of the belts includes a surprisingly detailed list of trees and shrubs to be used in each of them.

14-Million Acre Job

IN addition to the forest belts, shelter belts will be grown on collective and state farms to "(1) insure high yields, (2) to overcome the disastrous effects of dry winds, (3) to improve water regimen and (4) to eliminate water and wind erosion in the prairie and timber-prairie regions."

Between 1948 and 1956, the plan calls for the planting of 14,100,000 acres of such shelter belts. The areas to be so planted are set out in the directive in minute detail.

The directive states that in order to create long-living, stable shelter belts which are effective in early stages of growth, the plantings will include long-lived as well as rapidly-growing types of trees.

In the steppe regions, special emphasis is placed on propagation of oak as a valuable long-living species.

The plantings will include 10 to 15 per cent fruit trees and fruit-bearing shrubs, to be used in 19 different soil and climatic regions.

Eucalyptus is recommended along with other species around ponds, reservoirs, irrigation canals and in field shelter belts in the Krasnodar region, the Crimea and the southern Ukraine.

The plan provides for the setting up of government nurseries to provide planting stock, and for the assignment of labor to 5 to 10 year jobs on the projects.

In sandy areas, the agencies are instructed to plant a hybrid sorghum and certain grasses to convert them into pastures and meadows. Provision is made for sorghum seed for 50,000 acres in 1950 and 247,000 acres in 1951.

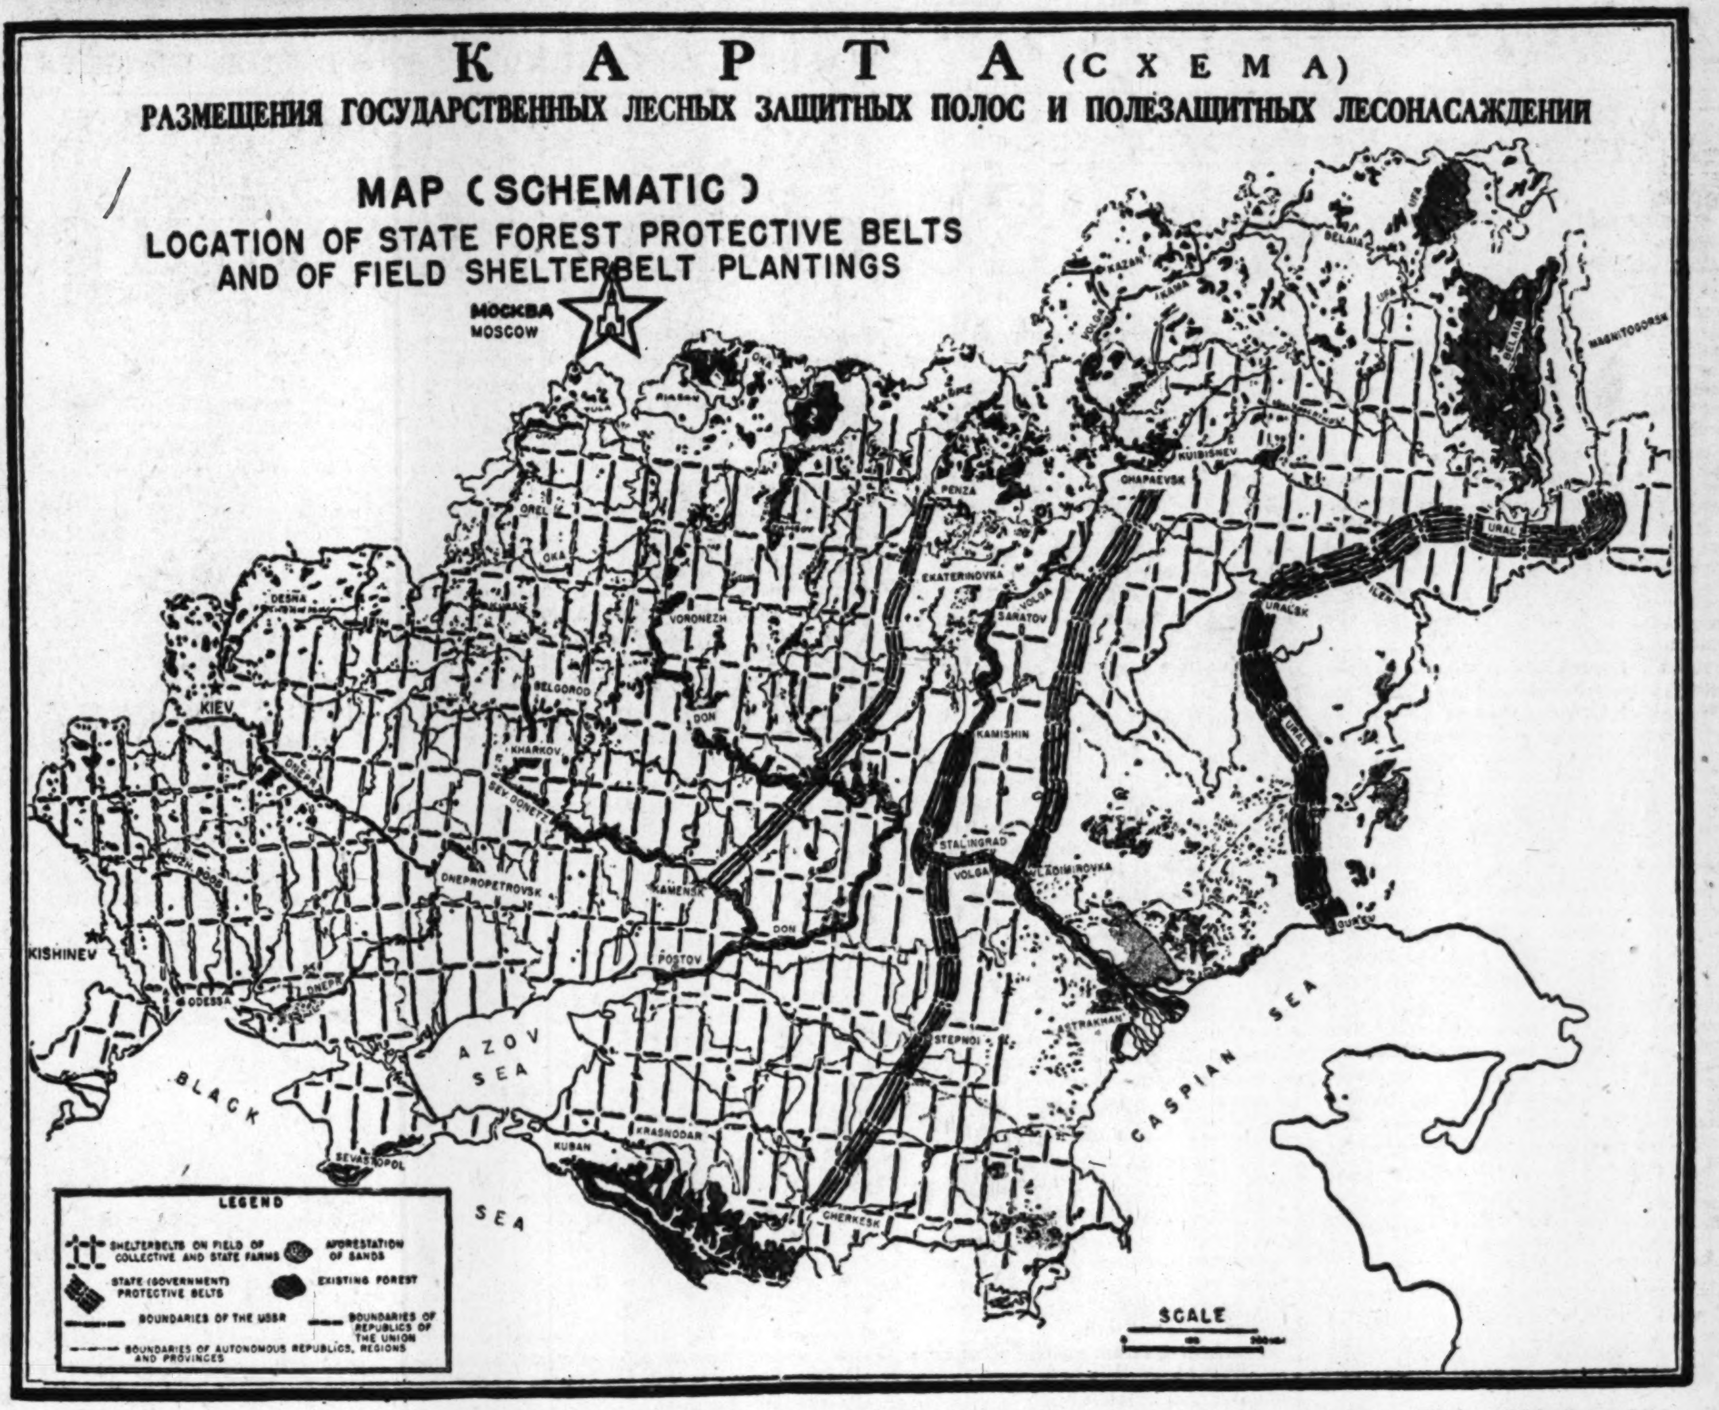
The decision orders "field grass rotations" or cropland rotations with summer fallow and two or more years of perennial legumes and grasses. It also provides for "meadow rotations," with five to seven years of perennial legumes and grasses followed by about two years of grain and row crops.

A detailed schedule for introducing this program on 77,509 collective farms is given. It shows the amount of land to be treated each season for the full 15 years.

The rotation plans also call for plowing, planting and cultivating on contours, and the use of contour buffer strips of perennial grasses—known in this country as "strip-cropping."

In order to promote extensive irrigation with waste water on collective and state farms, the decision calls for the creation of numerous ponds and reservoirs in natural depressions at river sources, ditches and ravines. It calls for reservoirs at small rivers to regulate water for irrigation, for promotion of fisheries and for the production of hydroelectric power.

Altogether, 44,228 ponds and reservoirs are called for.



The above map, reproduced and translated from Izvestia, shows in detail the eight great forest belts, and the hundreds of farm-size shelter belts, planned by the government as a 15-year climate-changing project for southern European Russia. Thousands of small ponds, reservoirs, etc., to store water for irrigation, hydroelectric power and moisture conservation, are not shown. The small blocks on the map are shelter belts of lumber and fruit trees protecting individual farms

Witty, Able Philip Doing a Good Job as Royal 'Front Man'

By Glen Williams
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Nov. 13.—A sudden rain broke over the crowd just as Prince Philip stepped from his car to open a British Legion fete.

A long speech while the audience got soaked? Not at all. Philip, grinning and declining an umbrella, opened the affair with two brisk sentences—and took off. The crowd cheered until his car was out of sight.

The incident typifies Philip and his common touch handling of his job as he nears the end of his first year as Princess Elizabeth's husband.

Philip and Elizabeth observe their first wedding anniversary November 20. While awaiting confinement, Elizabeth pretty much retired from public life. Philip suddenly became the most spotlighted member of the royal family.

The general opinion is that he's doing a good job in the tasks that fall to him as husband of the heiress-presumptive to the throne.

He hardly ever has a day off. In one October week he filled six formal engagements—including two in one day.

Crashed the Headlines

UNTIL HIS wedding day, things were just the other way around. Philip carefully kept himself out of the public eye and avoided British newsmen like poison. All except for one incident.

That was the time he flipped his speedy little roadster into a ditch while racing along the 90 miles that separated his naval station from a date with Elizabeth.

Now the roadster is gone. He turned it over to Michael "Mike" Parker, youthful, Australian-born navy lieutenant who is the Prince's equerry. Philip drives a sedate sedan, but still whips it around zestfully.

More and more responsibility as a popular representative of the royal family has mantled his square shoulders. But the increased burdens have not damped youthful exuberance or dulled his humor.

He's cagey with reporters. Asked once if he and Elizabeth would visit the United States, he said: "It's a wonderful idea."

"When?" the reporter pressed.

"I've no idea," he said, softening his newsless answer with a broad grin.

Philip's marriage put him in a position where he must always act like a king, yet never even hint that he has any hand in ruling a kingdom.

From another age he has a model to steer by—the behavior of Prince Albert, husband of Queen Victoria. Times and manners have changed much since then, but Philip is reading the letters and speeches of Albert for whatever guidance they may contain.

He has raided the royal library at Windsor Castle for tomes like Bagehot's "English Constitution" and Erskine May's "Parliamentary Practice" to learn the fundamental facts about British government.

Good at Semantics

PHILIP has become noted for his ability to make short, snappy, witty speeches that have created considerable demand for him at public gatherings.

His voice is a deep baritone. It never shows a tremor of self-consciousness or stage-fright.

In a speech before the Canada Club, he coined a phrase that was bound to please all the dominions. Instead of referring stuffily to Britain as the "mother country," he called this nation "the metropolitan dominion."

He took his seat in the House of Lords in July, attended the semistate opening of a special session of Parliament. He carefully chose a seat in politically neutral territory, on the end of the Liberal Party bench, and pumped details of procedure out of learned Lord Samuel.

Phillip spent two days learning the Highland Reel during the royal family's summer holiday in Scotland. It's one of Elizabeth's favorite dances.

He joined London's most famous squash racquets club—the same one the Prince of Wales, now the Duke of Windsor, belonged to. Sunningdale Golf Club, where Windsor and King George both have played, made him an honorary member.

He likes horse racing, and while he and Elizabeth were visiting Paris last May they went to watch the ponies run at famed Longchamps track. The Duke picked one winner, one third and an outright loser for a small net profit on the day.

One of Ascot track's autumn stakes—a late test for 2-year-old fillies—has been renamed for him. It's called "the Duke of Edinburgh Stakes," for Philip is Duke of Edinburgh as well as a Prince.

Pleased the Irish

THE PRINCE is more than a spectator at sports. He is an all-round athlete, able to compete at cricket, soccer, golf, tennis, squash racquets, shooting—or even that popular indoor British game of darts, which is played mainly in the pubs.

Philip knows how to make friends easily—and even made some in crown-hating Eire by becoming the first member of the royal family to visit there since Eire became independent.

It happened while Philip was taking a naval short course in Northern Ireland, which is part of the kingdom. One night he and eight sailor buddies slipped over the border into Donegal.

They stopped at a tavern and, while a crowd of grinning Irishmen gathered outside, downed a tremendous unrationed dinner of steak, eggs, French fries and beer.

"I never thought I'd see the day," gasped the old Irish cook who prepared the meal.

After watching Philip operate for nine months, the London Star suggested that the Prince would be just the man to lead a national production drive.

"Surely he is the ideal man for the biggest job Britain has to offer to any leader today," the paper said. "It is a job for youth, energy, charm, brains and devotion. The Duke has them all."

The idea got no farther than the paper's editorial. But the Prince will have more and more responsibility, particularly as a royal representative at home while the King and Queen are making their royal tour of Australia next year.

After that, like his redoubtable uncle, Lord Mountbatten, Philip is said to want to go back to sea again and advance his career as a naval officer.

Kurds Tell Of 'Ship' on Mount Ararat

By Edwin B. Greenwald
Associated Press Staff Writer

ISTANBUL, Nov. 13.—The petrified remains of an object which peasants insist resembles a ship has been found high up Mount Ararat, Biblical landing place of Noah's Ark.

Apparently hidden for centuries, it came to light last summer when unusually warm weather melted away an ancient mantle of snow and ice.

Shukru Asena, 69-year-old farmer who owns large acreage in that far off eastern frontier district, told about the discovery in an unheralded visit to the Associated Press Bureau here. This is his story:

Early in September a Kurdish farmer named Reshit was about two-thirds of the way up the 16,000-foot peak when he came upon an object he never had seen before, although he had been up the mountain many times. It was the prow of a ship.

With his dagger, Reshit tried to break off a piece of the prow. It would not break. It was blackened with age. Reshit insisted it was not a simple rock formation.

He spread the word among little villages at the base of the mountain and peasants began climbing up to see the thing he had found. Each said it was a ship.

There is no folklore there about the Ark, Shukru Bey said, and persons who saw Reshit's find came away in great surprise. There are no cameras out in that wild country where Turkey, Russia and Iran meet, hence no one came away with a picture. The snows have begun falling again, perhaps have covered it by now.

Prohibition's Too Expensive

By Steven V. David
Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW DELHI, Nov. 13.—Inflation and the need for revenue are holding up realization of a favorite dream of the Congress Party—total prohibition throughout India.

The central government, which is run by the party, has agreed with a group of economists that provinces should "go slow" on prohibition. The economists say liquor drains off some of the rupees which might otherwise be thrown into the battle for consumer goods.

Prohibition also would mean the loss of large liquor taxes to each province, and this might bring provincial requests for government loans. The central government itself would lose approximately 25 million rupees a year from duty on imported liquor.

Some Arid Days

NOT all the provinces have listened to the recommendation to go slow. Madras and East Punjab inaugurated total prohibition October 2—birth date of Gandhi. Other provinces have partial prohibition; liquor cannot be purchased on certain days of the week.

Oddly, the Indian army is wet. The troops are issued daily rations of rum.

The most drastic effects of prohibition would not be felt in the cocktail bars of Bombay, Calcutta and Delhi, but in the countryside. Poverty-stricken villagers drink toddy and the more potent arrack as part of their diet.

Putting an end to the manufacture and consumption of toddy and arrack would be no small task. Toddy is made from coconuts and arrack from a variety of palm. Both grow practically in the back yards of south Indians. In the north country liquor is made from rice and that likewise might be hard to stop.

Urban dwellers in dry areas have a way out, too. In most places, liquor is made available to persons who sign statements that they are confirmed alcoholics. However, this is a good way to lose a driver's license.

Some Substitute Needed

ONE of India's driest drys is its Governor-General, Chakravarti Rajagopalachari. He started prohibition in India by introducing it in some districts of Madras Province when he was Premier. One of his first acts on assuming the Governor-Generalship was to order the disposal of the liquor stocks in the Government House cellar.

The Governor-General, however, feels that some form of stimulation must be provided in place of drink.

"I have seen cocktail parties made to go through soft drinks," he said in a recent message, "but I could plainly see that in spite of their pretension to cheerfulness, they were really most miserable and were anxious to end the play as soon as possible.

"Something that can stimulate the nerve of joy would have to replace alcohol at such gatherings. It may be a drink or it may be a form of sport or some other occupation which would give a healthy opportunity for bringing out the capacity to enjoy human company."

The substitute has not yet been found. Government receptions now feature lemon squash and a weak, reddish liquid no one has been able to identify. Indian diplomats overseas also have been ordered to serve non-intoxicating drinks, a move which some Indians fear is not likely to improve international relations.

A Sound National Health Program, and How to Finance It

By Agnes E. Meyer

From an address delivered November 9 before the seventy-sixth annual meeting of the American Public Health Association at Boston to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the United States Public Health Service.

NONE of our Federal agencies deserves the commendation and gratitude of the American people more than the United States Public Health Service. My respect for its contribution to the Nation's stability was acquired during the war. As I studied the social chaos that prevailed in all of our major production centers, the field men of the Public Health Service under the wise leadership of Dr. Parran, seemed to be the only people who knew exactly what they were to do and how to do it.

What I admired most about their outstanding achievements was the effectiveness with which this Federal agency worked with State and local governments, with voluntary organizations and with the numerous Army and Navy officials. The decentralized administrative policies of the Public Health Service are, in fact, the best example we possess that Federal leadership of State and local endeavor can be achieved without Federal domination.

In planning for a national health program, nothing is more important than the preservation of this thoroughly American tradition of Federal, State and community cooperation, if our country is to remain a republic. The battle over the organization of a Nation-wide health program has been so violent because its solution will go to the roots of our existence as a Nation of freemen. What we must try to achieve is health not only of the individual but of society itself.

Democratic ends can be realized only by democratic means. Our people must face the fact that if they want truly civilized, humane and serviceable institutions, if they want health in its widest aspects, mental, physical, moral and even political, then they must achieve them in their own good way. Assuredly they will have lost their most cherished characteristics—their individualism, independence and freedom—if they meekly allow the experts to set the patterns for their thinking and action. They must make their own institutions, or their institutions will make them. Therefore, this problem of a Nation-wide health program is a question on which every responsible citizen must take a stand, for the answer to it will affect the whole destiny of our Nation.

An Election Lesson

YET THE medical groups who seem to think they are defending individualism and freedom when they blindly oppose every cooperative endeavor of the lay public must realize that we have a mass health problem on our hands and the mass of the people want action. And action there will be whether right or wrong. The election results are clear proof of this. As a Republican who testified fruitlessly before the Eightieth Congress on behalf of various welfare measures, I am convinced that the overwhelming Republican defeat was due mostly to the obstruction of social progress by the House leadership. I hope the American Medical Association will take the lesson to heart. At present the people still look to the medical profession and to you public health workers for guidance and leadership out of their confusion, but whether they get it or not, they will not be denied the elementary rights to which they feel every American citizen is entitled.

It is essential that the public should be informed on the actual progress toward sound public health planning that already exists in many of our States, and on a Nation-wide scale. Many people who advocate a revolutionary, overcentralized, Federally dominated organization for health protection, do so only because they see no other alternatives. Therefore, the best service I can render here is to outline our most constructive experiments toward a national health program as well as it can be done in a few minutes.

Since health is a function of the community's total way of life, the furtherance of health is dependent in our democratic Nation upon local initiative, support and participation of the entire community. It is also dependent upon such closely related factors as education, housing, nutrition and a basic standard of living. Therefore the first step toward dynamic planning for health is the formation of State and local citizens' councils, wherever they do not already exist, to serve as the conscience of the community on all matters of the general welfare.

These councils should bring together lay and professional groups and individuals for the study and solution of their health problems, and for the correlation of all services affecting health. These councils should be appointed by the Governor or mayor if their reports are to carry weight with officialdom and with the people. They should join forces with local health departments and with the State hospital authorities appointed by the Governors under Public Law 725. This would be the quickest way to achieve cooperation between public and private endeavor and the surest method of eliminating the hostility between the expert and the civic leader that is now one of our chief handicaps toward social progress. These councils should gather factual data to establish existing health needs and develop methods for the effective implementation of planning.

Satisfaction of Sharing

ONLY by the encouragement of this grass-roots movement, only through intimate, face-to-face association and the satisfactions to be derived from a sense of sharing in creative activity, can we check the frightful impersonality of the centrifugal forces that make for socialism and get the necessary impetus behind a sound, decentralized national health program. At the same time, our people would realize the difficulties involved in the organization, administration and financing of a national health program that will be effective while remaining responsive to changing community needs and to the scientific progress of medical care.

The utopian promises of compulsory national health insurance have led some of our people to think that all we need is Federal legislation to implement it and, presto, every medical need will be met. Advocates of the Murray-Wagner-Dingell bill should never lose sight of the hard truth that a national compulsory insurance program supplies merely organization and money but does not supply hospitals, doctors, nurses, dentists and other essential personnel.

If our citizens learn by direct participation in planning for their own health that the problem is closely enmeshed with their daily lives and with the availability of local facilities, they will be sure to reject authoritarian overcentralized plans that might destroy the very aims they seek.

Since local health departments meeting minimum standards are now available to no more than one third of the country, these citizens' councils should demand that this basic service be made available to all the people without delay. Dr. Haven Emerson asserts that "not more than 4 or 5 per cent of our people are today receiving a local public health service that measures up to the simplest demands of science and to an art of preventive medicine which our state of general culture has a right to expect."

A major concern, and a major conquest, of the United States Public Health Service in its 150-year history, has been tuberculosis. It isn't beaten yet, but it isn't the killer it once was. Hundreds of USPHS mobile units like the one above catch the disease in time in towns, hamlets and rural areas of the country

He estimates that about 1200 such local health departments staffed with qualified persons would suffice to cover our entire continental population instead of some 18,000 now operating under frequently inferior conditions of personnel and serving but 67 per cent of the population. We must insist upon the total coverage of our people by local health units, capable of putting the science of preventive medicine to work for the whole social structure. There is not a single goal, whether in the field of public health service, of medical care, of nutrition, of education in health, that can function until we achieve these health departments in each community.

State Responsibility

DR. EMERSON estimates that between 55,000 and 60,000 employes will be required to staff these 1200 local health departments in order to give the minimum health service to all the people.

That means the immediate recruiting and training of skilled people in adequate numbers. It will also take legislation on local, State and Federal levels to finance the program. A bill to help the States finance these local health units on a matching basis was introduced in the last Congress. But most of our States can and should finance their own health departments. Yet Federal aid will certainly be needed in some 12 of our less productive States.

What we need to determine the financial responsibility in this and all other welfare programs is a clarification of the administrative and tax relationships between the Federal, State and local governments. If we do not hasten to clarify these relationships, we shall find it very difficult if not impossible to do so in the future. For we shall find ourselves too deeply committed to overcentralization and a top-heavy bureaucracy, simply because the taxing power is too heavily weighted in favor of the Federal Government.

To improve the coordination of health facilities in State and local governments, all major Federal health agencies should be grouped together under the United States Public Health Service. Federal, State and local health agencies must also work more closely with the public schools, and our educational system everywhere should be improved and equalized as between geographical areas. Health without education and education without health are both impossible. Ignorance and bad health go together.

In order to have fewer sick people and fewer people with sicknesses, development of a preventive health program, based upon constant research, should go hand in hand if not have precedence over the expansion of curative facilities. In deciding this question of priority, our whole philosophy of democratic living is involved. Have we positive aims for the reinvigoration of the human mind, body and spirit, or are we merely interested in alleviation of the suffering created to a great extent by our social defects?

Far too much of our welfare work is now devoted to compensating people for misfortune that might have been prevented. To be sure, we must protect the sick, the weak and the incompetent. But it is high time we spend more of our energies on protecting the well, the strong and the talented if our Nation is ever going to develop its fullest human, civic and ethicopolitical capacities. If we are not to build a gigantic centralized welfare-state in which the politicians take over the role of guardians, our liberty must be the means of creating and promoting the superior individual.

After all, the Department of Agriculture spends billions for the promotion of the health of cattle and the productivity of the soil. It would pay infinitely greater dividends in cold cash, to say nothing of higher values, to promote the total well-being and the productivity of our human resources. Just as the county agent of the Department of Agriculture puts the latest expert knowledge on agriculture at the disposal of the farmer, so the local health officer must put the fruits of research on preventive medical care at the disposal of the people as a whole. This preventive program must also become the link between the individual and the curative organizations.

Cities' Responsibility

HOW THEN do we develop our hospital system so that its services are accessible to all the people and how do we finance such services?

To salvage the unique system of hospital services and connected medical training that we now have is a first essential step. The enormous cost of free hospital care for relief patients was formerly met in these voluntary institutions by payments of the middle and upper income groups and by voluntary gifts. Now these sources of income are drying up while the various costs are skyrocketing.

In most big cities, the municipal governments already pay part of the free care of the indigent. It seems obvious that every municipality should now pay the total cost for the treatment of its relief cases, whether in the hospital or for out-patient services. In some cities the States will have to supplement the city payments in proportion to the local tax resources. If the hospitals are relieved of the heavy costs of free care, they could use their endowment funds and other financial resources to reduce charges very considerably for the lower and middle income groups.

To make sure that charges to the middle income groups will be lowered as the States and municipalities take over the total cost of free care, the cost-statements of voluntary hospitals that furnish the basis on which the State pays the hospital for its services, should be subject to review by the State auditor. This practice already exists in several States. In Maryland, for example, the State, county and cities have already accepted the responsibility for the relief load, though they do not as yet carry it in full. The machinery is a contractual relationship between the hospitals and the Board of Health.

By this gradual, evolutionary approach toward the redistribution of hospital costs, Dr. Lowell J. Reed, vice president of Johns Hopkins University, is convinced, better care can be secured for the average person at a price he can pay than by a Nation-wide revolutionary upheaval in the financing and distribution of medical services.

Since the hospital is the basis of medical care, the Federal Government cannot at present underpin a national health program more soundly than by expanding the hospital facilities of the country through the Hospital Survey and Construction Act. If the plan for the decentralization of hospital care is carried out, we would then have the large central hospital with its medical school, making available its specialized facilities to the subsidiary area hospital, to the smaller community hospital, and to the local health center.

All the benefits that modern medicine has to offer would be channeled from the large modern medical centers to the remotest rural hamlet. From the top down would flow an educational program, both in-service and pre-service, for all types of health personnel—physicians, dentists, nurses, technicians, and others. On the other hand there would be a referral of patients from the small community health center to the area or community hospital, to the large medical center.

The introduction of planning for hospital and other health service on a regional basis demands the immediate integration of the Army and Navy hospitals and the veterans' hospitals with those to be constructed under the Hospital Survey and Construction Act.

At present the Government is not doing as well as it should by the long-stay patients, the mentally and chronically ill and the tubercular cases. The Commission on Hospital Care has pointed out that the care of mental illness and chronic diseases should be decentralized and integrated into the general health program of each community hospital, with special emphasis on prevention. "When that happens," said Dr. Graham L. Davis, "those diseases will disappear as major health problems."

In order that the Hospital Survey and Construction Act may serve the needs of the entire Nation, its appropriations should be increased and its provisions for financing of construction and administration amended. The areas with inadequate tax resources cannot possibly carry two thirds of the load and therefore cannot benefit from the act in its present form.

Health Insurance

IF WE take for granted that the best medical care shall be available to all of our people, how is it to be financed for low-income groups?

I have time to consider the thorny problem of compulsory versus voluntary insurance only in its broadest aspects. The construction of adequate hospital facilities and the training of sufficient personnel to staff them must have first call on public funds, for no system of insurance, voluntary or compulsory, can have validity without them. If we rush into compulsory national insurance, the drain on public funds would be so great that the coverage of the Nation with properly staffed health departments and the Nation-wide implementation of the Hospital Survey and Construction Act would be impeded if not impossible.

On the other hand, it is also a fact that we shall be forced to accept compulsory national health insurance before very long, unless we make a greater success of voluntary health insurance without delay, especially for the low-income groups. The fear of sickness and the high cost of modern medical care must be lifted from the minds of our people. To achieve this, the medical profession must throw itself wholeheartedly behind all cooperative insurance plans whether for medical service or hospitalization.

The local medical societies must encourage instead of blocking the efforts of the Blue Shield to establish standards and to develop complete coverage of medical service. The various independent insurance systems in industry, labor unions, and other groups have come into being only because the Blue Shield has not improved the range and quality of its medical care. The first requisite is a predominance of laymen on the local boards.

Standards Essential

IT IS significant that the Blue Shield, which is dominated by doctors, has no standards of medical care, whereas the best cooperative insurance groups under lay control have succeeded in establishing standards over the opposition of the medical profession. As a matter of fact, the pretensions of the American Medical Association that the doctors must control the development of a national health program if it is not to create what Dr. Fishbein calls "peasant medicine," cannot be substantiated by experience. The voluntary hospitals, America's pride, which are managed by lay boards, have always insisted upon standards, whereas the proprietary hospitals, whose boards lack consumer representation, are mushrooming all over the country, because they have no standards and any doctor with a license can work in them regardless of his qualifications.

With the wholehearted cooperation of the American Medical Association, the Blue Cross and especially the weaker Blue Shield could raise the standard of medical care all over the country. The innumerable voluntary insurance plans if pulled together under the Blue Cross and the Blue Shield would then create the two strong Nation-wide insurance organizations we need. Moreover, insurance groups as vast as this could modify their rates for various parts of the country and reduce the rates for the membership as a whole. The names of these organizations do not matter. The important thing is that we achieve a unified system.

Health education and national health programs must be built from the community upward. But the process need not be slow if the State and Federal Public Health officials as well as the medical profession do their share and mesh their efforts with those of the home-town folks. With determination, applied intelligence and cooperative effort on every government level, and between civic and professional leaders, we can transform the health picture in this country within five years and make it possible for every American family to obtain the medical service it needs, and for every American child to develop its maximum potentialities. We must all work together loyally and prove that democratic methods can deal effectively and quickly with all of the dynamic problems of the day.

The March Of Science

By Alton L. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Reporter

BOSTON, Nov. 13.—You can blow pictures of mountain peaks on a machine at Boston University School of Medicine that helps detect asthma.

If your breathing is normal, the outlines of the mountains will be tall and thin, and will look much like a row of pickets in a fence. But if you have asthma, the mountains will be much shorter and wider. The worse the attack, the shorter and wider the mountain outlines.

The breathing machine is being used in studies of asthma by Dr. Francis C. Lowell, associate professor of medicine, and Drs. Irving W. Schiller, William Franklin and Clarence Denton.

It helps tell just how sensitive an asthmatic person is to things that can produce attacks. It also shows how effective various drugs are in relieving attacks.

The machine measures a person's ability to blow out his breath. It's a metabolism machine so arranged as to produce inky lines on a moving drum of graph paper. The person breathes out through a hose, and the force and amount of air expelled makes the pen trace an upward curve. The curve falls down to a base line between each breath.

The normal person can trace out high, narrow peaks in the curves. They are high because he has strong ability to expel air, and are narrow because he can breathe and expel air quickly.

The asthmatic has trouble expelling as much air, or doing it as often and as quickly. His trouble comes, apparently, from narrowing of the bronchial tubes during asthmatic attacks. The curves he makes show how much his breathing ability is impaired, and thus how bad the attack is.

To test sensitivity, Dr. Lowell and his associates use extracts of various pollens, or other substances. The patient takes a whiff or two of these from an atomizer. The effect of each can be measured on the breathing machine. The tests can be made without producing severe attacks of asthma.

The test is faster and more accurate than skin tests, in which the suspected asthma-producing extracts are injected under the skin, Dr. Lowell said. Some persons get skin reactions from things that won't give them asthma when they are breathed.

If the person gets asthma from some irritant, the machine quickly shows how effective various drugs are in bringing relief. Both the speed and duration of the relief can be measured.

Diplomacy Embraces Social Welfare

By Dorothea Andrews

SOCIAL WELFARE has become a working member of the Diplomatic Corps.

The United States Government has realized that knowledge of the general welfare of other countries is just as valuable as is knowledge of their agricultural and scientific situation.

As a result, one social welfare attache is now at work with the American diplomatic staff in Paris; another was recently assigned to a similar post at New Delhi, India.

Their functions, briefly, are "to furnish the United States significant information and interpretation on social conditions and social welfare programs in foreign countries, and where appropriate give in return similar information about the United States."

This serves a two-fold purpose: it convinces governments of other lands of our interest in their welfare; and it gives us a weapon with which to answer Russia's statement that she alone, of all nations, gives consideration to the welfare of people.

Retort Factual

IN PARIS, Social Welfare Attache Irving J. Fasteau, who went to work last April in the new job, soon found practical application of the duality of his role.

Several Communist members of the French National Assembly had charged that the United States lacks a social security program. Fasteau prepared material for use by a member of the National Assembly to refute the Communist claims.

Fasteau, former chief of the UNRRA mission to Finland and a specialist in social welfare before his diplomatic assignment, was able, within a few days, to analyze the French social security programs and compare them with the United States system when the French began negotiations for a reciprocal agreement on social security benefits.

With the social welfare attache type of diplomacy still in its infancy, State Department officials already are visualizing a wide range of activities for these specialists in the intangibles of this kind of international relations.

Has Many Facets

THE SOCIAL welfare attache reports both to his government and to private groups information on social insurance, financial assistance to low-income groups, child welfare, care of the physically and mentally handicapped and the aged, vocational rehabilitation, treatment and rehabilitation of delinquents and criminals and social aspects of housing in the country to which he is assigned.

He also cooperates with such international organizations as the World Health Organization. Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, recently pointed out that WHO will result in better and quicker dissemination of medical information among countries and "may overcome the lag of 20 years between medical discovery and its use by private physicians throughout the world."

Because of his position—fairly removed from usual diplomatic chores—the social welfare attache also can assay the worth of American overseas aid programs. He can be used as a consultant on social welfare problems of United States citizens and their alien dependents who are brought to diplomatic notice.

While Fasteau is now well established in his Paris duties, Miss Evelyn Hersey, the other social welfare attache so far designated, has just begun on hers.

Miss Hersey, former assistant to the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, was appointed last spring to a post in Egypt. This appointment was later revoked because of the Egyptian political situation, and the New Delhi post was substituted.

A Perkins Push

EXPANSION of United States diplomatic forces abroad from the former narrow concept of "commercial" and "military" attache was already beginning by World War II. It was furthered in 1945 when then Labor Secretary Frances Perkins announced that the State Department was planning to send labor attaches abroad to work with the civil and military authorities in occupied countries.

State Department officials hope that a new fiscal year may bring increased appropriations for social welfare attaches in other spots of the world, to increase both knowledge and understanding in international relations.

Sandbagging

What is at stake in the "sandbagging" squabble now going on within the Police Department is really the method by which police obtain information about crime. It has long been the practice in Washington, as it is in most other cities, for police to tolerate minor law infractions in order to obtain tips on major criminals. This custom has roots in the fact that it is difficult to combat the underworld without the use of stool pigeons.

It may be said in condemnation of such practice that it sets a bad precedent in winking at the law. Unless it is carefully supervised, it invites "protection" shakedowns by unscrupulous policemen. Moreover, there is reason to question the real significance of much information obtained in such fashion. On the other hand, it undoubtedly is true that a stringent enforcement of the law in all cases would have the effect of drying up some important police sources.

The current dispute involves charges of 57 liquor law violations by a G street restaurant made before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board by a member of the vice squad. An undercover policeman from the First Precinct has retorted that this is "sandbagging"—that it is in retaliation for failure of the vice squad to obtain crime tips from the cafe. Twenty policemen from the First Precinct have testified in the restaurant's behalf that they had observed no law violations there. It has been pointed out, however, that the testimony of these men may be suspect because of friendship for the cafe proprietor.

It is not possible at this point to say whether the accusations against the restaurant are justified or whether there is substance to the charges of "sandbagging." The whole affair smacks of a rivalry for publicity between members of the vice squad and members of the First Precinct. In any event, the matter has a bad smell, and the investigation ordered by Superintendent Barrett is thoroughly warranted. In addition to exploring the possibilities of "sandbagging," certainly this investigation ought to look into whether members of the First Precinct have received free food or other gratuities from the restaurant in question in violation of good police practice. Beyond this a prime purpose of the investigation ought to be to impress on members of the department that their job is to detect and prevent crime rather than to make headlines.

Japanese Criminals

More than 54 months after it began, the trial of "Class A" Japanese war criminals has finally come to an end. Of the 28 generals, admirals, and political leaders originally indicted, two died during the course of the trial and one suffered mental collapse. Seven of the remaining 25, including former Premier Tojo, have been sentenced to hang, 16 to life imprisonment, and 2 to lesser terms. All were convicted, collectively and individually, on the first of the 55 counts of the indictment—conspiracy to wage aggressive war. Other counts covered treaty violation, planning the "unprovoked" and "criminal" attack on Pearl Harbor, responsibility for cruelties to noncombatants and prisoners of war, and the like.

The verdict of the International Military Tribunal—a document of some 350,000 words that took seven days to read from the bench—generally accepted the prosecution view on critical issues. In particular it rejected the defense contention that Japan was acting in self-defense against hostile encirclement or was attempting, in Manchuria, to stop the advance of communism into China. Judging from reports during the reading of the verdict by Sir William Webb, Australian Chief Justice, it was as complete a finding of guilt as could be asked.

Lest the result be thought to evince accumulated vindictiveness, it is well to recall the steps that were taken to assure a fair trial. The defendants introduced 310 witnesses, 214 affidavits, and 1602 exhibits. But the evidence against them, going back as far as 1928, was damning. To mention only two incriminating facts, the court established that the War Ministry had ordered plates for printing invasion currency as early as January, 1941. And Special Envoy Saburo Kurusu came to Washington knowing that his task was to prolong negotiations as a cover for the surprise attack on Pearl Harbor that had been fixed in July.

All this is history now. The men chiefly responsible have received their sentences. Japan cannot repeat its bid for world power, incapacitated militarily, economically, and psychologically as it is. The task ahead is rehabilitation and restoration of Japan's ability to earn its own living as a peaceful and, if possible, democratic nation. Only one step remains before execution of the sentences will clear the way to full attack on this problem. The trial record of some nine million words goes directly to General MacArthur for review. He may, under the charter by which he created the tribunal, "reduce or otherwise alter the sentence except to increase its severity."

Insecure Rivalry

"The effort of one nation to increase its security," said then Secretary Byrnes in May, 1946, "may threaten the security of other nations and cause them in turn to try to increase their own security. The quest for security may lead to less rather than more security in the world." Mr. Byrnes was reporting to the American people on what had happened at the first Paris session of the Council of Foreign Ministers when he proposed a 25-year treaty for keeping Germany demilitarized. The American delegation, which included Senator Vandenberg, hoped that such a treaty would remove one of the causes for suspicion among the great powers, suspicion that was blocking progress toward a German peace settlement. The same idea had been uppermost in Vandenberg's mind when he made a similar suggestion in the Senate on January 10, 1945, even before Germany was defeated.

Today the same consideration has reappeared in Washington, and the State Department is preparing to dust off the Byrnes proposal and again offer it to the Soviet Union. The piling up of armaments and alliances is not an adequate policy for attaining peace with understanding. Firmness, yes. And firmness with enough force at hand to rule out appeasement. But along with firmness must always go a readiness to chop away the central obstacle, distrust. The building of an Atlantic alliance will assuredly defeat its own purpose unless account is taken of its effect on the Soviet view of Soviet security. Refurbishing the demilitarization treaty is an attempt to do this.

Though Stalin had told Mr. Byrnes in December, 1945, that he would wholeheartedly support such a treaty if the United States proposed it, the Russians did not in fact do so. Instead they objected first that it was premature and then that it was inadequate, did not assure the denazification and democratization of Germany, and did not guarantee Soviet reparations demands. These were brittle excuses at the time. Knowing better now what the Russians mean by "democratization," we can, in proposing it again, hardly broaden the terms of the draft treaty enough to satisfy Moscow. And the complex issue of reparations has no place, of course, in a long-term treaty of demilitarization.

The question, then, is whether to expect that revival of the treaty offer will take the sting out of the Atlantic alliance. We do not think it will. But we are encouraged by this evidence of realization in the Administration that peace is not to be bought only by a demonstration of superior defensive strength.

Gobbledygook Again

Four or five years ago, when Mr. Maury Maverick began his little crusade to revive the use of English as the official language of the Government departments, we expressed our fear that he would encounter as many difficulties as the government of the Irish Free State when in the early 1920s it attempted to restore the ancient Goidelic tongue. The spoken and written use of English is now said to survive only in a few secluded sections of Washington, most of them remote from the centers of Federal activity.

What we proposed was this: that instead of requiring the myriads of Gobbledygook-speaking jobholders to acquire English, all English-speaking persons discovered in the Federal service should be given a free and intensive course of instruction in Gobbledygook at Government expense. Since the number of such persons is obviously very small, this would impose no palpable burden on the taxpayers, whereas wholesale instruction in English might involve a huge expenditure of money and effort, with perhaps very little to show for it in the end. English (as almost any foreigner or instructor of college freshmen will testify) is an extremely difficult language to master; but a good working knowledge of Gobbledygook is easily acquired and demands little more in the way of native aptitude than a kind of mimetic echo in the mind.

One objection to our proposal was the lack of available textbooks of Gobbledygook. We are glad to observe that this deficiency is now being remedied. For example, two qualified teachers, the Messrs. James R. Masterson and Wendell Brooks Phillips, have prepared a brief introduction to the subject, entitled Federal Prose: How to Write and/or for Washington, which has just been published by the University of North Carolina Press. It covers such matters as vocabulary, syntax, idioms and punctuation, and contains, incidentally, prose passages which rival the work of such masters as Dr. James M. Landis and Professor Laski. The authors are perhaps a bit extreme in their zeal for the mandarin language, and go so far as to demand that the use of other languages, including English, be proscribed in the homes and schools so that Gobbledygook can be taught systematically to children. They observe that:

> Until a program for personnel induction at the infant level can be coordinated with the Federal prose tutorship objectives, this situation [i. e., a vestigial knowledge of English among some neophytes in the Government service] will continue to create embarrassments at the administrative and higher levels. Only drastic and immediate action will achieve the impact on the linguistic functions involved necessary and liquidate a stylistic status recognized as inoperable.

Serviceable as the work of the Messrs. Masterson and Phillips is, there is still much need of other works, especially for advanced students. There is especial need of a comprehensive Gobbledygook Grammar. Since Gobbledygook is a language even less inflected than English, this should not be difficult to prepare. For example, the verb "to integrate" might be conjugated thus in the present indicative:

English	Gobbledygook
	SINGULAR
I make whole.	The present writer aims at integrating.
Thou makest whole.	The reader successfully endeavors to integrate. (Imperative: The reader is hereby advised to integrate.)
He (She) makes whole.	The individual referred to above aims at integrating.
	PLURAL
We make whole.	The personnel of this division are integrating.
You (Ye) make whole.	All the addressees above are integrating.
They make whole.	The personnel members to whom reference has previously been made aim at integrating.

Nouns and pronouns in Gobbledygook need no declension, for unlike English it has apparently no genitive case. Thus "My house" is rendered, "The domicile of the undersigned," and "Your hat," "The headgear of the addressee." The best writers now employ the pronoun "whom" for both nominative and accusative. Nouns, adjectives and verbs are virtually interchangeable, as in Chinese. Thus one may refer either to "the over-all integration of the implements," and to "the implemented integration of the over-alls." The only really tough parts of speech in Gobbledygook are the prepositions, and they deserve a textbook all to themselves.

Reorganization

Within 10 days after the new Congress is "convened and organized" the so-called Hoover Commission must submit its report. The date was set in June, 1947, when Congress passed the act creating the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government. It was hoped that by putting the appearance of the report well past the election, the problem of administrative reorganization could be kept out of politics. For the same reason the act specified that the commission was to be bipartisan, with no more than 6 of its 12 members from either of the major parties. In a similar attempt to divorce the work of the committee from possible legislative-administrative bickering, its composition was carefully parceled out to give representation to both Houses of Congress, the Administration, and the public.

It would be a great misfortune, therefore, if the report of the commission, when it comes, should be dismissed or belittled as having a partisan background or bias. Still less justified is the reported inclination in the wake of the election to discount the commission's conclusions, even before they are known. The temptation to do so is perhaps understandable. The bill to set up the commission was introduced by Senator Lodge and Representative Brown, both Republicans. Its chairman is Herbert Hoover, nominated to the commission by Speaker Martin. The Congress which created it had shown itself unfriendly to several of the administrative reorganization plans proposed by President Truman. But this had been only a little less true of the Democratically controlled Seventy-ninth Congress. Establishment of the Hoover Commission was in essence a recognition by Congress that the job of reorganization was of necessity a cooperative venture.

The Hoover Commission will have been at work for well over a year (its first meeting was held in September, 1947) when its report is completed. Its personnel is of unimpeachable integrity and, though its own organizational structure has been less than adequate, the conclusions reached should certainly merit unprejudical attention. They may or may not prove to be desirable in every detail when the time comes to examine them. We intend no blanket indorsement of the commission's findings in advance. But the reorganization problem is so pressing, and the anxiety of Congress, the Administration, and the public to make progress toward its solution so obvious that partisanship ought to be kept to the absolute minimum.

Wender's Wonder

The District Recreation Board, it seems, has been laboring under a misapprehension for lo! these many years. After all the furor over the ban against use of school facilities by racially mixed groups, the Recreation Board has now discovered (1) that it is not bound by Board of Education policy on use of school buildings for nonschool purposes and (2) that school authorities had no policy against use of Negro schools by interracial groups in the first place.

A good deal of misunderstanding and a good many hard feelings might have been avoided if Chairman Harry S. Wender and his colleagues had come to this realization earlier during their six-year tenure. That, however, is water over the dam. Now that the light has dawned, the important thing is to evolve a constructive policy for use of the schools. Instead of opening the schools directly, however, the Recreation Board has denied requests from the National Teachers pending a "study."

What is there to study? Why, if there is no inhibiting rule of the Board of Education, should not white schools and playgrounds as well as Negro schools be opened immediately for after-hours use by interracial groups? Mr. Wender has often contended that he personally is a foe of segregation and that as chairman of the Recreation Board he has been bound by policies over which he has had no control. Now the Recreation Board is on its own. Here is a chance for Mr. Wender and the board to exert their own leadership in solving a vexatious District problem.

Honduras

In your issue of November 2, over the name of Raoul J. Diaz, there appears, among others, the following statement: "The slaves of the atomic era who have their domicile in these countries (Honduras, Nicaragua and the Dominican Republic), are being constantly subjected to the worst indignities any human being could suffer at the hands of tyrants." Only malice or ignorance could prompt anyone to dare to affirm that the people of my country, Honduras, are submitted to the "worst indignities any human being could suffer at the hands of tyrants."

Mr. Diaz apparently ignores the fact that the principle of nonintervention in the internal affairs of any state was proclaimed and recognized by all the American states at Montevideo in 1933, and it has since been included, formally and definitely, in the Treaty of Reciprocal Assistance, signed at Rio de Janeiro in 1947, and in the recent Pact of Bogota.

The government of Honduras has been bound by, and has practiced the doctrines of, these treaties which guarantee peace and order in the American continent. The policy of nonintervention has been the permanent policy of Honduras, and she is certain that all the signatories of the treaties will honor, as it could not be otherwise, their pledged word.

The principle of nonintervention was consecrated by the Charter of the United Nations. To repudiate the policy of nonintervention, as Mr. Diaz suggests, is to repudiate the faith and the ideals of peace maintained and defended by the peoples and governments of the American continent.

Honduras is not now, and never has been, a threat to the peace. Honduras is only 24 hours' plane trip from Washington. I am ready to pay for a round-trip ticket to Honduras for Mr. Diaz to go there and study, if it is possible for him, the political, social and economic conditions of my country, so that he may return, prepared to eat his own words.

Maryland Gambling

All summer long, gambling, petty and otherwise, has flourished openly in Silver Spring under the auspices of "charity." As usual, we have had a cheap and blatant series of "carnivals" in the same Georgia ave. location, reflecting no credit on the appearance of the entrance into Maryland from the District. These have been sponsored by all kinds of organizations (including churches) whose sole objective was funds, regardless of whether they came from the baby's bank via penny bingo games, or from selling higher priced "voices" on otherwise scarce new automobiles. Such car raffles, even "voices" on houses (erected on public land), have been on almost every corner, fortified by raucous and objectionable sound trucks.

It is little wonder that the populace has been inculcated with the habit of gambling. No individual protests have been effective, there having been too many worthy organizations with powerful political support with a finger in the remunerative pie.

Now that the summer is over, and the money is in, it is interesting to note that a drive on gambling has been launched. If a barber shop sells chances or takes bets, that of course—not being for charity—is a very different thing and potentially a jail offense. The public honor must be upheld.

What hypocrisy! Don't these organizations, which would be the first to claim themselves as moral and spiritual uplifters, realize the damage they have done? Would it not be a wholesome thing to recognize that gambling is gambling, whatever its sponsorship, and that the ends definitely does not justify the means?

Job For Dewey

The writer would like to suggest that President Truman is about the freest man ever to enter the White House. The fact that he is indebted to no one leaves him in position to select his Cabinet without special reference to "political pie."

With this in mind, would it not be a fine thing for the President to proffer Cabinet positions to both Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Gov. Earl Warren? It seems to me that this gesture would accomplish at least three wholesome results: (1) It would salve some political wounds; (2) it would enable the new Administration to cash in on some of the fine abilities of the opposition; (3) it would prove to the world that the United States is really and actually united—and not merely a politically dissident camp of Republicans and Democrats.

Physical Education

This is American Education Week. Today special attention is focused on the school, its physical environment, the child and the teacher throughout the United States.

One of the integral phases of the entire educational scheme is physical education—that is physical education in its broadest connotation. Physical education in its broadest connotation. Physical education is indispensable to our present-day educational pattern. Like education in general, it is concerned with the development of the total personality—not with the development of musculature, as some pseudo-educators indicate.

Perhaps no other single phase of education lends itself so readily to providing opportunities for constructive and wholesome expression through activity; modifying the total personality socially, emotionally and organically, as does physical education.

We are rapidly becoming a Nation of onlookers, fast and "soft livers." The signs of social and physical degeneration are all about us. This is not good. An about face is necessary, a return to the out-of-doors. We must become participants, doers.

Without question physical education and its allied specialized areas can make an outstanding contribution in assisting in the development of strong, vigorous, alert, intellectual, morally and emotionally stable individuals.

The program must start—not at the college level but in the nursery school, and continue on a graduated scale throughout our public and private school systems.

Reconciling The South

Marquis Childs has not considered all of the factors in his piece on "Reconciling the South" in your issue of November 9.

First, he has fallen in with the worst tactics of Dixiecrat propaganda by calling the civil rights bills arbitrary and by using the highly emotional and fear-evoking term "force." They are no more force bills than any other of the hundreds of pieces of important progressive legislation that have been passed in recent years.

Take the antilynching law that he uses as an example. Admittedly, it would mean the use of Federal forces to detect, to apprehend and to convict those guilty of the crime of lynching. But is not the same thing true of the so-called Lindbergh Antikidnaping Act? The Antikidnaping Act has had a good effect as has been seen in the decline of kidnaping in recent years. We believe the passage of the antilynching law will have the same result.

Second, the attitudes of white Southerners are not as inflexible on the civil rights question as we have been led to believe by Dixiecrat spokesmen. The recent election provided some proof of this. The progress that has been made under enlightened political leadership in certain States is another.

Take Georgia as an example. Was Ellis Arnall thrown out of office because he abolished the poll tax and insisted on the right of Negroes to vote? Georgia has not had a real chance to indorse or repudiate the Arnall program. The last gubernatorial election was between Talmadge, who went back to the very depths of the ante-bellum era in his despicable anti-Negro campaign on the one hand and a weak Thompson, who refused to challenge him, on the other. I believe the results would have been entirely different if a strong Arnall could have been the candidate.

The Dixiecrat victories in South Carolina, Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana were more the result of a coup d'etat in those States than an honest expression on the civil rights program. The Democratic Party machines went bag and baggaes for Thurmond, and President Truman had no effective vehicle to present his case. The difficulty in the South to a large degree is not with the masses of the white citizens but with the polticians like Thurmond and Talmadge, who use the race issue to further their own selfish ends and are the willing tools of reactionary vested interests.

Mr. Childs seems to have overlooked that splendid but conservative organization, the Southern Regional Council, which has labored against heavy odds but achieved some real gains in a better race relations throughout the South. The president, a Richmond businessman, made a reasoned plea on behalf of his organization before the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee in the Eightieth Congress for a Federal Fair Employment Practices Act and expressed his conviction that it would work.

I am very skeptical about Mr. Childs' proposal to call a conference of Southern leaders before action is taken by Congress on the civil rights bills. The problems they seek to solve are national in scope, not just limited to the South. The FEPC bill, the most important among them, is needed in Ohio and Illinois just as it is needed in South Carolina. After their passage (if I may be so sanguine), any reasonable steps, such as a conference, should be taken anywhere in the country to facilitate their operation.

Atlantic Compact

A Communication

ONE CONSEQUENCE of Mr. Truman's election and the Democratic majorities in the new Senate and House is the improved outlook for speedy negotiation of the projected North Atlantic Pact. This security arrangement may prove a turning point in postwar history. Since it is likely soon to become a major national issue, it seems important to consider now some aspects of its relation to the "cold war" which Russia is waging.

In this political conflict there appear to be three principal elements which together can bring the Western success essential for a real peace. The first is European recovery which will strengthen the West internally. This process, because of the Kremlin's refusal to participate in it and subsequent attempts to block it, is bound to exert a powerful influence upon Russia. By progressively raising the living standards of western Europe in comparison with those of eastern Europe, it is likely to increase progressively the stresses and strains within the Communist "empire" and impel the Politburo toward an over-all settlement.

The second, much more important than is generally realized, is "passing the word," to the peoples confined within the iron curtain, making widely known to them the progress of western Europe toward recovery and the contrast between its freedoms and living standards and their own. Success here will tend directly to expedite the end of the "cold war." If it does, it will save literally billions at the cost of millions expended upon the information programs of the United States and the other Western nations.

BUT HOWEVER great our success in these two fields, considerable time will be required to achieve a real peace. During this time, there will always be danger that the men in the Kremlin, seeing the defeat of their ambitions, may contemplate actual war against the West. To avert such a war, the nations of the West must expand their strength to a degree which will make the Politburo realize that it cannot win. This they can do only by concerted action, since none of them, not even the United States, can become strong enough to do it alone.

The need for the North Atlantic Pact becomes even clearer when we look beyond 1950. Unless Russia reverses her attitude toward control of atomic energy, she will possess within a few years both atomic bombs and the means of delivering them across the Atlantic. That will increase drastically her military threat to any one Western nation. If there were then no North Atlantic security arrangement, that development would tend directly toward war, dividing the West by frightening some of its nations into pursuit of appeasement and opening to the Politburo a prospect of subjugating the West in detail. Neither western Europe nor North America can find security or peace in atomic isolation.

THE NORTH ATLANTIC PACT, accordingly, appears essential both now and tomorrow to safeguard the West against war while European recovery is creating the basis for a real peace. What we need for this purpose is a Western bloc which is clearly too strong to be challenged. If we can build that, we can have a confidence we do not have now that war will be averted, despite the aggressive policies and actions of Russia.

Such collective strength depends upon military capabilities, but also upon economic stability. To create it, it would seem common sense to facilitate as far as we can the access of our European partners in security to our vast home market and thereby contribute to their permanent economic health. In the long run such measures could be more effective and less damaging to our own national economy than provision of loans and gifts to balance trans-Atlantic payments.

Sacrifices will be required to build up adequately the strength of the West, just as they are to build up our own Army, Navy and Air Force. But they can be measured properly only if they are weighed against the fruits of success, which will include security against attack, freedom from the existing fear of war and a decisive step towards both the peace and the kind of a world for which we made incomparably greater sacrifices a few years ago. In weighing them, moreover, we should not overlook the possibility that our North Atlantic arrangement, if built upon sufficiently substantial foundations, will become the nucleus of an eventual free world.

Voteless Saga

Apparently half of the adult citizenry of the United States who are eligible to vote failed to exercise their privilege for obvious reasons.

Strange as it may seem and through no fault of my own I have been voteless all my life. I was a minor for 20 years and not considered qualified to vote. My next 20 years were in the United States Army, with no vote privileges then. For the past 20 years I have resided in the District of Columbia, which is voteless.

An Airlift 'Pearl Harbor' Feared

By Drew Pearson

NOW that the election hubbub is quieting down, we have to face the cold and unpleasant fact that the Berlin airlift is in danger of buckling. Top military strategists are still hanging on to a grim hope that the airlift will hold out until spring, but it will take cold cash and sheer guts—and American lives—to do it.

Here is what the airlift is up against.

1. Most serious, the Air Force is desperately short of cargo planes. More than half of its elephant-bellied C-54s are now flying the Berlin run. Everywhere the Air Force has been forced to cut its normal transport service. But the worst fear is that all these cargo planes, flying right under Russia's nose, might be the target for a Pearl Harbor of the air—in case Russia decides to strike. As the United States Navy was paralyzed at Pearl Harbor, so the United States Air Force could be paralyzed at Berlin.

2. The Air Force is out of money. Its budget experts already are working on a deficiency appropriation. The Air Force also has no money to build new cargo planes, has committed every available dollar to build bombers and fighters.

3. Winter is sure to harass the airlift more than the Russians will. In the past, Germany's severe weather has grounded better planes than those now flying the airlift. The Air Force has already alerted its public relations officers to prepare for an increase in accidents.

4. The problem of maintenance is still serious, though not critical. One fourth of the planes assigned to the Berlin airlift are constantly in the pipeline between Germany and the United States for repairs. This policy of rotation has been working better than expected, is one of the factors that has encouraged Air Force chiefs to predict that the airlift will squeak through the winter—despite everything.

Hoover Analyzes Dewey

HERBERT HOOVER was talking to friends in New York just before the election, and got off some pungent paragraphs about the Republican candidate for President.

"Dewey quoth the former President, "will never appoint MacArthur or Taft or anyone who ran against him. He doesn't like opposition.

"I can't forgive Dewey for not helping Revercomb or Reece," continued Hoover, referring to the Republican candidates for the Senate in West Virginia and Tennessee. "He needs their votes in the Senate, but he won't help them because they previously opposed him."

Reece, it will be recalled, was Taft's appointee as chairman of the Republican National Committee and, as such, worked against Dewey's nomination. Revercomb had opposed Dewey's request to modify the Displaced Persons bill when it was before the Senate.

Someone asked Hoover whom he would have liked to see nominated by the Republicans.

"Personally I was for Taft," he replied, "but, practically, for Stassen. He would have been a great vote-getter."

Boettiger Paper Backfires

LAST summer, when Anna Roosevelt Boettiger's Phoenix, Arizona, Times ran into rough going, a group of Republican businessmen got a big vision. They saw a chance to swing the State to Dewey. By buying Anna's paper, they would eliminate a Truman organ and make it a third Republican paper in a three-paper town.

In a fast deal involving financing by the comparatively unknown California speculator, Fred Tuerk, and his movie, theater, and stock-brokerage partners, the paper was picked up for peanuts.

With a fanfare, the paper's New Deal critic, Columbus Geragi, was made publisher and the editorial policy was switched to Dewey. Result: Arizona headed the parade for Truman.

Chagrined and burdened with a paper losing $6500 a week, the Tuerk forces are now seeking a buyer to take over the headache of being the third Republican paper in Democratic surroundings.

Only consolation is that the Arizona climate drew Dewey after defeat.

Note—Anna Boettiger should know that her accounting department, at the time she was in need of funds, had "lost" $25,000 cash, which the new owners found in a bank but not on the books.

France Considers Force

THE French Cabinet held a most important secret meeting last month at which it seriously discussed the use of armed force against the French Communist Party.

The meeting was significant because hitherto the French government has adopted a tolerant, live-and-let-live attitude toward the Communists even when they were seriously threatening the nation's economic stability.

At this meeting, however, Minister of Interior Jules Moch showed fellow cabinet members identical copies of Communist orders sent to three different French cities to "fight to the end" for the purpose of overthrowing the government.

Moch proposed that Communist Leader Maurice Thorez and other top Commies be arrested. Other cabinet members were inclined to agree. Only real objection came from the Minister of Justice, who wanted to examine the legal question of arresting members of the General Assembly, since most Communist leaders are elected members of the Assembly and, therefore, have some degree of parliamentary immunity.

However, if serious strikes continue in France, you can look for a move by the French government to throw the strike leaders in jail on a charge of conspiring to overthrow France.

Note—One reason behind such a move would be the fear of moderate French Socialists that unless they take drastic action General de Gaulle will come into power.

Biographer Outshining His Subject

Boswell Papers End Epic Search

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

ONE OF the greatest stories in the history of book collecting came to a climax last weekend with the quiet disclosure that the private archives of James Boswell, biographer of Samuel Johnson, had been reassembled.

The significance of the event to students of eighteenth century English literature and life cannot be measured. It will be a generation before students will even approach digestion of the material, so great is the amount of it that Boswell painstakingly collected.

Boswell himself is emerging as a figure more fascinating than the diarist Samuel Pepys, perhaps overshadowing in interest as a personality Johnson himself, whose biography will have to be rewritten, as will that of numerous lesser figures of the period.

The disclosure that the archives long believed lost or destroyed were back together, was made by Lieut. Col. Ralph H. Isham at a meeting of eighteenth century specialists from several universities at New York's Grolier Club, oldest (1884) American book club.

For 58-year-old Colonel Isham, who had "put most of my fortune—and it was not too vast"—it was the successful end of a 22-year pursuit.

For James Boswell, who died in 1795, it was the realization in an unexpected fashion of his expectations.

Thorough Snooper

WHEN James Boswell set out to write his "Life of Johnson," he determined, as he said in the beginning of the book, that Johnson "will be seen in this work more completely than any man who has ever yet lived."

And again Boswell said, "Minute particulars are frequently characteristic and always amusing, when they relate to a distinguished man. I am therefore exceedingly unwilling that anything however slight, which my illustrious friend thought it worth his while to express, with any degree of point, should perish."

It was in this spirit that Boswell set forth to gather every scrap of information about Johnson he could, even going so far as to interview a member of Johnson's household regarding the great man's amorous propensities.

Boswell, however, had an equal or even greater interest in himself, and as he exhaustively collected information about Johnson, so he did about himself.

On one occasion, conveying to a father a proposal of marriage to his daughter, Boswell asked that if his letter were not returned that he be allowed to make a copy of it, because he would "always be curious to recollect how I wrote on an affair of this consequence."

A Bit Too Frank

BOSWELL'S papers were left to his heirs with the provision that they be published by his younger children as discretion would permit.

Most of the papers went to Auchinleck, the family home in Scotland. Following Boswell's death in 1795, about a third of them went to Fettercairn House, a family seat in Scotland of Sir William Forbes, one of Boswell's literary executors.

Boswell's family thought that he had demeaned himself in his association with Johnson. There was also probably some sensitivity to his indiscreet recording of the weaknesses of himself and others, and in 1831 Macaulay had damned Boswell's reputation. For these and perhaps other reasons, the papers were ignored, neglected and lost sight of.

Eventually, one of two Boswell heiresses married the fifth Lord Talbot de Malahide, and the papers were moved to Malahide Castle, County Dublin, and became the property of her nephew, Boswell's great-great-grandson and only male descendant.

In 1927, Isham, son of a New Jersey railroad financier and who had been made a Commander of the British Empire for his services in the British army in World War I, was successful in purchasing the papers and publication rights from Lord Talbot. Isham had been a Johnson and Boswell enthusiast since youth.

Letters in Attic

IN ADDITION to the original Malahide Castle papers, another batch was later discovered in an old croquet box. During World War II, in the attic of an outbuilding on the grounds, was found a large amount of Boswell correspondence, preliminary outlines for the "Life" and hitherto unsuspected literary works by the artist Sir Joshua Reynolds. All this material has been obtained by Isham, in accordance with his agreement with Lord Talbot.

Meanwhile, in the 1930s, the papers at Fettercairn House were discovered beneath damp canvases in two wooden boxes at the foot of an attic stair and became a matter of legal dispute, which ended with Isham's acquisition of them.

It was the last of these papers from Malahide Castle and the Fettercairn House papers, which have arrived in this country since the war, that were displayed at the Grolier Club, where some 15 years ago Isham displayed the original Malahide Castle find.

When the first of the Malahide Castle papers were being published in 1928, the editor, Geoffrey Scott, said: "We are now in a position to know Boswell more intimately than any other figure in English literature, I would even say, than any one who has lived before our time."

With the addition of the correspondence, a major part of the manuscript of the "Life of Johnson," journals and notes, Scott's estimate has become even more true today.—LEE GROVE.

BEST news story of the magazine week is in the book review section of the New Yorker. There A. J. Leibling reviews a limited edition of a thousand copies: namely, the complete "Hearings Regarding Communist Espionage in the United States Government . . . Before the Committee on Un-American Activities . . ."

A first edition of a million would have seemed moderate to Leibling, "since this record gives the story of the committee's hearings a continuity, and thus a shape, that newspaper presentations of isolated tidbits from day to day almost completely failed to convey."

"The most arresting statement in all the hearings, to my notion, never, I believe, got into public prints," he charges. The statement was uttered in a closed session September 8 by Chairman Thomas to a lawyer appearing before the committee as counsel for a witness. The lawyer claimed certain rights. Mr. Thomas replied, "The rights you have are the rights given you by the committee. We will determine what rights you have got and what rights you have not got before this committee."

Leibling berates the by this time downtrodden press for not having at least picked up what it missed when the hearings were published. "The anomaly of a committee that describes itself as the greatest open court in the country on page 846, no court at all on page 926, and omnipotent on page 1310 (quoted above), might fairly have been considered worthy of bringing to the attention of a bemused public," he asserts.

JOE LOUIS' story, the second and final part of which is in Life this week, is another knockout.

This installment begins with Joe's defeat by Schmeling in 1936, which his manager, John Roxborough, blamed partly on loose running of the training camp and partly to the fact that Louis took up golf, in which he explained the timing was different. Louis still doesn't agree with this. He says, "In all my fighting life I never got a real hate on another fighter, but I didn't like that Schmeling." Sports writers brought tales from the enemy training camp of how Schmeling claimed super-race superiority.

Before the return bout in 1938, Louis happened to be in Washington. He was summoned to the White House, he recalls, where President Roosevelt "had me lean over so he could feel my muscles. He said, 'Joe, we need muscles like yours to beat Germany.'" There was no truth to the rumor that the President told Louis to beat Schmeling for him.

Great credit should go to Meyer Berger and Barney Nagker for the straightforward, sympathetic way in which they tell the story.

MLLE'S LIVING, the quarterly magazine for which Street & Smith are cannibalizing Pic, is proving its worth by getting better with each issue. This one is divided into sections on "Living Today" and "Planning for Tomorrow." The former is composed of stories by eight families all over the world on how they solved their living and housing problems.

"We Love the City," by Barbara Bradshaw, describes life with two children in a house here near Dupont Circle. The Bradshaws are one of the countless families ordered here during the war who liked it so well they remained. They reconverted an old rooming house into a modern office for Mr. Bradshaw, whose business is contemporary design; living quarters for the family, and a third-floor apartment to rent. Mrs. Bradshaw reverses the usual order of things by commuting to the country to teach music at the Madeira School.

Top German Reds Protest 'Siege'

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

TOWARD the end of last month Marshal Sokolovsky, Russian proconsul in Germany, received an interesting letter through the secret channels which connect the Soviet command in Germany with the German Communists. What makes the letter interesting is that it was signed by Wilhelm Pieck and Otto Grotewohl.

Peck is a lifetime Communist, who took part in the Spartacist revolt in 1919. Grotewohl is a renegade Socialist, who sold out to the Russians after the war. They are cochairmen of the Russian-sponsored Socialist Unity Party, in reality the Soviet zone's Communist Party. There were four other signers as well as Pieck and Grotewohl, all important but subordinate German Communists.

The letter, whose contents are known to the American Government, was, of course, written in the tone of respectful humility which Communists use when addressing their Soviet masters, and was full of protestations of loyalty. Yet it was nevertheless deeply displeasing to Sokolovsky and the rulers in the Kremlin.

For the German Communists begged Sokolovsky to end the blockade of Berlin. They stated flatly that the blockade was undermining the German Communist movement, by turning the German masses against both the Socialist fatherland and the German Communist Party. Discipline within the party was more and more difficult to maintain, and the party was daily losing previously loyal adherents. German Communists were good Communists, the six wrote, but they were also Germans.

Two Escaped a Purge

SOKOLOVSKY'S response was unequivocal. Pieck and Grotewohl were hauled on the carpet and charged with "narrow nationalism" and "deviationism." They were allowed to retain their positions, perhaps because their purging would have created an unwelcome uproar. But they were warned that no repetition of such insubordination would be tolerated. And to force the point home, the four lesser Communists were carted off to jail.

Taken alone, this episode is significant enough. But what makes it more interesting is that it is not an isolated incident. For within the last few days evidence has been obtained that Moscow is having very similar difficulties with the high command of the French Communist Party.

Early this summer, as first reported in this space, burly, ham-fisted Maurice Thorez, leader of the French Communists, was hailed before a Communist kangaroo court on orders from Moscow, and charged with "excessive nationalism." At the time, Thorez performed the usual Communist rite of public repentance and confession of sins. Since then, however, there have been reports that Moscow's troubles with Thorez were not over.

According to these reports, Thorez has been intriguing within the French Communist Party to split his very considerable personal following away from Moscow's control, and to head a national French Communist Party more or less on the Tito model. The nature of the sources of these reports, within the French party, has cast doubt on their validity.

No. 2 Man Moves Up

YET very recently a document has been obtained which suggests, at the very least, that Thorez is distrusted by the rulers in the Kremlin. This document is a directive from the Cominform to the French Communist Party. It orders that leadership of the party, including the duty of reporting to and receiving orders from the Cominform, is to rest henceforth with Jacques Duclos, a Stalinist theoretician generally considered No. 2 man among French Communists, and Andre Marty, a fanatical extremist who spent four years in Moscow. Thorez, although for the present he retains his titular leadership, is thus left out in the cold.

The parallel with the episode of the Pieck-Grotewohl letter is entirely obvious. Pieck and Grotewohl were moved to protest simply because Soviet policy in Germany runs directly contrary to the interests of the German Communist Party, and is indeed threatening to destroy the party. In France, Thorez has always been regarded as a "moderate" Communist, who wished to build a Communist Party with a mass popular base. Yet, as in Germany, the mass base of the French Communists is threatened by Soviet foreign policy, which requires that French recovery be wrecked.

Stalin, himself, in his recent Pravda interview, hinted that he considered the world Communist parties his great secret weapon. The weakness in Stalin's weapon is clearly the basic contradiction between national interests and the interests of the Kremlin. This weakness will surely prove fatal if the United States, by a great effort, can create conditions in which the fear of aggression by the Red army is removed, and in which the nations of the non-Soviet world can find their way back to political stability and economic health.

The Gallup Poll:

Marked Parallels in '16 and '48

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

ALTHOUGH many people regard the election outcome as unusual in the highest degree, actually it all happened once before.

The parallel between President Truman's victory and the outcome of the closely fought Wilson-Hughes election in 1916 is remarkable.

The State-by-State lineup is so much like 1916 that maps of the two are almost identical.

The parallel is still more remarkable in the case of California. California was the key State of 1916 and it certainly was one of the decisive States in 1948.

The Hughes forces went through election night thinking they had victory sewed up, but final returns from California gave that State to Wilson by an eyelash.

This year President Truman carried California by almost the same eyelash. Wilson got 50.2 per cent of the major party vote in California and Truman carried the State with 50.4 per cent on a comparable basis.

The national percentages in the two elections are given in the table below. In 1916 there were two fairly strong minority parties—the Socialist Party, whose candidate was A. J. Benson, and the Prohibition Party, whose canididate was J. Frank Hanley. The Socialist and Prohibition Parties polled a combined total of 4.4 per cent, which is almost exactly the same as the combined vote cast this year for the Progressive Party and the States' Rights Party—4.5 per cent.

Wilson (D.)	49.4%
Hughes (R.)	46.2
Benson (Soc.)	3.2	4.4
Hanley (Prohib.)	1.2
	1948
Truman (D.)	50.0%
Dewey (R.)	45.5
Wallace (Prog.)	2.4	4.5
Thurmond (States' Rights)	2.1

Although it is generally considered difficult to be elected President without carrying New York State or Pennsylvania, or both, Wilson and Truman failed to carry either of these two States having the largest number of electoral votes. The South, Midwest and Pacific Coast were largely responsible for electing both men.

The principal differences in results of the two elections are that Massachusetts, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin went Republican in 1916 but were on the Democratic side this time, with the result that Truman got substantially more electoral votes than Wilson did. Wilson's total was 277; Truman's 304.

Another difference between 1916 and 1948 is that there was no Southern defection to plague Wilson, whereas this year four normally Democratic States, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and South Carolina, were absent from the Democratic column.

THE WAR WE LOST, by Constantin Fotitch. Viking. 344 pp. $3.50.

AMERICA has been lucky in most of the political refugees who have come to these shores.

Most of them are brave and honorable fighters for human freedom. Most of them could swear in a court of law to tell "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth"—as they saw it.

Yet a careful historian knows that with the best will in the world these men cannot tell "the whole truth" about the events that drove them into exile.

They are too subjective. They are too deeply influenced by what they themselves endured. In their passion to let the truth be known, they unconsciously distort the truth, overrate their own contributions, underrate their own mistakes. They neglect the context without which no record of events can be true history.

So it is with the remarkable books just published by three remarkable men who have found sanctuary in the United States.

Two Were Eyewitnesses

ONE of these men was Premier of Poland (in a London exile) during part of the war, and later saw with his own eyes a part of Poland's postwar tragedy. Another was Premier of Hungary in 1946 and 1947. The third was Yugoslavia's envoy in Washington from 1935 to 1944, the only one of the three who did not actually see his country's struggle at first hand.

All were driven from public life by Soviet intimidation and terror, operating through Communist-dominated police governments on their home soil. All believe, with varying degrees of bitterness, that the free leaders of the West betrayed them. All three, out of their common experience, have written the same warning to the Western world.

Mikolajczyk, the Pole in exile, is convinced that Stalin "intends to conquer the world." Nagy, the Hungarian, calls communism "the red snake" that inches eastward and cannot stop on "the road to conquest paved by its agents in every country."

Fotitch, the Yugoslav, writes what he has been telling us in Washington for years: that Western civilization will not survive unless 90 million eastern Europeans can be freed from Soviet tyranny.

Of the three books Mikolajczyk's is the most passionate and probably the most important as source material. For he was a leader of stature among his own people and in the eyes of foreign governments. His country's fate was the most horrible of all, and between the Nazi hammer and the Soviet anvil, six million of his countrymen were killed.

Harry Hopkins once told Stalin that the Polish question in itself was less important than "the fact that it had become a symbol of our ability to work out problems with the Soviet Union." So it is worth searching the Mikolajczyk book for clues to what happened, and why.

One Word From Stalin

TO BEGIN with, Mikolajczyk has much to say about the so-called Katyn Massacre, first disclosed by the Nazi discovery of 4000 bodies in a mass grave in Poland in 1943. He accepts completely, as his government-in-exile did at the time, the Nazi version that these were Polish officers done to death by the Russians.

He cites an admission by Lavrenti Beria, the dreaded head of the Soviet secret police, that "a great mistake was made," and he tells of an unnamed "Russian officer associated with the Soviet Embassy in London," who said the men were murdered because the secret police misunderstood a Stalin order.

According to this story, Stalin was asked what to do with these Polish prisoners-of-war. He took a piece of his personal stationery and wrote one word upon it, "Liquidate." Red army headquarters got the message and decided this was a job for the secret police. But the word "liquidate," according to Mikolajczyk's informant, could have been interpreted as an order to release and scatter

A GREAT BIOGRAPHY MAKES AN UNSURPASSED GIFT

Readin' and Writin'

By Lee Grove

WITH the election barely past, along comes Doubleday with an announcement whose very thought should cause shudders to smoke-filled rooms.

Damsey Wilson, whose stories have appeared in the New Yorker, is at work on a novel, "The Dark Mare," for 1949 publication, which is "based on the life of the first woman President of the United States."

After Misjudgment Day, November 2, no one is going to be sure whether it is fiction or prophecy.

Still a Housewife

CATHERINE TURLINGTON'S cheerful tale of a normal American family with three teenage daughters, "Three to Make Ready," has been attracting quite a bit of favorable attention. It hasn't flushed her with enthusiasm for writing a second book right away, however. "I'm still primarily a suburban Washington housewife," she says.

As for writing this one, it is just another case of everyone-who-lives-in-Washington-long-enough-writes-a-book, she adds.

By a coincidence, the author and her husband, Attorney Edgar Turlington, have three daughters now aged 16, 19 and 20, but Mrs. Turlington says "Three to Make Ready" is only "technically autobiographical," not literally so.

"ONE MAN SHOW"—Jakob Rosenberg, whose monumental "Rembrandt" has just been published by Harvard University Press, says that one of the outstanding characteristics of the seventeenth century Dutch artist's work is the number of self-portraits he did—60 paintings, 20 etchings and 10 drawings. "There is no parallel to this in the history of art," Rosenberg says.

Newcomers

WASHINGTON'S newest bookstore is the Leamington Book Shop, just off Connecticut ave. at 1713 K st. nw., specializing in rare books. Proprietor Sidney Hamer, a Washington resident since 1931, is a cellist who played with the Philadelphia, Cleveland and National Symphony Orchestras before becoming absorbed with books.

Another newcomer is the Airport Book Shop at National Airport, which reports that the day after the election a customer came in and bought five copies of Dale Carnegie's "How to Stop Worrying and Start Living" for gloomy Republican friends. Mrs. Margaret Waggoner, formerly with Brentano's, and Samuel Yudkin, noted stamp collector, are operating the shop.

Also new is the National Literary Agency, the city's first full-time literary agency, with offices at 1719 I st. nw. Frederick Reinstein, former New England newspaperman and book reviewer, is director. On the staff are Beatrice M. Murphy, who has edited anthologies, and Cora Holbrook, veteran publisher's scout and agent. Their efforts for authors will range from initial research to final marketing.

Robert Hichens' name on the title-page of a new novel, "Incognito," published by McBride, may not mean much to younger readers, but to old-timers it will bring something of a sentimental pang.

Hichens, now 84, was the author of "The Garden of Allah," precursor of E. M. Hull's "The Sheik." Some 700,000 English and American readers bought "The Garden," published in 1905.

Among other famous Hichens novels were "The Paradine Case" and "The Green Carnation," the latter a satire in which Oscar Wilde figured.

Ant Hill Odyssey

By WILLIAM M. MANN
Director of the National Zoo

The Director of the National Zoo is one of the most beloved figures in Washington today, a leader among natural scientists, and a constant adviser to government and private naturalists, as well as a popular host and raconteur. Yet it is impossible to identify William Mann with any one spot on the globe or one set of associates.

It is of the world and of his friends that he tells in his book. As the reader follows his travels and exults with him in his finds, thankful at times that rare and remarkable snakes, deadly and fascinating insects are met only through the printed page, it is plain that this gentle collector will now, by means of the book, add many more friends to his world-wide collection.

When FERENC NAGY was Premier of Hungary, he tried to rebuild his war-devastated country in coalition with the Communists. His startling Saturday Evening Post articles about his experiences told only a small part of the story. His new book reveals in fascinating detail the means by which the Communists gained control over the Hungarian people—from the first fine promises of the liberators to the melodramatic coup d'état that crushed the last vestige of democratic opposition.

This is the exciting, first-hand story of a man of peasant stock who became one of the outstanding political figures of his country. It is a record of his unending struggle to win democratic rights for his people—first against the absolutism of feudal landlords, then against the Nazi conquerors, and finally against the Communist tide that overwhelmed his homeland—and threatens to flood the world.

Crime Does Pay Mrs. Rinehart

'Staircase' Led to a Bank Vault

By Sterling North

MY STORY. By Mary Roberts Rinehart. Rhinehart. 570 pp., $4.

ON A RECENT Mother's Day, Stanley Rinehart, eldest son of the author and her "senior publisher," commemorated Mary Roberts Rinehart's life of vicarious crime with two quatrains entitled: "To Mother, On the Occasion of Her Fifty-Third Murder"—

Yet taken all in all your killing art
Has gained in quiet skill through all the years
Till taking unsuspecting folk apart
Is greeted by your family with cheers.

And so your offspring, on this Mother's Day,
Do homage to your homicidal knowledge.
Who says that bloody murder does not pay?
It helped to put a lot of us through college!

In brief, those stanzas sum up the book. Mary Roberts Rinehart admits cheerfully that all of her life she has written for money. It helped buy food, clothing and rather elaborate shelter. It educated the children, furnished pleasant vacations in the West, paid for a retinue of servants and underwrote a yacht.

Nor will Mrs. Rinehart quibble with those who claim that very little of what she has written is "literature." She does not consider herself a stylist. But she is proud of her craftsmanship and her ability to tell a story.

Mrs. Rinehart wanted to be a doctor, but her family had no funds to send her through medical school. Instead she became a nurse in the days when that was a daring career for a young and modest woman. In the best tradition of romantic fiction, she married a striving young doctor, bore him three sons and helped him finance the menage with her (then) underpaid pen.

MRS. RINEHART

Best known for her classic mystery, "The Circular Staircase," her smash dramatic hit, "The Bat," her "Tish" stories and other popular creative works, Mrs. Rinehart also gained wide fame for her coverage of the First World War as a reporter. All down the years her books have appeared at predictably regular intervals. And most of them have been best sellers.

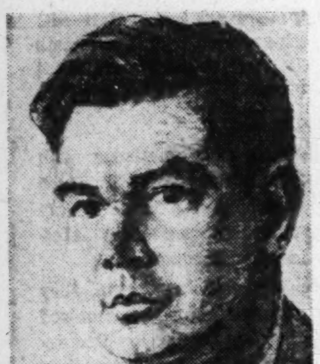
Although Mrs. Rinehart does not pretend to write realism, she might have taken much of the carnage in her writing directly from life. An appalling series of violent deaths and near deaths of those closest to her dot the book right down to the sensational attempt by her Filipino cook first to shoot her, then to stab her. As you will remember from the news stories, he then committed suicide.

Probably the most ironical character line from life or fiction was uttered as that cook in shirtsleeves, with gun in pocket, came menacingly into the drawing room:

"Why, Reyes," I said, "where is your coat?"

Many memoirs seem to have been written in dishabille. Not Mrs. Rinehart's. To her, decorum is more precious than life itself. Who could have doubted that a servant who dared enter the Rinehart drawing room in shirtsleeves was a murderer at heart?

Va. Anthology Chooses Well From Riches



FRANCIS C. ROSENBERGER
. . . As sketched by Carl Nyquist

VIRGINIA READER. Edited by Francis Coleman Rosenberger. Dutton. 576 pp. $5.

FRANCIS Coleman Rosenberger's anthology is subtitled, "A Treasury of Writing From the First Voyages to the Present," and extends from Arthur Barlowe's "Narrative of the First Voyage to Virginia, 1584," to such contemporaries as Stringfellow Barr and Karl Shapiro.

Such an anthology, with the artificial limitation of a State's boundary lines, could be quite dull, exposing to view the paucity and poverty of the literature contributed to the national mainstream. The "Virginia Reader," though, shows once again the great literary riches of the Old Dominion, and from this material Rosenberger has chosen with much good taste and judgment. The result is a book with considerably more than provincial appeal.

The freshness of an anthology depends in great part on the unfamiliar material of quality brought to a reader's attention. Rosenberger, in reprinting such items as Henry Norwood's "A Voyage to Virginia" in 1649 and "Bacon's Epitaph, Made by His Man," has achieved this freshness.

Where he has been confronted with such problems of choice as in the writings of Edgar Allan Poe, he has also chosen well—in the instance of Poe using a story with a Charlottesville setting, where Poe attended the University, as did Rosenberger more recently.

Rosenberger, a native of Manassas, has done book reviewing for the Richmond Times-Dispatch, The Washington Post and the New York Herald Tribune Weekly Book Review. He is a lawyer by profession, and lives in Alexandria.

PASSIONATE JOURNEY, a Novel in 165 Woodcuts. By Frans Masereel. Lear. $3.

FRANS MASEREEL was probably the originator of the novel in woodcuts, and "Passionate Journey," the story of a young man's headlong rush through life in search of spiritual values, is a good example of his art. To speak of the strength and skill of this Flemish artist's work is unnecessary, as he is now almost an "old master." The introduction is by Thomas Mann.

L. G.

THE CHOSEN VALLEY, the Story of a Pioneer Town. By Margaret Snyder. Norton. 376 pp. $4.

"THE CHOSEN VALLEY" is a case study of a typical small Midwestern community, Chatfield, Minn., founded in 1853. Its interest, like "Middletown," is in its being representative of the warp and woof of American life, and as such it has its place in the cultural history of the United States. Unfortunately, "The Chosen Valley" reads at moments like a novel, which takes it out of the pure history class without making it any more entertaining.—L. G.

SKETCHBOOK. By C. W. Anderson. Macmillan. $3.50.

A SUBTITLE for this work could have been "How to Draw a Horse." It is full of the quick sketches and incredibly beautiful lithographs of horses which made Anderson's previous works on the same subject, "Black, Bay and Chestnut," "Deep Through the Heart" and some others, such a pleasure. Anderson starts out with simple sketches and almost makes you think you could draw a horse as well as he can. But you probably can't. Required reading for horse lovers.—O. B. H.

WHO'S WHO. 1948. Macmillan. $19.

ONE HUNDRED years ago a London publisher, Alfred Head Baily, printed a list of names which he called Who's Who. Adam and Charles Black took possession in 1896 by the toss of a coin and payment of 30 pounds. They introduced the biographical sketch of each named person and the centennial issue this year contains thousands starting with British author and playwright "A. A." and ending with Zwemer, Rev. Samuel Marinus, American.—J. K. B.

STORM AND ECHO. By Frederic Prokosch. Doubleday. 274 pp. $3.

PROKOSCH'S novel of a journey into Africa is a tone poem of jungle unwholesomeness both fascinating and repelling. A story that is in one aspect of the romantic tradition, it suggests moments of Poe and Baudelaire, but is a work of original talent.—L. G.

SENSE AND SENSIBILITY IN MODERN POETRY. By William Van O'Connor. University of Chicago Press. 279 pp. $4.

WILLIAM VAN O'CONNOR, assistant professor of English at the University of Minnesota, has written a study of the effect on modern poets of the separation of the objective from the subjective since the rise of industrialism and scientism. This is a book addressed to the serious student of poetry.—L. G.

THE UNPREJUDICED PALATE. By Angelo Pellegrini. Macmillan. $3.

COOKING is more a cult than an art to Pellegrini, who would rather eat than teach English at the University of Washington, as he must, to eat. He thinks there are already too many cookbooks; what he has written is "a book on bread and wine in relation to life." He is a gardener first, with peasant roots in the soil of Italy, and he tells how to grow a carrot or a cabbage. There are recipes, too, and instructions for pressing wine, but mostly he gives us food for thought in a delightful book.

THE STORY OF BLOOD. By John H. Glynn, M. D. Wyn. $3.

HUMAN blood has become an important medicine, as medical science begins to solve some of its mysteries. Dr. Glynn writes for the layman, simply and entertainingly, of the use of whole blood, plasma and blood products such as fribrinogen to fight shock, control bleeding and even combat measles. It is a well-rounded work on a new subject.

His long distinguished career is a fulfillment of the American dream.

Polish Greed Is Tragedy of Mikolajczyk Book

the men, or send them to other prisons, or to Siberia, or to the firing squad.

Mikolajczyk now says the men were shot through the back of the head in groups of 30. He suggests that Stalin never knew until long afterward how his one-word order had been interpreted.

But he does not name his informant, nor does he explain why the Polish government rushed publicly into the best-laid propaganda trap of the war. The Nazis were the only ones who profited, for the Katyn affair led to a break in Polish-Soviet relations in 1943, and its poison was so lethal that its effects still linger to this day.

Mikolajczyk also tells of his government's ceaseless refusal to accept the so-called Curzon Line as the eastern frontier of Poland, even after vast stretches of German territory had been offered as "compensation." He gives a long account of his heartbreaking interview with Stalin in August, 1944, when he failed to get help for the great uprising of General Bor's Poles in Warsaw. His story of the rising itself is less complete, however, than Ambassador Arthur Bliss Lane's version in "I Saw Poland Betrayed," and the Soviet version has never been told.

Escape Story Significant

AFTER THE war Mikolajczyk spent two years in Poland as a member of the ill-fated coalition government there. He did what he could to get observance of the pledges made at Yalta for civil rights and free elections, but the Communist cards were hopelessly stacked against him.

Step by step, arrest by arrest, torture by torture, the Communists smothered political opposition, until Mikolajczyk himself had to flee in October of last year. The story of his escape is absorbing reading, and suggests that there is plenty of political dissent and discontent among the Soviet troops in the eastern zone of Germany.

The real ruler of Poland now, he says, is a Russian General Malinov whose name has never appeared in a Polish newspaper and who "towers above all other officials—public or secret." He says Stanislaw Radkiewicz, the head of the Polish security police, commands 230,000 men, of whom 90,000 are stationed in offices throughout the country, 100,000 are in barracks as formal military units and 40,000 are plainclothesmen. In addition, he says Radkiewicz commands 120,000 armed civilians who will do the Communist government's bidding.

He pictures present-day Poland as a nation in bondage, although his indictment would be more convincing if he so much as mentioned the astonishing economic recovery which the Polish people have made since the war.

He is convinced that a new world war is inevitable. He says the announcement of it came from Radkiewicz at a secret meeting of security police officers and Communist officials in Lodz in April, 1947.

"'There will be a war with the West,' Radkiewicz told the assembly. 'It will be won by the USSR. Of that there must be no doubt. First, we must indoctrinate the people of Poland for that war . . . In Poland we must quickly prepare for that war by liquidating the Peasant Party and the remnants of independent thought in the Socialist Party . . . The dissenting rank and file must be crushed. Polish youth must be prepared and trained'."

An Error of Avarice

IT IS a tragic story; and it is tragic, too, to read how Roosevelt and Hull, Churchill and Eden pleaded with the Poles to accept the eastern boundary and to show good will to the Russians while there still was time.

Instead, the London Poles quarreled with their giant Russian neighbor over western as well as eastern frontiers; they demanded more of East Prussia even after they knew that their territory would reach to the Oder deep inside Germany; they named a new cruiser the Lwow as if to taunt the Russians at the very moment when the City of Lwow was a bone of contention between them.

More than once Churchill lost his temper with the Polish leaders in London. He probably was thinking of Mikolajcyk, as well as of Pilsudski and Beck of the prewar years, when he wrote of the Poles in "The Gathering Storm:"

"It is a mystery and tragedy of European history that a people capable of every heroic virtue, gifted, valiant, charming as individuals, should repeatedly show such inveterate faults in every aspect of their governmental life."

The pattern of events in Hungary, as told in Nagy's book, is astonishingly like the Polish story—except that Hungary was a former enemy while Poland was an ally. Perhaps for this reason, Nagy writes with less bitterness of the Western leaders, and concedes that Hungary's own leaders drew her into folly and disaster.

He thinks Hungarian democracy would have had a chance after the war if the Western allies had been quicker in making a peace treaty and in extending moral and material support. He, too, had the cards stacked against him, and the Communists drove him out when they found they could not control him.

He writes as a man of genuine good will. He found things to admire in Moscow as well as in the United States. But, then, Hungary did not suffer as Poland did, and by the time Nagy took office the charity had not been burned out of his soul.

Rare Story of Siege

HIS BOOK is much too long, but it has its historical value. It contains one of the few eyewitness accounts in English of the siege of Budapest, one of the most fearful ordeals any great city has had to undergo. And it tells in fascinating and revolting detail of the tactics by which the Communists in Hungary, under Soviet direction, used conspiracy charges against the democrats to put themselves in complete and unchallenged control.

The Fotitch book is in a different category. Its author has spent the last few years as a charming and popular propagandist for the Yugoslav monarchy. The hero of his story is General Mihailovich, who was tried and shot to death by the Communists.

The villain, naturally, is Marshal Tito, and the chief argument is that Roosevelt and Churchill committed a colossal error in switching their support to Tito during the war. To read Fotitch's account, one would suppose that they switched their support chiefly because they were taken in by Tito propaganda.

Fotitch has not been swayed in the slightest by Tito's present quarrel with the Cominform. He thinks Tito has not abandoned Communism, and probably could not rely on the support of the Yugoslav army even if he wanted to switch to the West.

He warns the Western Allies to be careful not to accept any overtures from this Balkan dictator, for in Yugoslavia "are some of the seeds of dissension from which World War III may be born."

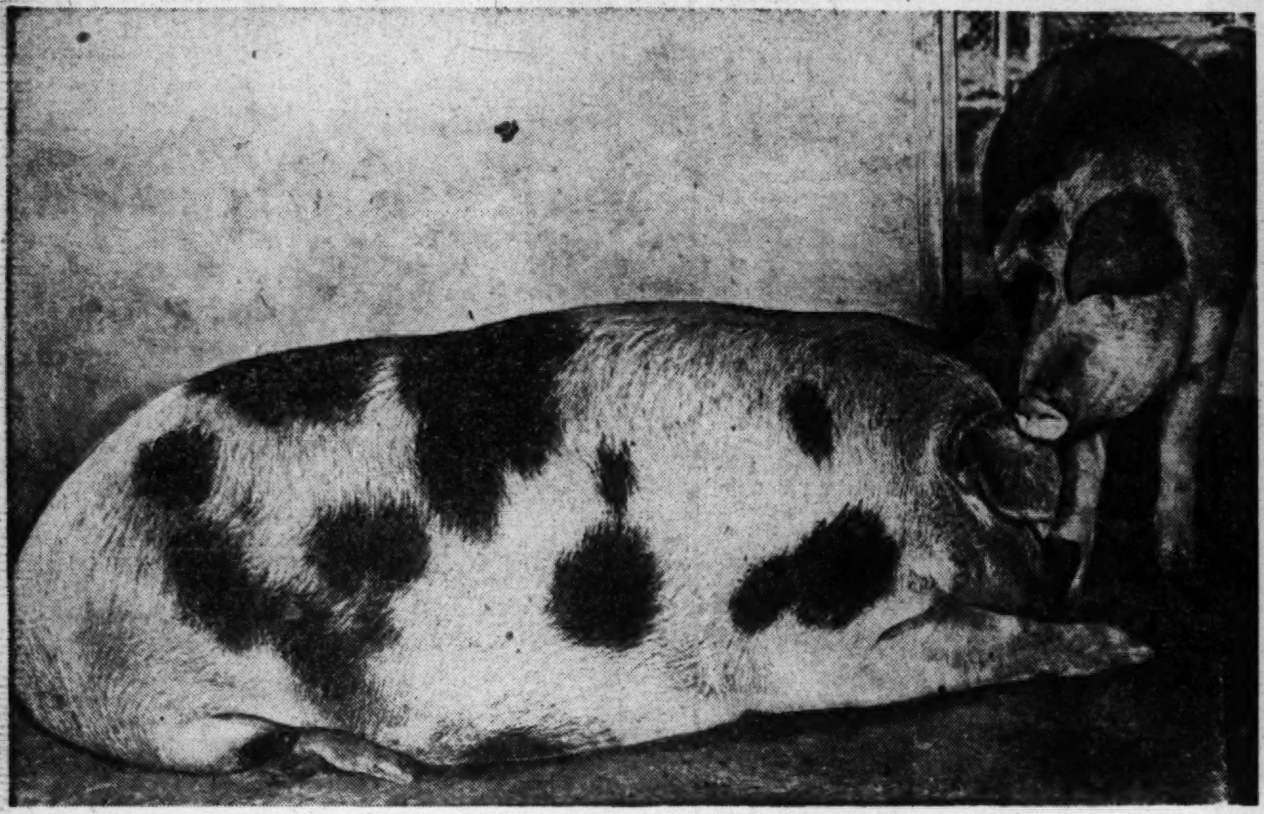
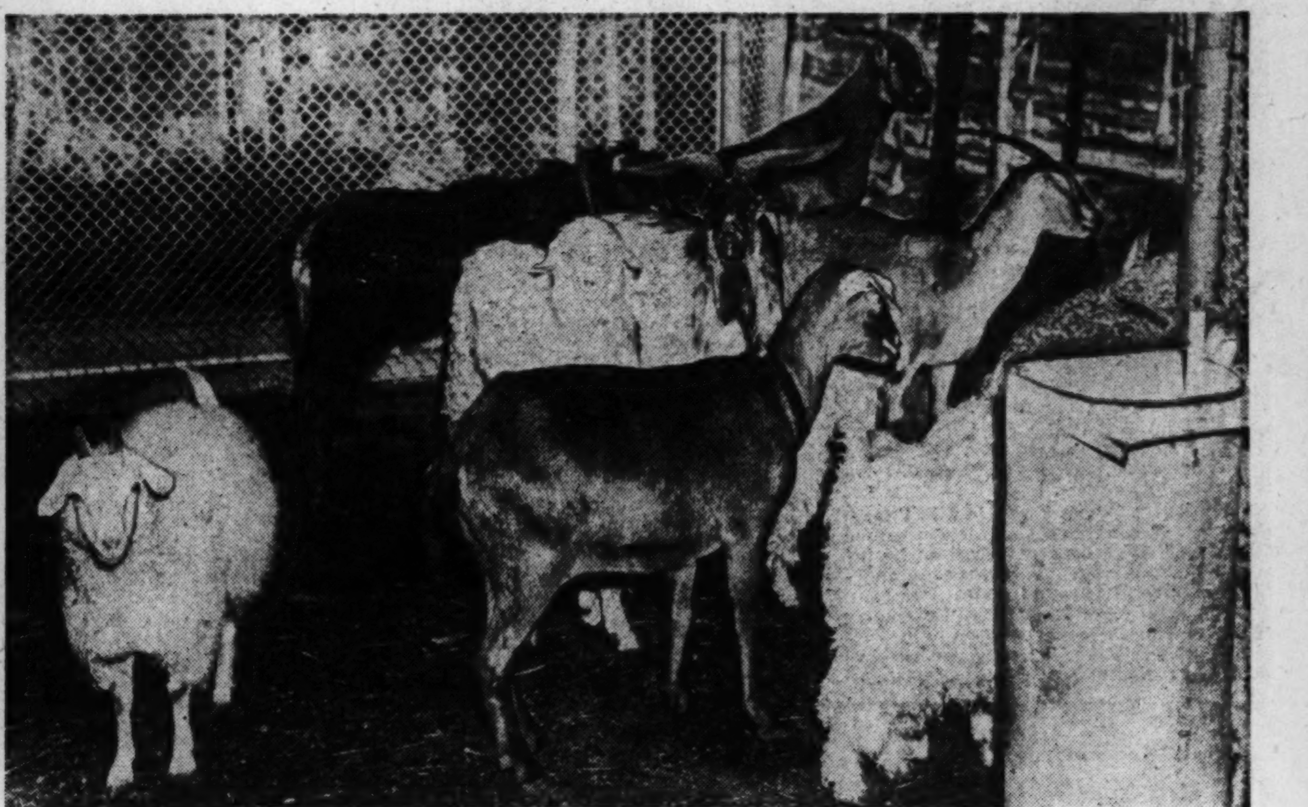
Bethesda Scientists Duplicate Effect of Atomic 'Death Rays'



That nuzzling by a fellow porker must be affection, not pity, for "311" is quite happy these days. She is the celebrated pig found swimming in Bikini lagoon after the 1946 bomb test. She's 2½ years old now, and walloping big



These Bikini survivors weren't as close to the elemental eruption as 311, but they're getting the same fine treatment at Bethesda. Navy pensioners now, they're living out charmed lives while younger brothers brave a million volts

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

A POWERFUL X-ray machine may show scientists the way to treat and cure "radiation sickness," the prelude to death from atom bomb rays.

Scientists at the Naval Medical Research Center, Bethesda, Md., have reported they are duplicating such lethal injuries to animal life with a commercial, one-million-volt X-ray machine. The machine is normally used to seek out hidden flaws in naval gun metals.

Its new use, to bombard live animals with its ionizing rays, produces body damage "indistinguishable" from radiation injuries that decimated the herds of test goats and swine in the Bikini bomb tests of 1946, the scientists said.

But although they can readily start the deadly process, they emphasized they have yet to find a way to stop it or even slow down its course of hemorrhages, anemia, internal decay and death.

The new research measure was unfolded during a routine visit last week to look in on the few animal survivors of Bikini. Those still living, it can be reported, are comfortable and secure on Bethesda pasturelands, pensioned from further atom ray tests.

Other swine, goats and rats of the same species are being used in the X-ray experiments, researchers said.

The medical research project is considered vital, since it concerns study into an atomic age hazard to human life, ionizing radiation injury to the total body, virtually unknown before the atom bomb. The delayed death rays exploded out at the speed of light, plunge through ship armor plate virtually unchecked.

Scientists found this out for a certainty at Bikini, where 176 goats, 147 pigs, 3130 rats and 57 guinea pigs were placed on 22 target ships for the midair and underwater atom bomb explosions. Located in normal crew positions, their shieldings from ionizing radiation varied from no protection to that of 6 and 8 inches of steel armor plate.

Results of the Bikini tests have long been public. About 10 per cent of the animals were destroyed by the first blast. The second, exploded under water, subjected the animals only to radiation, which seldom kills immediately. Thirty per cent so subjected died within four weeks.

Lesions Are Identical

COMMENTING last week on the similarity of results between total body exposure to ionizing radiation at Bikini and that obtained under the million-volt X-ray machine, Comdr. John L. Tullis of the Navy Medical Corps observed that:

1. Lesions produced by the two types of exposure are indistinguishable from each other and consist mainly of hemorrhage, destruction of body tissue and secondary infection.

2. Hemorrhage is generalized, appearing in most parts of the body, including the lungs, heart, intestines and bone marrow.

3. Anemia is produced by hemorrhage into the tissues and internal organs and by destruction of the red blood cell-forming substances in bone marrow.

4. Resulting lowering of body resistance by the earlier effects makes the victim highly susceptible to secondary infections, particularly pneumonia.

These effects, Dr. Tullis said, are found mainly in pathological tests, that part of the research project which he heads. On clinical grounds alone, he said, the animals subjected to ionizing radiation show few symptoms.

Subjected to a lethal dosage, they appear virtually unaffected for the first two or three days. They then appear to tire easily and prefer to lie down. If disturbed, they may even become belligerent. If they haven't died by the end of two weeks, they have a 50-50 chance to survive, he said.

Those still living 30 days after exposure will probably live out their normal life span, he concluded. The findings, he said, correspond generally with studies made of human victims at Hiroshima.

As yet, he said, the process of ionizing radiation has been found to be irreversible. The rays simply split up the compounds of blood cells into their constituent parts. A "perfect" remedy, Dr. Tullis said, would be some agent or catalyst that would just as quickly reform the parts into their original compounds.

To date, he said, no such agent is known to exist, nor have researchers any grounds for hope of finding one.

As to spectacularly publicized theories that atom bomb radiations may cause changes in genes and produce new races of giants, dwarfs and grotesque freaks, the medical researchers at Bethesda say they have found nothing to bear these out.

They added, however, that gene mutations carry over to fifth and sixth generations whereas progeny of the surviving Bikini animals are only one generation removed. In any event, they said, nothing conclusive can be drawn from anything that shows up in future offspring because of the smallness of the group.

There are now only five swine and 15 goats (counting offspring) left in Bethesda. The others which survived irradiation death died in science's effort to learn more about future war hazards.

Serums Being Tried

THE RESEARCH now continues with other animals. Present tests, Dr. Tullis said, seek to determine the value of immunizing serums for the secondary infections that set in after irradiation.

For example, the pathologist said, they want to know whether animals immunized to lockjaw are less apt to develop that infection after exposure to X-radiation than those not immunized. The same knowledge is needed regarding all known immunizing agents.

With controlled laboratory use of the X-ray machine (located at the Naval Gun Factory here), Dr. Tullis said the animals can now be subjected to dosages just short of those causing death, enabling researchers to study fully the progressive degenerative cycle of ionizing radiation.

Globe-Trotting Cap'n Plied Hitler With Pigs' Knuckles

By John London
Post Reporter

HE CHATTED with Gandhi; fed pig's knuckles and sauerkraut to Hitler . . . and sold windshield antifreeze solution to South Africans.

("I've got a million dollars worth of memories, not a penny of regrets.")

Capt. John Fiske Little, in 72 years of global living has done what he wanted to do, gone where he's wanted to go ("that's everything and everywhere.")

This walrus-looking ancient mariner and super-salesman believes his greatest accomplishment is that he votes Democratic and still has friends in Bath, Me., where he was born. Visiting Washington now, he usually summers in Maine, winters in Florida.

He comes from salty Down-East folks and first went down to the sea in ships at 16, as cabin boy on the full-rigged ship Shenandoah. ("Carried 5-gallon cans of kerosene round Cape Horn to 'Frisco in 149 days from Pier 12 in the East River, New York.")

And he's been traveling ever since. ("It'd take a Philadelphia lawyer to figure how many miles I've sailed.").

Surgeon of Parts

SINCE HIS left leg was crushed by a hatch cover aboard the freighter State of Texas in the Spanish-American War, he's een traveling as a passenger—to buy lace St. Helena and textiles in Japan, to sell oe polish in Jamaica.

"I could sell a brick house upside n.") piloted the first auto over South n veldt while advertising Stetson hats Villys Knights . . . entertained the of Windsor in New York . . . let Cleveland know how irritating his was . . . and amputated a sailor's ed leg.

avorite story is set in Heidelberg about 1926. Captain Little was over there buying radio parts. He left his hotel with a friend, Walter S. Mansfield, a Liverpool engineer, and they saw a man leading a group of teen-age boys in uniforms. ("Thought it was some Boy Scout outfit.")

Captain Little gave the boys money for candy and invited the leader, man by the name of Hitler, out for lunch in a nearby beer garden.

("He was wearing a dirty shirt, needed a shave and didn't drink; just ate pigs knuckles and sauerkraut and talked to Mansfield about the Jews.")

Years later, in 1933, Captain Little was at the Adlon Hotel in Berlin and sent his card with a note around to Hitler's chancellory. Little was invited to dinner and says he went with Arthur Dunning, then secretary of the American Chamber of Commerce in Berlin.

("Goebbels and Goering and the whole gang were there and Hitler drank champagne. I couldn't understand what they were saying—all in German.")

Critic of President

IT WAS aboard the United States revenue cutter Lot M. Morrell, skippered by his father, that Captain Little, then a youngster, met President Cleveland. A Cabinet officer asked the lad if he'd slept well the first night out of Charleston, and the boy replied: "How could I sleep with Mr. Cleveland snoring all night?"

More fondly, he remembers the Duke of Windsor. The captain's wife, the late Marie Lounsbery Holt Little, a concert singer, was on the reception committee when the then Prince of Wales first visited the United States ("Very democratic sort of fellow. Terrible the way his mother's treated him just because he's lived up to his wedding vows").

Gandhi he met when both were passengers aboard ship from Capetown to Southampton. Gandhi ("He looked like a skeleton I once saw at Bellevue") lived in a pup tent pitched on the forward part of the main deck and sometimes talked for hours to the captain and other passengers about India's problems.

Capt. John Fiske Little thought the early Brown Shirts were "some Boy Scout outfit"

About all this voyaging, and more, the captain's written a book, set for February publication, he believes. It's called "World's Beyond," because his first skipper said, "Steer for that star, son; it's worlds beyond."

Now he's ready to spread sail for that final voyage.

("I'm ready to go anytime the Skipper is ready to take me aboard—my conscience is clear.")

20 Million Coming to Birthday Party

THE MAN sits there and in a dry, Southern voice starts talking about things that aren't going to happen for another 18 months.

All of a sudden, and without realizing quite why, you start getting excited about what he's saying. You start thinking of adjectives like "colossal."

For the celebration of Washington's 150th birthday figures to be just that. The man with the quiet Southern voice, Edward Boykin, who is planning the celebration, is "pret-ty sure" it won't flop. He says that as quietly as he tells you, "We have reasonably elaborate designs on Congress" to finance the thing.

Washington's Sesquicentennial, if all goes well, is expected to bring 20 million visitors here in 1950. Boykin is not worrying about where they are going to stay. He just wants to be sure they get here.

The way things are shaping up, there will be plenty to draw crowds, apart from the usual panorama of the Washington scene.

The Sesquicentennial will emphasize the historic highlights of Washington's growth and, through it, of the growth of a Nation. Commission members feel that the average American knows entirely too little about his own Capital, which has risen from a sea of mud in 1800 to its present status as one of the world's most beautiful cities.

Industry Enthusiastic

PRIVATE interests have offered to build (without cost to the Government) an exhibit which would show the advance in the process of making steel since 1800. Other manufacturers have said they will show the history of the plow and the reaper, the two greatest agricultural influences in the Nation's life. As a matter of fact, a number of large industries have asked to be included among "Sesqui" exhibitors.

Nearly all the States and Territories already have said they will send exhibits depicting their own histories. There have been some offers of exhibits which the commission is going to turn down, too.

One character offered to erect a ferris wheel—historic significance not explained. A group of sculptors offered to bring some of their work here. An example of the type of thing they had in mind, Boykin said, was a "Sketch of a Buoyant Woman." "Well," he said slowly, "maybe she is, at that, maybe she is."

The State Department is issuing an official invitation to every nation in the world to send representatives to the big birthday party, which will begin April 15, 1950, anniversary of the city's cornerstone laying, and end November 22, 150 years to the day from the time President John Adams mounted a coach and four and rode to the Capitol to address a joint session of Congress.

Boykin figures it will take a lot of acreage to accommodate the Sesquicentennial exhibits. There will be plenty of them from Washington itself—notably one from the Postoffice Department, first Federal agency to get under way here. The department is planning one of the largest exhibits of stamps ever shown anywhere, and expects also to issue commemorative stamps.

Resounding Categories

OUT OF ALL THIS, Washington will get some more temporary buildings, which under law will be removed immediately after the Sesqui, and an amphitheater to accommodate 10,000 persons. The Sesquicentennial buildings will house exhibit types under these general titles:

Temple of Patriotism, Plaza of States, Diorama of Governments, Pavilion of Nations and Cavalcade of Industry.

Boykin, who with the commission membership, headed by President Truman, ex officio, has set all these wheels in motion since his appointment last July, is well qualified for the job.

He has been in the advertising agency business for 20 years, mostly in New York, after stint of newspapering on what is now the New York Journal American. He has done historical broadcasts over WMAL.

He will admit to all this and then add, in his quiet voice, "Fact is, I had something to do with the Thomas Jefferson Bicentennial Commission." He was its executive secretary.

Boykin is author of a life of George Washington. He has written a book on Thomas Jefferson, two American History Quiz Books and two books on basic American documents and letters.

Last week he was discussing the Sesqui plans at a Washington Board of Trade committee luncheon. He was asked what he thought Congress would do on appropriations for the work.

"Well," he said, "It seems to me the best way to do it is to visualize the whole thing. I think that will convince anyone it's worthwhile."

One congressional aide was heard to remark, "Darned if it probably won't."

The Other Washington

PART OF THE visualizing that Boykin will do before Congress involves children. He is planning a series of seven booklets for distribution in public schools throughout the country.

These booklets are going to tell a story which Boykin thinks has been sadly neglected by both historians and contemporary publications: the story of the City of Washington as apart from the story of its present place in politics and international affairs.

Boykin hopes that the booklets—and other projects he will ask the Nation's schools to adopt—will "sell" school children on the idea of coming here in 1950 to get the feel of the growth of a Nation and its Capital. He hopes 10 million of them will show up.

On hand to help them and the other millions which the Sesquicentennial is expected to bring here, will have to be a lot of District volunteers. They are going to have to play host to the visitors in giving them directions and neighborly advice.

This job, Boykin thinks, is one for the high school girls and boys of Washington. "They like to do things like that," he reflects.

Saving It for 'Hill'

BOYKIN isn't willing, at this time, to say what the commission thinks the project ought to cost. When Congress is approached, the figure will be given out, coupled with a plea for an immediate appropriation so the Sesquicentennial can really get "rolling."

Already Paul Green, who memorialized the first Virginia settlers with his "Lost Colony," is at work on a symphonic drama which will depict the story of George Washington. In a letter to Boykin late this week, he promised completion of first draft work by midwinter.

What all this will do to Washington is difficult to imagine. One thing is certain: if all goes well, business will certainly boom here. America will meet Washington—Washington will welcome the world. And the average District resident, the poor voteless-yet-taxed citizen, will probably get trampled underfoot in the rush.

ontgomery's Launched Charter Ship; Now to Pick a Crew

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

T LIES ahead for the controveral "home rule" charter of Mont- County?

ion of a charter form of governy county voters November 2 only to drive underground bitter opposisome quarters. Opponents admit y now that they cannot afford to ublic opinion.

no one believes that smooth sailing d for the new council-manager govnt, least of all the hardy group of erites" which fought and finally won harter battle.

rter leaders built the vessel which launched by county voters. Now re- perhaps the more difficult task of g a captain and crew that will steer hrough uncharted waters.

erest Believed Low

N JANUARY 6, at a special election, county voters will select the seven mbers of the charter council which will ke over the helm of county government. Political observers are predicting a small turnout, although this first charter council will have the responsibility of choosing key administrative officials whose performance could be a decisive factor in whether charter is a success or failure.

One of the most important aspects of the charter is delegation of administrative tasks to administrative officials.

At present, even such minor administrative functions as approval of bingo permits and appointment of assistant clerks are vested exclusively in the five-man board of county commissioners.

Most important of the appointive officials under charter is the county manager, who will receive $12,000 a year to run the county on a businesslike basis.

Appointment of the county manager will be the first major task of the charter council when it takes office January 10, just four days after the election.

His duties will consist of supervising and coordinating the various departments, and he will be empowered to hire and fire county employes subject to provisions of a merit system which will be set up.

Charter opponents have charged that the county manager will be a "dictator." The charter provides, however, that the manager shall operate under the "general direction of the county council," and he may be dismissed after a public hearing. In effect, he will be limited to carrying out policies established by the council.

Constitution Limits Time

BASICALLY, the charter provides "home rule" for the county. Local laws have traditionally been enacted by the Maryland General Assembly at Annapolis. Under charter, this power is transferred to the county council. All local laws, previously passed by the State Legislature, must be enacted by the council in May of each year.

This point has been a mainstay in anti-charter arguments. The one-month limitation, however, is imposed by the Maryland constitution, and its repeal would require a State-wide vote.

Some observers say the county council may seek repeal of the constitutional amendment, but until it is repealed, legislative needs will have to be anticipated one year in advance.

A strong argument of charter suporters has been that the charter empowers the council to issue its own bonds without first obtaining approval of the State Legislature. That power is meaningless at present, however.

Under State law, charter governments may not exceed a debt of 7 per cent of the county's assessed valuation. Montgomery's assessable base is 245 million dollars and the bonded debt is about 19 million dollars, or more than 7 per cent. Hence, the charter council will be unable to issue bonds unless the limit is raised by the General Assembly or the assessable base is substantially increased.

A move is already under way for introduction of such a bill at the January session of the General Assembly.

Postelection events have been highlighted by the jockeying for position in the January 6 election of the county charter committee, a civic group which led the charter fight, county Democrats and Republicans.

The charter committee, a nonpartisan body, will indorse a slate of candidates, the county Democrats will not and the local GOP is still undecided.

Certain to file petitions are the seven unnamed persons who will be indorsed by the charter committee. And Mrs. Alma T. Opal, Takoma Park housewife and unsuccessful candidate in the 1946 House of Delegates race, last week became the first avowed candidate. Observers are generally predicting that 10 to 12 names will appear on the January 6 ballot.

Outright refusal of the county's Democratic State Central Committee to participate in selection of charter council candidates on the ground it is the responsibility of the charter committee, was interpreted by some as almost assuring that the charter committee slate will coast in. Not only did Democratic leaders refuse to indorse council candidates, but they urged county Democrats to vote for the charterites' slate.

And at least one Republican leader has admitted privately that the firm Democratic stand against candidate indorsement may lead the GOP to follow suit.

Maryland Trampled; Irish Given Scare

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern:

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Former Catcher Paul Richards, who is headed for the managerial job at Detroit, unwillingly set a record of seven passed balls in a seven-inning game at Atlanta. It happened the first time Dutch Leonard unfurled his knuckle ball for Atlanta in 1936 . . . the Yankees, who came away empty-handed from the minor league draft meeting at Cincinnati, went there with one objective to claim Outfielder John Simmons, drafted from Montreal by the Nats . . . Simmons was formerly the property of the Yankees at Norfolk and they lost him to Montreal three years ago due to a clerical error that left his name on the draft list . . . Redskins Fullback Jim Castiglia, piqued by Coach Turk Edwards' failure to play him more than a few minutes, was so furious in Boston last week he kicked and shattered the Redskins' bench . . . The Redskins ownership is still scoffing at the Baltimore Colts, but why? In the four home games of each club, the Colts have outdrawn the Redskins 136,000 to 130,000 . . . Penn State will refuse an invitation to the Sugar Bowl because the bowl people last year objected to the presence of a Negro on Penn State's boxing team which was invited to New Orleans.

AFTER 12 YEARS with the Redskins, Sammy Baugh has become a prince of privilege. He practices with the team only when he chooses, usually on Thursdays and Fridays after the bruises of the week before wear off . . . Too Bad Virginia and Georgetown can't patch up their old rift and resume a fine football rivalry. Thomas Jefferson and Father John Carroll, the respective founders of the two universities, were great friends . . . North Carolina's Charley Justice is ranked the second best punter in college football with his 43.6 yard average per kick. But he is out-ranked on his own team. Reynolds of Carolina can show a 44.0 average for the one punt he has made this season . . . Bob Mathias, the 17-year-old boy wonder of the Olympics who won the gruelling decathlon, is still very much the all-around athlete. The other day for Kiski prep, the muscular Californian intercepted a pass and raced 69 yards for the touchdown that beat the West Virginia freshmen, 7-6. . . Harvey Johnson, place-kicking expert of the New York Yankees, is shooting for the all-time record of 72 consecutive points after touchdown, set by automatic Jack Manders of the Bears. Johnson has converted his last 61 attempts.

HERE'S A FURTHER convincer that you can't beat the races; for much, anyway. Jack Walsh reports that if you made a $2 straight bet on Citation in each of his 18 races this season (he won only 17, you know,) you'd have a net profit of just $4.40. That deuce that went down the drain when Saggy won at Havre de Grace in Citation's only defeat, really cuts the winnings . . . Leo De Orsey, No. 2 stockholder in the Redskins, sat on the Notre Dame bench as the guest of Frank Leahy today and doubtless inquired if Leahy is interested in coaching the pro league . . . Goldie Ahearn's good fight show at Uline Arena Wednesday night featuring Sonny Boy West and Stonewall Jackson, will decide the lightweight championship of Washington a title Ahearn himself once won from Andy Bowen in 1924 . . . The Big Nine representative in the Rose Bowl gets only two elevenths of the visiting team's share of the receipts with the rest being distributed among other members schools . . . Under a new major league ruling, the home clubs must provide elaborate diathermy machines and whirlpool baths in the visiting team's dressing room, thus relieving road clubs from transporting their own from city.

GEORGE CASE, offered the management of the Nats' Charlotte farm club, turned it down to stay in the sporting goods business in Trenton, N. J. . . . In the three years he had coached the Washington Caps, Red Auerbach can show 11 wins in 13 games against the Philadelphia team that owns high scorer Joe Fulks. The Caps concentrate on outscoring Fulks, not stopping him, which is impossible . . . Jim Hardy of the Los Angeles Rams who has a higher rating as a passer this year than Sammy Baugh, was once the property of the Redskins . . . One week from today Clark Griffith will be 80, and he can shoot 80 on most any golf course on the days when his lumbago is behaving . . . The Redskins estimate that the injury that has kept Harry Gilmer out of action all season adds up to a $50,000 rap for the club in Gilmer's salary and the loss of gate receipts . . . The football rules committee, alarmed that Capt. Ken O'Donnell of Harvard suffered an ankle fracture from contact with a plastic helmet in the Princeton game, is huddling with the manufacturers and demanding helmets of softer material before the 1950 season.

Caps Win 6th Straight, 80-71

The Washington Caps took it easy and still accounted for their sixth straight triumph in the Basketball Association of America last night, an 80-71 margin over the Fort Wayne (Ind.) Zollner Pistons before a small gathering of 2085 fans at Uline Arena.

It was a close game throughout, but the Caps were never in much danger of losing. Even when they were behind, at the end of the first quarter and midway of the second quarter, there was little doubt that the Pistons were headed for their sixth straight setback.

With the victory Washington easily retained first place in the Eastern section of the league. Fort Wayne just as easily held on to last place in the Western section.

The Caps loped lazily through the first period and wound up with a 19-19 tie on the strength of Kleggie Hermsen's follow-up shot at the horn. At halftime Washington was out front by a

Army Downs Penn, 26-20, On Pass in Last Minute

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 13 (AP).—Only 30 seconds away from defeat at the hands of an amazing University of Pennsylvania eleven, Army struck 15 yards through the air for a touchdown and a 26 to 20 victory that tore the hearts out of the majority of 78,000 spectators today.

Overwhelming favorites seeking their eighth straight triumph, the Cadets were forced to fight from behind three times and needed a dazzling 103-yard runback of a kickoff by Bobby Jack Stuart to subdue the battling Quakers. It was a thriller all the way.

The big clock showed exactly a half-minute to go when Arnold Galiffa, Army quarterback, fell back and fired a strike into the arms of John Trent, an end, beyond Penn's goal line to settle the issue. The vast crowd, a moment before yelling almost as one, fell silent, stricken.

Only moments before Ray Dooney, Penn's stocky, 200-pound fullback, had blasted through Army's line and legged it 42 yards for the score that put the Quakers in front, 20-19, and apparently spelled Army's doom. Few would have risked a thin dime on the Cadets' chances of keeping an unblemished slate.

Then Army took an out-of-bounds kick on its own 26, and with the minutes ticking off, Galiffa began pitching. In six plays, the Black Knights swept to the Quaker 15, and on third down Galiffa hit the jackpot.

For Galiffa, the winning toss made last-minute amends for two glaring fumbles he committed in the first half, on each of which the aroused Penn team capitalized in full.

Dooney, in addition to his touchdown dash in the final period, had passed to End Bob Sponaugle from

Skins Favored By 14 Points

By Bill Burnett

Knowing quite well that the slightest slip might cost them the National Football League championship, the Washington Redskins today take on the Detroit Lions in their next to last Griffith Stadium appearance of the regular season at 2 p. m.

The 'Skins are favored by two touchdowns for the third straight week, but they can't take the much-beaten Lions lightly. They must win all five of their remaining games, somehow. And the lowly Lions, victors in only one game in seven, can ruin their slim title hopes just as thoroughly as the Eagles, Bears, Rams or Giants later on.

At the moment the Redskins hold down second place in the N. F. L.'s eastern section, a shade under the Philadelphia Eagles, and they figure to get no better today. The high-flying Eagles meet the Boston Yanks as four touchdowns favorites, and should retain first place at least until the all-impor-

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 13 (AP).—Two unheralded substitutes, William Gay and John Landry, brought Notre Dame from behind to defeat Northwestern, 12 to 7, today in a bruising battle of football titans.

Their heroic last quarter touchdown march came after Art Murakowski put Northwestern ahead, 7-6, on a 90-yard run when he intercepted Francis Tripucka's pass. This was Notre Dame's 20th consecutive victory and it put Coach Frank Leahy's name in the records alongside that of the great Knute Rockne.

Leahy's team has now gone 26 games without defeat, counting the 1946 scoreless tie with Army, equaling the brilliant string Rockne spun with his last teams in 1929 and 1930.

Panelli Scores for Irish

Notre Dame scored first on a 91-yard march in the first period before the capacity crowd of 59,305, with John Panelli carrying it over from the 2. Until near the end of the third period it looked like this would be all that either team could do.

But then, with Notre Dame on the march, Murakowski jumped high into the air to take Tripucka's pass and dart down the sidelines. Jim Farrar's conversion put Northwestern ahead, and it almost seemed that the year's biggest football upset was in the making.

But the 170-pound Gay and the 180-pound Landry came driving down the field, starting from Notre Dame's 37. Gay carried it over from the 1-foot mark to keep Notre Dame's record untarnished.

Notre Dame, ranked narrowly second only to Michigan in the latest A. P. poll, was favored to defeat its ancient rivals from the Big Nine by two touchdowns.

Last Game of Series

In this, their last meeting for the present in a series that began in 1889, Northern set out to prove that it could be a fit representative of the Western Conference in the Rose Bowl. Although defeated, Northwestern came out with high honors.

To start the game Murakowski and Frank Aschenbrenner slammed their way down to the Notre Dame 45, but there, Aschenbren-

Duke Drubs G. W. by 62-0

By Herb Heft

Durham, N. C., Nov. 13.—Stung by two successive losses, Duke turned its fury on poor little George Washington and left the Colonials buffeted, blue and beaten, 62-0, here today.

It was the first football meeting of the two teams, and 12,000 fans watched the Dukes treat the Colonials like long-lost cousins.

Not sparing their three workhorses, Freddie Folger, Billy Cox and Jack Friedlund, the Blue Devils scored two touchdowns in each of the first three quarters, and finished with a flourish of three touchdowns in the last period.

G. W., needless to say, was outclassed from the opening kickoff. With an eye toward next week's game against Georgetown, Coach Bo Rowland kept his mainspring, Andy Davis on the bench during the entire second half.

Middies Lose 13th in Row, 13-0, to Lions

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

New York, Nov. 13.—Navy's quest for a football victory was unrewarded again today and its losing streak lengthened to 13 straight in a futile battle with Columbia's 13-0 victors.

Before 35,000 fans, rain-soaked by a third-quarter squall, Columbia produced the game's two touchdowns within a span of four playing minutes and halted its own four-game losing streak.

The Lions' passing ace, Gene Rossides, had a hand in both scores. He completed a 5-yard touchdown pitch to End Bill Lockwood 12 seconds before the first half ended, and sent Lou Kusserow streaking around right end on a wide pitch-out after three minutes of the third quarter.

Luckless Navy momentarily appeared to have a touchdown of its own in the fourth quarter when Sophomore Walt Marquardt raced 10 yards into the end zone, only to fumble on a play that evolved as a touchback when Columbia recovered.

An eager Navy team dominated the first 28 minutes of play and three times threatened to score, but lacked the punch. The big gun in its backfield went out of action on the fourth play of the game when Bill Hawkins retired with an injured left shoulder.

The Middies rolled up 134 yards to Columbia's 73 in the first half, but in the final two quarters were held to 42 yards rushing and had nothing to match the passing efficiency of Rossides who completed 9 of his 12 pitches.

Bill Olson's interception of a pass by Bob Horne on the Columbia 28 with two minutes of the half remaining set up the Lions' first touchdown. Rossides took charge from that point, and after sending Kusserow galloping through the Navy middle for 10 yards, took to the air.

He pitched to Lockwood who lateraled to Shikita on the Navy 29, and then moved the Lions to the Navy 17 with another toss to Leftend Lockwood. Kusserow was his target on a 12-yard pitch that carried to the 5, and a flat pass to Lockwood in the end zone produced the touchdown.

Columbia Marches 71 Yards

Columbia scored on a 71-yard drive from the second-half kickoff, required only six plays. Kusserow barged for 10 yards around right end and then Rossides bootlegged the ball 37 yards around Navy's left end, with Baysinger making a touchdown-saving tackle.

Lockwood made a shoestring catch of a Rossides pitch on the Navy 16. The rain clouds broke at that point, and so did Kusserow who shook free from Marquardt after taking a lateral from Rossides behind the line, and carried 16 yards to the touchdown.

Navy End Phil Ryan put the Middies in scoring position in the first two minutes of the game when he tackled Kusserow on a Bay-

Bowl-bound North Carolina bowled over Maryland, 49-20, yesterday.

Bedeviled by fumbles and belabored by the Tar Heels, the Terrapins turned what could have been their finest hour into unforgettable defeat before a record Griffith Stadium college throng of 34,588 spectators.

Recoiling fro mlast week's tie which placed the only blemish on an otherwise spotless record, the vaunted Carolinians rolled up the second biggest score in the history of their 17-game series with Maryland. Only the debacle of 1929, when the Tar Heels won, 43-0, was worse than yesterday's disaster.

Easily capable of generating their own power, the Tar Heels were nevertheless assisted by a fidgety-fingered Maryland team, which fumbled away its victory chances midway the first period.

N. C. Cashes In on Terp Fumbles

Carolina recovered all four of Maryland's fumbles and turned two of them into touchdowns; Carolina intercerpted three Maryland passes and ran two of them back for touchdowns. The Tar Heels furnished their own steam for their other three touchdowns. Ironically enough, the Terps cracked over for the first score and also lit the fuse which set off a wild scoring spree in the waning moments of the one-sided scuffle.

Tar Heels Invited To Orange Bowl

North Carolina has been invited to play in Miami's Orange Bowl January 1, The Washington Post learned last night.

Coach Carl Snavely of the Tar Heels admitted that he had "talked informally with Orange Bowl people" following Carolina's 49-20 win over Maryland yesterday. The unbeaten Tar Heels want to play in the Sugar Bowl and it is believed they are the No. 1 choice for the New Orleans game.

For the first time this year, Carolina's celebrated one-two punch, Charlie Justice and Hosea Rodgers, failed to dominate a Carolina victory although both played integral roles in the smashing success.

Five Tar Heels participated in the biggest scoring spree the winners enjoyed since they pole-axed Virginia, 49-14, last year. Bill Maceyko ran back two passes for touchdowns; Bob Kennedy registered a pair; Ken Powell con-

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 13 (AP).—Unbeaten Michigan opened up a land and air attack here today that pulverized defeat-groggy Indiana, 54-0, the Hoosiers' worst beating since Michigan rocked them 63-0 in 1925.

A chill-nipped crowd of 84,800 watched Coach Ben Oosterbaan's Wolverines widen a slim 7-0 first period lead into their biggest victory margin in eight straight wins this season. It was Michigan's twenty-second successive triumph in three seasons.

Michigan's spinning fullback, Tom Peterson, broke the scoring 1 and another substitute, Fullback Norm Jackson, plunged over from the 2-yard line. His defensive replacement, Dick Kempthorn, touched off the second period with a similar score. Then Chuck Ortmann, Michigan's passing ace, who completed 8 of 15 aerials for the fancy total of 123 yards, flipped a 13-yard touchdown pass to End Harry Allis for a 21-0 lead before half time.

Then came the deluge.

Ortmann ploughed into the Hoosier end zone from the 2. Quarterback Pete Elliott hit End Dick Rifenburg, the Wolverines' top All-American candidate, with a 5-yard scoring pass. Wally Teninga started the final period with a 2-yard touchdown sweep around right end, Substitute Fullback Don Defek made it from the one and another slubstitute, Fullback Nor mJackson, plunged over from the 1-foot line.

Allis was wide with one conversion attempt after booting 14 straight—and had another blocked by Indiana's fast-stepping end, Francis Carter.

Tide Scores On Fumble, Interception

Atlanta, Nov. 13 (AP).—The Alabama Crimson Tide turned a fumble and a pass interception into a 14-12 upset victory over Georgia Tech today to all but end the once high hopes of the Yellow Jackets for a bowl bid.

The thrice-beaten Tide was a two to three touchdown underdog.

The Southeastern Conference game, played before a sellout crowd of 38,000, was a near duplicate of Tennessee's upset last week which was the Yellow Jackets' first loss of the season.

Sub Centers Star

Two Alabama substitute centers—Doug Lockridge and Elliott Speed—were spot men when Tech erred. Lockridge recovered a Tech fumble on the Jackets' 4 and on the next play Alabama scored. Speed intercepted a Tech pass and ran 62 yards for the Tide's second touchdown.

After a battle of lines, Tech Halfback Jim Petit fumbled an Alabama punt on his 4 and Lockridge recovered. On the next play the Tech line was sucked completely to its left except for Right End George Brodnax. Bill Cadenhead went across with Brodnax chasing. Ed Salem kicked the extra point.

In the third quarter, Dinky Bowen, Tech fullback, got fine blocking and scored Tech's first touchdown on a 29-yard run to give himself a birthday present. His kick was no good.

Speed Lives Up to His Name

Later in the period Speed, who is an unusually fast runner for a center, pulled in a pass thrown by Tech's Jimmy Southard and ran over.

With a minute and a half left in the game Bowen bucked through tackle from 6 inches out for Tech's second touchdown. The Yellow Jacket scoring drive covered 80 yards mostly on Southard's passing. A bad snap from center spoiled the try for the thirteenth point.

tant Redskin-Eagle tangle next week.

For the first time since 1946 the usual 30,000 spectators today will get a look at Steve Bagarus, a former favorite of theirs. Steve, trying a comeback after breaking his leg last year, may be able to play only briefly because of an injured foot but at least he's expected to be in uniform.

Odds on a Washington victory over the Lions today have steadily dropped as it became more certain that Bill Dudley, All-America from Virginia, would be able to play. His shoulder separation has healed sufficiently for him to take part in his first action since early October.

Augmenting Dudley's brilliant running, which helped out in both touchdowns and a 14-7 victory over the Redskins the last time Bullet Bill showed here (he was then with the Pittsburgh Steelers), will be the passing of both Clyde LeForce and Fred Enke, performing in Coach Bo McMillin's patented "Cockeyed T-Formation."

LeForce was the big gun for Detroit last year as the Lions whipped Washington, 38-21 for one of their three victories all season. Enke is a husky rookie out of Arizona. He has completed 68 out of 142 tosses this year, amassing 886 yards and 7 touchdowns.

Ten other rookies will sparkle with the rebuilding Lions as the Redskins again pin most of their offensive hopes on the passing of Slingin' Sammy Baugh and the running of a corps of fancy steppers topped by San Sandifer, Dick Todd, Bob Nussbaumer, Ed Quirk, Tom Farmer and Dick Poillon.

Washington's chief advantage, it appears, is in the size and experience of its forward wall, plus the number of its adequate reserves. The 'Skins are conceded more and better ends than any other team in the league. Tackles John Adams and John Sanchez are as good at their position as you'll find. And five excellent guards flank a pair of seasoned, and hard-playing centers named Al Demao and Clyde Ehrhardt.

It should be an interesting game. The winner? Washington, of course, by anywhere from 1 to 60 points.

Virginia Tech Ties Richmond

Richmond, Va., Nov. 13 (AP).—Virginia Tech's long-overdue victory, anxiously awaited for seven long Saturdays, was almost realized today—but not quite.

The Techmen outdid Richmond's furiously battling Spiders in almost every phase of the game but had to settle for a 7-7 draw before a Richmond homecoming day crowd of 12,000 in City Stadium.

It was a fumble by Tech Quarterback Bud Fisher which paved the way for Richmond's touchdown, which came midway of the second quarter and staked the Spiders to a 7-0 halftime lead. Fisher let the ball roll from his fingers on the VPI 29 and Frank Shelor, 180-pound sophomore end, pounced on the leather there to set the Spider attack rolling.

The payoff punch was a 14-yard scoot around left end by Halfback Mike Cocco. Frank Thompson made good th eextra point.

The VPI tally came immediately after the second half kickoff, when the Gobblers, spearheded by Halfback Sterling Wingo, swept 80 yards in convincing fashion. The clock showed 7:48 when Fisher faded back and tossed the touchdown pass to End Ron Casto, who nabbed it inches from the sideline in the end zone. Ross Orr's kick brought it to 7-7.

mere 42-36, and midway of the third quarter the Pistons, sparked by Carlisle Towery and Bob Kinney, came within three points of their tormentors.

Then it was little Sonny Hertzberg's turn to shine for Washington. A full team of subs was in action for the Caps, with the exception of Hermsen. Hertzberg and Hermsen tallied 12 straight points between them for a 58-52 margin going into the final 12 minutes.

Again the Pistons were allowed to rally, this time coming within two points at 67-65 with six minutes of action left. Freddy Scolari and Johnny Norlander got serious briefly and put the hosts 10 points ahead when it was most important. All the Caps had to do from then on was coast a little more.

Hermsen, former Minnesota pointmaker, led the winners' scoring with 20 points.

Dottley Leads Ole Miss To 16-13 Win Over Vols

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 13 (AP). Mississippi's fleet backs, sparked by big sophomore John Dottley, spotted Tennessee six points and then went on to win, 16-13, before some 31,000 fans today.

It was a dogged battle all the way, and until the closing minutes Bobby Oswalt's trained toe had provided the margin for the Rebels. Oswalt kicked his twenty-first and twenty-second extra points of the season, out of 28 tries. A safety added Ole Miss' two other points.

J. B. Proctor, the tailback the Vols had counted on to trip Ole Miss, passed for one touchdown, but on the whole he was held in check by a smashing Mississippi line.

J. W. Sherill scored Tennessee's first touchdown on a pass from Proctor, and Ralph Chancey took the second over from the 3 in the third. Ole Miss' two tallies were in the second quarter, by Dottley and Jerry Tiblier, the latter's on an 80-yard run.

The win kept Mississippi in the thick of the fight for the Southeastern Conference crown it won last year. Only Tulane has downed the Rebels this season.

Hal Littleford's passes to Jim Powell were the most effective combination in the Vol offense, and Littleford added a brilliant 32-yard run that set up Tennessee's second tally.

Armory Board to Consider Free Use for School Games

The District Armory Board will meet this week to consider a request by District high school officials for free use of the Armory for a schedule of basketball games beginning in January, Arthur Walsh, chairman, disclosed last night.

The standard rental of $500 a night was cut to $250 for the schools, but school officials contended even this was too high. The three-man board then asked for a statement of income collected during the past season from student and public admissions. This reached $7000, according to Arthur J. (Dutch) Bergman, Armory manager.

The schools last year held 31 games and this year estimate about 10 nights will be required for scheduled games, semifinal and final contests, Bergman said.

Bergman pointed out that maintenance costs of the giant structure run to $209,000 a year and Armory officials are anxious to put the facility on a self-sustaining basis by achieving sufficient income from rentals.

"If we give it to them free, we may be establishing a precedent that many other groups will want to follow," Bergman noted. Walsh commented that the building was erected by District funds and therefore District students should have "some consideration" in establishing rental schedules.

Bill Skiff Named Kansas City Pilot

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—Bill Skiff, who piloted the Newark Bears to second place in the International League in 1948, will manage the Kansas City Blues of the American Association next season, General Manager George M. Weiss of the New York Yankees announced today.

Skiff replaces Dick Bartell, who was released last month. The Yankees, who own both Newark and Kansas City, announced recently they had placed their Newark franchise for sale.

VMI Riddles Citadel, 34-6

Lexington, Va., Nov. 13 (AP).—Virginia Military Institute's Keydets marched with military precision today to defeat The Citadel, 34 to 6.

The Keydets grabbed two touchdowns in the first period, repeated the performance in the second and added a fifth in the final period.

A crowd of 3000 watched the V. M. I. victory, brought largely by Quarterback Bobby Thompson who passed for two touchdowns and set up another with a 40-yard run.

The Citadel emerged from its own territory only briefly during the third and fourth periods. Lucian Pinckney, a sophomore tailback, was the visitors' only threat. He scored their lone touchdown by slicing off right tackle for 1 yard in the final period. Bob Smith blocked Bill Henderson's attempted conversion.

Thompson's passes clicked for two second period touchdowns. He pitched 25 yards to End Thatcher Watson in the end zone for the first and 15 yards to Freddie Anson for the second. Joe Veltri took over the passing chores for V. M. I. in the final period and fired one 25 yards to Fritz Crytzer for the final counter.

B.C., Trailing 14-0, Rallies To Tie W.-M.

Boston, Nov. 13 (AP).—Boston College outrushed and outpassed William and Mary but the home Eagles were forced to settle for a 14-14 tie in a bruising football game witnessed by 15,112 Braves Field fans.

Boston College had the better of the play in the opening period, but near the end of that quarter Henry Blac intercepted an Eagle forward on the home team's 41 and raced all the way for a touchdown as his teammates quickly provided fine interference.

A key block was thrown by Ed Magdziak as he wiped out a BC defender near the 5. Buddy Lex placekicked the first of two extra points.

The Indians from Williamsburg made it 14-0 early in the second period after frustrating another Boston College drive which gained 57 yards before the Southerners took the ball on downs on their 23.

After a back in motion penalty pushed William and Mary back 5 yards to the 18, Jack Bruce bounced off his right tackle, reversed his field and legged it into the end zone.

Boston College ate up 92 yards in six plays for its first touchdown seconds before the end of the first half. Starting from their 8, where Joe Diminick was downed after taking a William and Mary punt, the Eagles began to fly. From his own 44, Ed Songin tossed a long pass which Art Spinney and two defenders juggled.

Al Cannava leaped to grab the ball on the 6 and carried it in for a score. Ernie Stautner then placekicked the first of his two extra points.

Boston College muffed at least three good chances in the scoreless third period, but finally tallied its second touchdown after nearly 12 minutes of play in the final chapter.

Starting on the William and Mary 48 after a punt, Boston used seven plays to reach the 31, where Songin uncorked another long pass to Albie Gould, who caught it on the 2, where he was downed.

On the next play Maurice Poissant whirled through a wide hole between his own left guard and tackle for the touchdown that earned the draw.

Rauch Hurls Georgia to 42-14 Win

Columbus, Ga., Nov. 13 (AP).—Johnny Rauch furthered his bid for All-America and Georgia's chances for Southeastern Conference championship today by riddling Auburns defenses with his thread-needle passes in a 42 to 14 Georgia victory.

Rauch, senior quarterback from Yeardon, Pa., fired a 44-yarder to Bob Walston for the opening Georgia score. Thereafter, he threw for needed yardage whenever the occasion demanded, and was the big gun in most of the Georgia scores.

The victory was Georgia's twenty-sixth in 52 meetings with Auburn. Five of the contests ended in ties and Auburn won the other 21.

Georgia's second touchdown, made by Fullback John Tillitski, early in the second period, set off an Auburn offensive flurry. The Tigers drove 76 yards, alternating runs and passes for their first score. Travis Tidwell ran for the final five yards.

Rauch and his mates matched this tally in three plays. Rauch passed to Walston for 54, and Joe Geri drove over in two smashes. Auburn came back with another counter, Tidwell scoring again on a short off-tackle gain after his 44-yard pass to Virgil Willett. That brought the score to 21-14 at half-time, but Georgia soon ended ideas of a close game.

Two recovered fumbles, one on the Auburn 20 and one on the Auburn 2, set up two easy Georgia scores in the third period. Geri made the first one, and Fullback Floyd Reid the other.

End John Duke took a 25-yard pass from Ray Prosperi for the final Georgia marker in the last period.

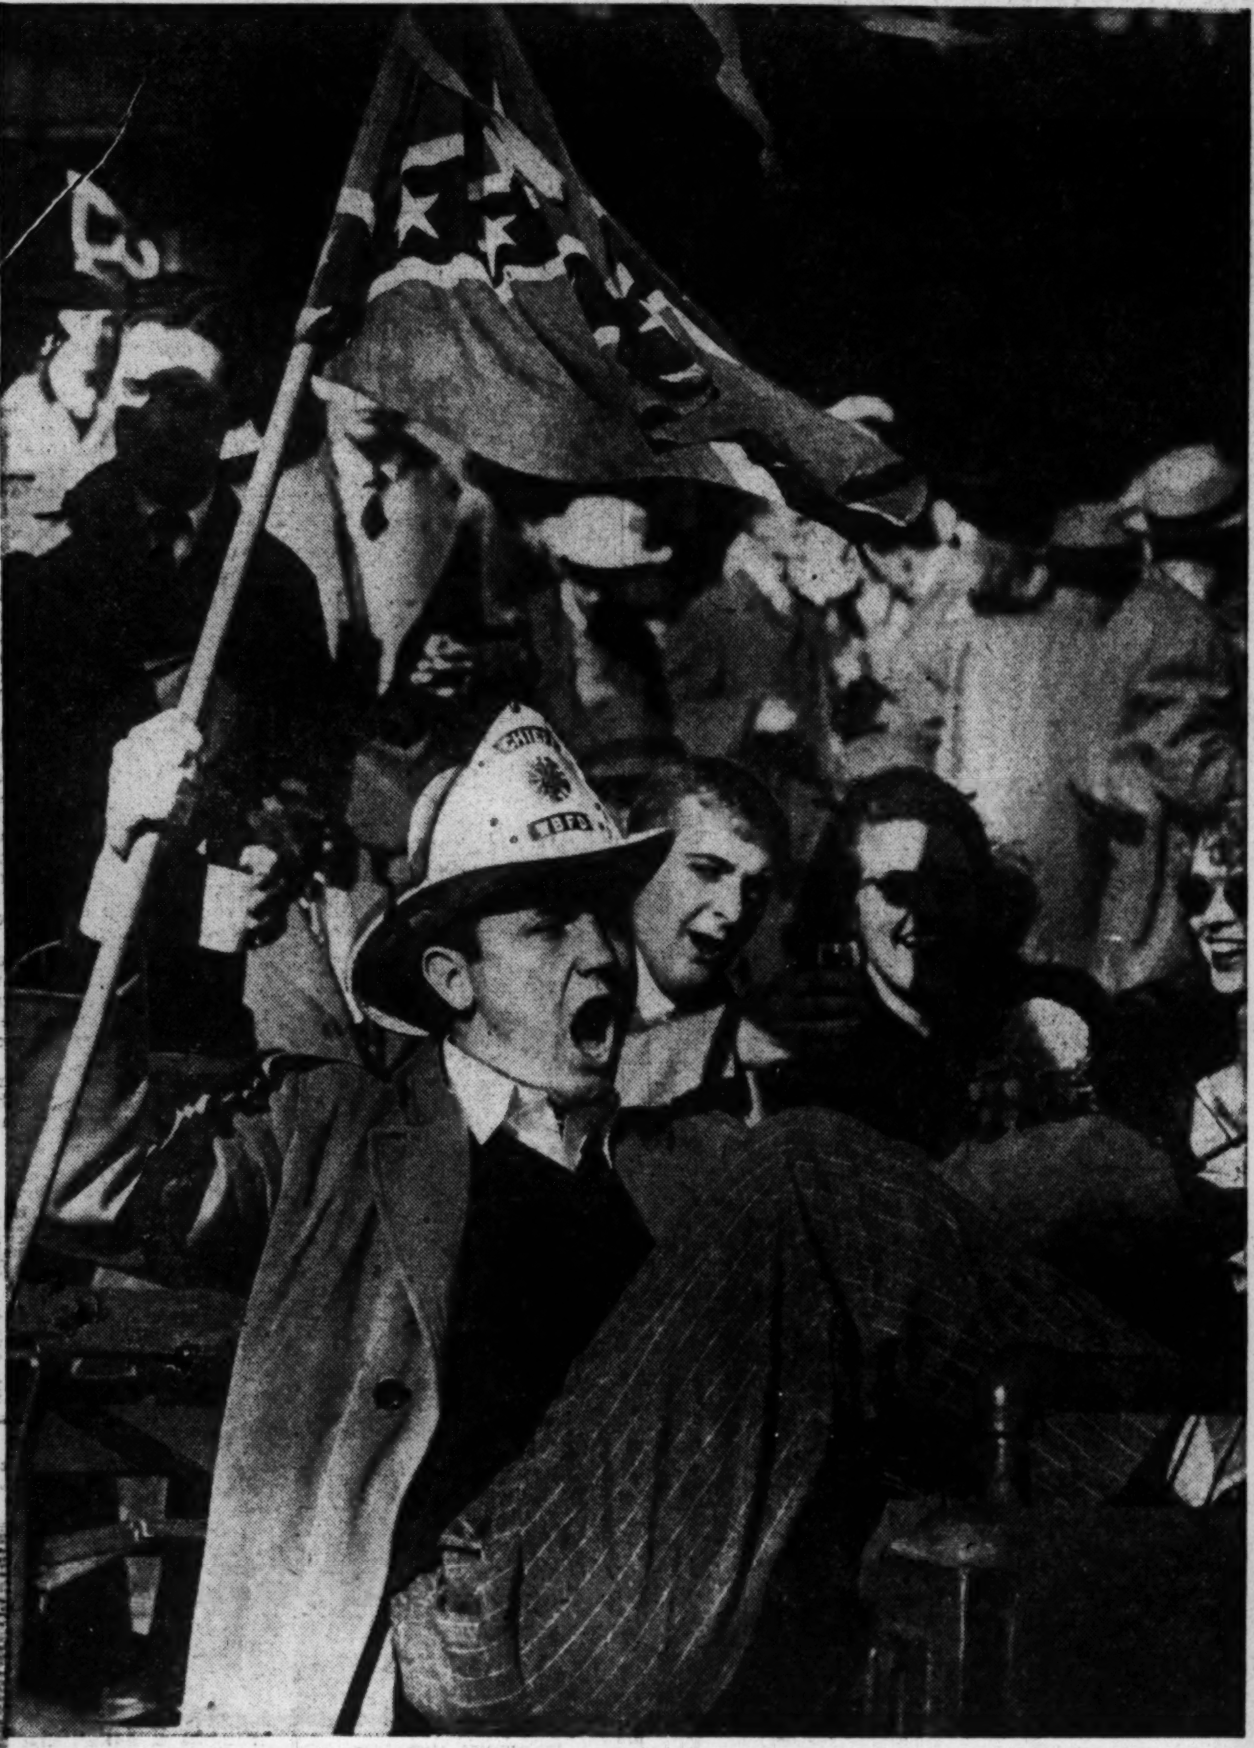
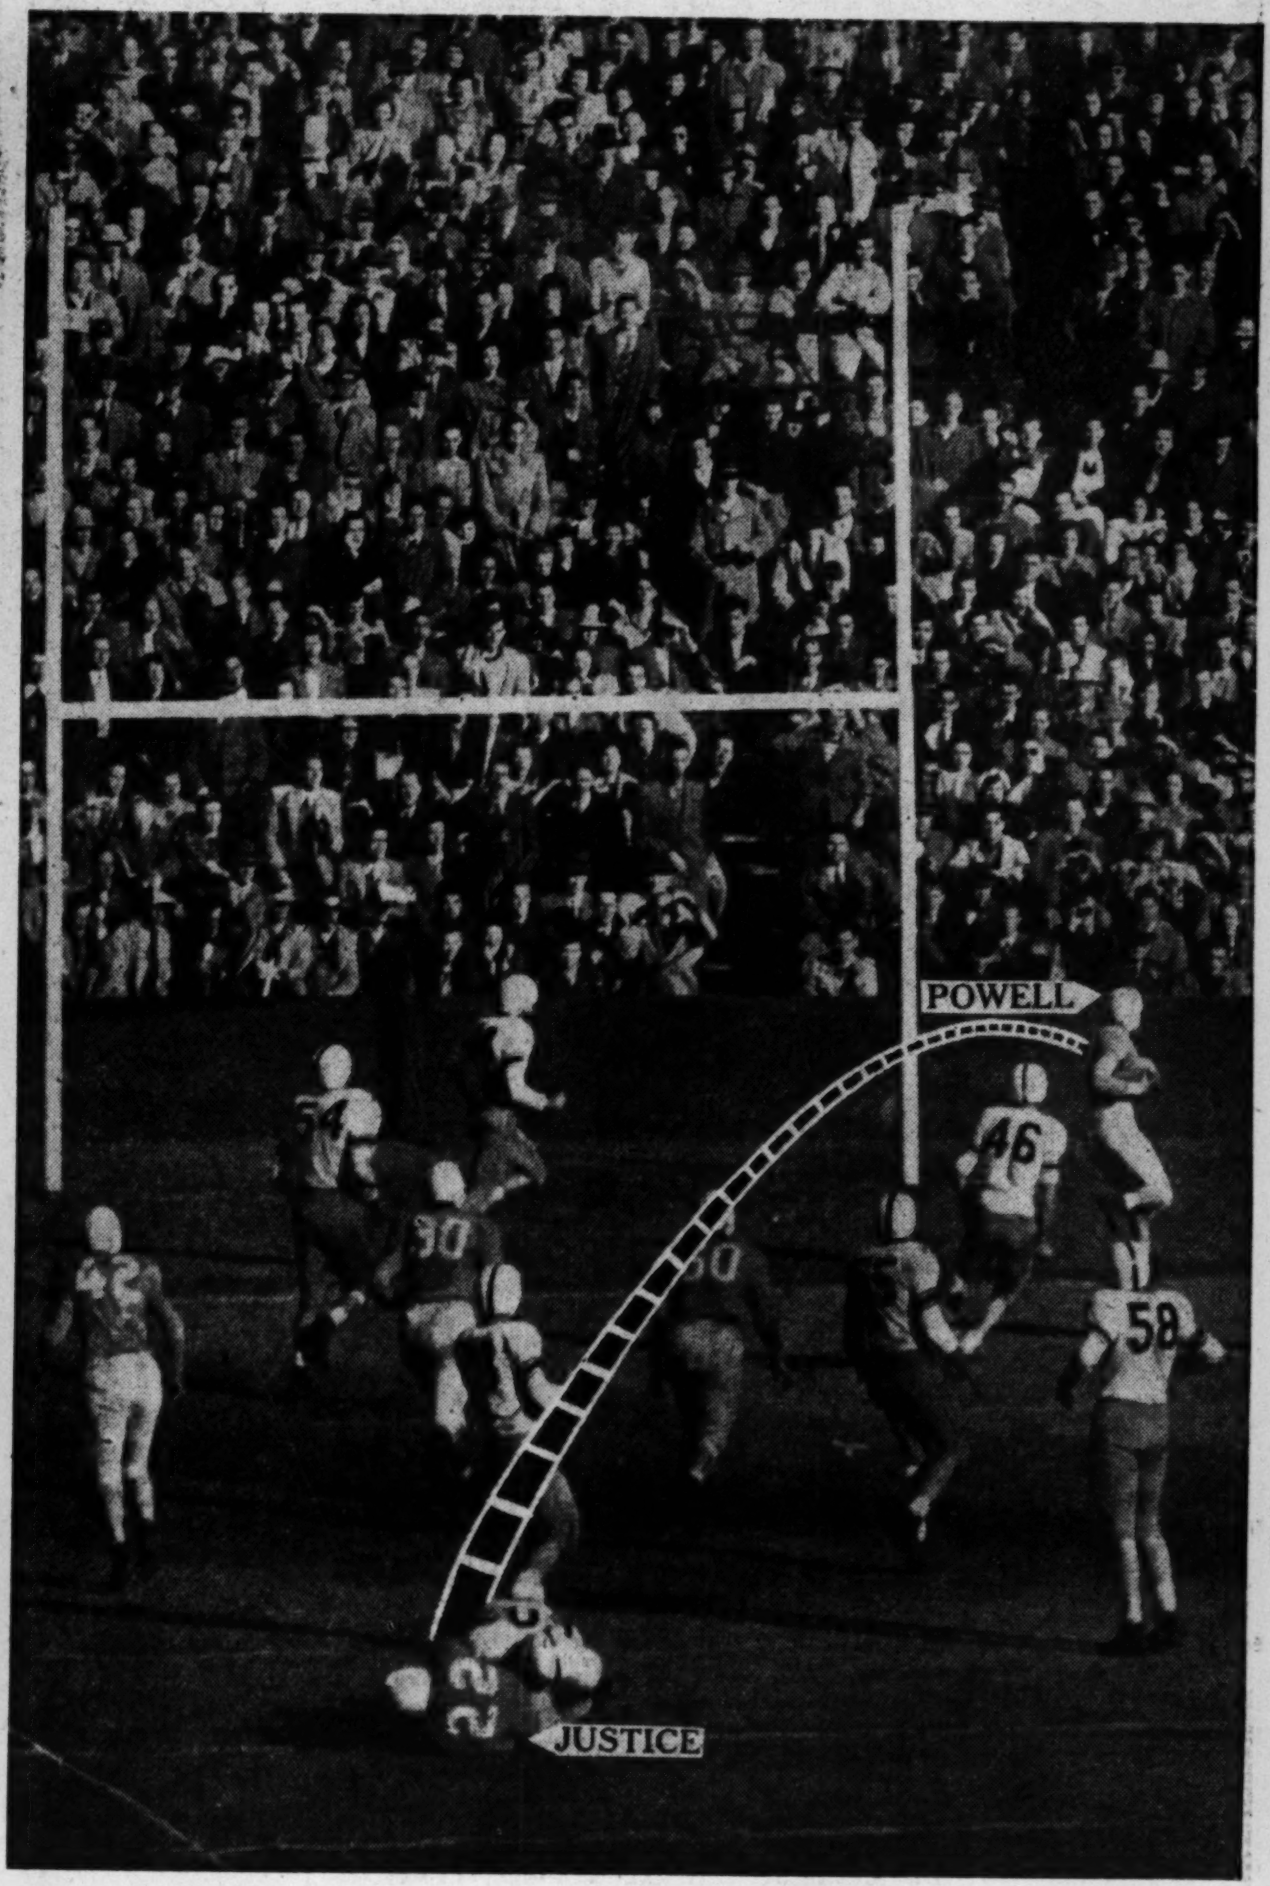
It Couldn't Have Been Finer Even in Carolina

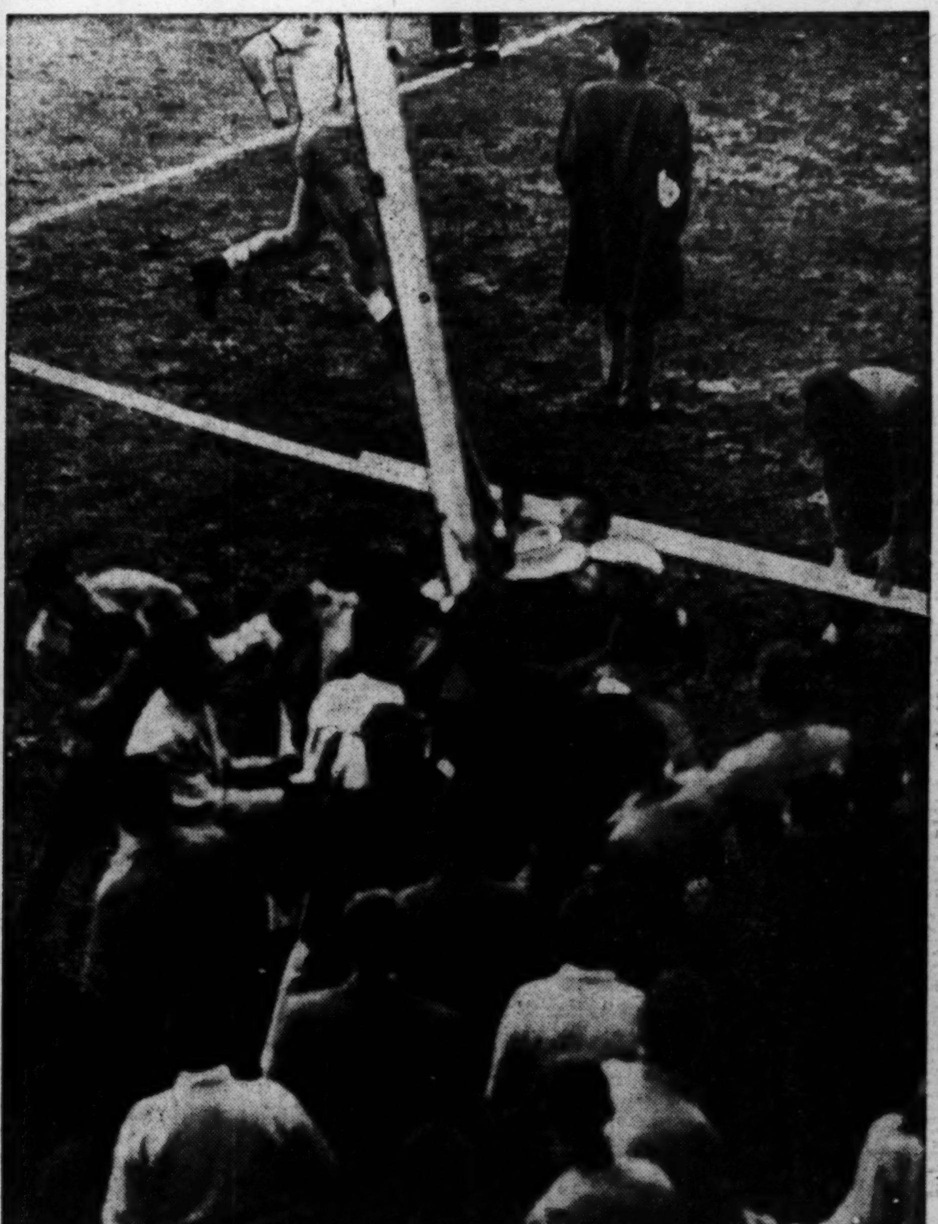


'Hail to the Brightest Star...' Alfred Hobbs, who acquired a fire helmet somewhere between here and Chapel Hill, cheers the Tar Heels of North Caroline



Touchdown!—This one brought the crowd to its feet. Ken Powell, North Carolina end, catches the ball in the end zone for the second Carolina touchdown on a pass from Charlie Justice (on the ground). This score put the Tar Heels ahead, 14-7. Greatest crowd in Washington college football history saw the game, 34,588

Tense Tatum—"Big Jim" Tatum, Maryland's coach was chagrined over the errors made by his team as he stormed up and down before the Terrapins bench in the closing minutes of play. The saddened Tatum and his disconsolate players took small delight in the last-quarter rally of 13 points they made against North Carolina's second team with Charlie Justice and his front-runners retired for the day



Traditional—To the victors go the spoils and down come the goal posts as the game ends in defeat for Maryland. The score: 49-20

Clemson Beats Deacons, 21-14, For Seventh Straight Victory

Cone Tallies In 4th Period To Break Tie

Winston-Salem, N. C., Nov. 13 (AP). — Unbeaten Clemson threw back stubborn Wake Forest today in a 21-14 thriller to register its seventh straight victory.

The Tigers, in winning their fourth straight Southern Conference game, forged ahead twice in the early going, only to have the battling Deacons come back to tie the score on each occasion.

Finally, early in the fourth quarter, Fullback Fred Cone climaxed a 47-yard drive by bucking over from the 1 with the deciding score.

Clemson entered the game with bids to the Texas Sun Bowl and Jacksonville, Fla., 'Gator Bowl contests, but was committed to no one, according to a source close to the school.

Wake Forest already has accepted an invitation to the Birmingham, Ala., Dixie Bowl contest.

Clemson's victory, the first in seven years over Wake Forest, was achieved before a standing-room sellout crowd of 20,000.

The Tigers scored twice in the second period and a bid for a third tally was cut short by the end of the half with Clemson a yard away on second down.

Tailback Bobby Gage, who ran well to set up the first score, hit Wingback Ray Mathews with a fourth-down pass from the 3 after two minutes of the quarter and Jack Miller's first of three conversions made it 7-0.

Sub Center El Baublis recovered a fumble on the Clemson 7 for Wake Forest a few minutes later and the Deacs got the tying score when Tailback Bill Gregus smashed over from a foot away on last down. Bill George converted to make it 7-7.

Gage put Clemson ahead again with another touchdown pass, this time to end Oscar Thomson on third down from the Wake Forest 40. Thomson caught the ball on the 10, got by Tom Fetzer and crossed the goal line.

Shortly after, a pass interception by Mathews gave Clemson the ball on Wake's 34 and Gage and Cone ran it to the 1 before time ran out on second down.

Fired up by the break, Wake Forest stormed out in the third period and tied the score in the first five minutes. A dozen plays carried 72 yards, Mike Sprock racing 11 yards around right end for the score, aided by an important Gregus block.

Sub Tailback Jack Calvert intercepted a Carroll Blackberry pass on the Wake 47 as the period ended and from there Clemson pounded to its winning touchdown.

Catholic U. Loses, 7-6, to Washington

Chestertown, Md., Nov. 13 (AP).—Washington College came from behind today to win its first game of the season over Catholic University, 7-6, before 3000 fans. This kept Catholic still looking for its first win.

Catholic drew first blood in the first quarter by driving across from its own 31. Maiuri did most of the ball carrying for the Capital team, assisted by Golla's passing to Johnson and Hall. Innis scored by plowing through from the 2-yard line. Samferson's kick for the extra point was wide.

Washington's tally was set up by a 30-yard run by Johnny Cox to Catholic's 13-yard line. On the next play Jack Ketrick slanted off left tackle and galloped across the goal untouched.

A placement kick by Quarterback Cox for the extra point proved to be the margin of victory.

Catholic University failed to make a serious threat after its first-period score. The best the visitors could do was advance to the Washington 20 in the third period, but the Shoremen reared up and held Catholic on downs.

Three CYO Grid Titles Decided

Three Catholic Youth Organization sectional football titles were decided in yesterdays games on the Ellipse.

Chuck Walthor ran 10 yards off tackle to give undefeated Blessed Sacrament a 6-0 victory over St. Michael's and the section I title in the junior division. A 35-yard pass play, Don Mc Glynn to Larry O'Cleary, nullified some polished T-formation quarterbacking by St. Joseph's Home Bobby Kelly, giving St. Anthony's the only touchdown in the junior section II championship game.

A forfeit by St. Martin's gave the second round intermediate championship to Holy Comforter.

Results of yesterday's games:

Vandy Swamps Marshall, 56-0

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 13 (AP).—The high-scoring Vanderbilt Commodores breezed to a 56-0 football victory over Marshall College today, but Vanderbilt fans were disappointed.

The reason—Lee Nalley, commodore punt-return star, missed setting a new all-time collegiate record for run-backs by only 10 yards. Nalley carried five punts back 77 yards. That would have been enough and to spare if figures released last week by the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau had been correct, but they were not.

A recheck showed Nalley had been credited with two punt returns by Daryle May, making his total 530 yards in 29 carries instead of 557.

Irish-Michigan Game Sought By Baltimore

Baltimore, Nov. 13 (AP).—Baltimore has put in a bid for a post-season football game between Michigan and Notre Dame.

Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro said today he had written presidents of the two universities offering the city's stadium for the game. Its capacity is about 64,000, with added bleachers.

The proceeds "could be given to the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund or some other similar charitable cause that you might have in mind," his letter said.

Gallaudet Beaten, 26-14

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Nov. 13 (AP).—Shepherd College won its third game of the season today by downing Gallaudet College, of Washington, 26-14, on a muddy field.

Gallaudet led 7-0 at the end of the first quarter after Cuscadeu rammed across the goal after a long drive downfield.

In the second period, Shepherd tied the score, but the Washingtonians came back again to surge ahead, 14-7.

Gallaudet was unable to score in the final half. Shepherd's ground game became more pronounced as they added two more scores in the third and another in the final.

About 500 persons watched the soggy tussle.

Penn State's Scrubs Rout Temple, 47-0

State College, Pa., Nov. 13 (AP).—Penn State's third and fourth string backfields turned on the steam today to swamp an outclassed Temple University football team, 47-0, here before 16,000 at Beaver Field.

Johnny Chuckran and Sophomore Vince O'Bara, who have spent most of the season on the sidelines, led the Nittany Lions through their seventeenth game without a defeat as Coach Bob Higgins cleared the bench. Both backs scored one touchdown a piece and each tossed a pass good for another score.

Capt. Joe Colone provided the home team fans with their biggest thrill of the afternoon as he bulled his way through the middle of the Temple line for a 66-yard gain to spark a 93-yard drive for the Lions' third touchdown. The heavy fullback, playing his best game in two years, also tallied the first touchdown in the opening minutes of the game.

Colone's 2-yard plunge for a score came in the first minute of the game after Temple's halfback Chet Orseck fumbled the opening kickoff on his own 10.

The Lions' other "first string" fullback, Fran Rogel, tallied the second score early in the sceond period. Then the subs took over and the fireworks started.

Placement Try Blocked

Gamecocks Spank Tulsa, 27-7; Davidson Bows to W.-L., 21-20

Davidson, N. C., Nov. 13 (AP).—Washington & Lee's Generals edged out Davidson's Wildcats today on the margin of a blocked try for point. The score was 21 to 20.

When Harry Gowens, Washington & Lee tackle, leaped through and blocked Hal Mapes' placement try in the second period the Davidson crowd of 5000 groaned. That point ballooned as the minutes ticked by.

The Generals scored the first time they got the ball, driving from their 35 while they had returned a punt.

Carl Eborn put the Wildcats on their way in the second period when he covered a General fumble on the Virginians' 38. Later, Auburn Lambeth passed over the goal line to Williams for the score. When Mapes' placement was blocked the Cats trailed 7-6.

Shortly after Brian Bell went 68 yards to the Wildcat five. Boyda passed to Lukens for the touchdown.

Only half a minute remained in the first half when Lambeth passed 2[illegible] yards straight down the middle to Mike Williams for a touchdown. Mapes converted to leave the Wildcats a point behind at intermission, 14-13.

The Wildcats unleashed a 74-yard drive for their final score with Cliff Turner hitting the right side on fourth down for the score

Tulsa, Okla., Nov. 13 (AP).—With Freshman Steve Wadiak scoring two of four first-half touchdowns, the University of South Carolina Gamecocks snapped a four-game losing streak today at the expense of hapless Tulsa, 27-7.

A homecoming crowd of but 9200—less than half Skelly stadium's capacity — watched the Southern Conference visitors run at will in the first two periods to administer the Hurricane its seventh loss in eight games.

Tulsa stiffened in the second half to hold the visitors scoreless and crossed the Gamecock goal line once, but the solution for stopping Wadiak, Bayard Pickett and Bishop Strickland came too late.

Wadiak scored the Gamecocks' first and third touchdowns, the first on a 4-yard run to climax a 34-yard march in the opening quarter and the other on a 67-yard, second-period burst from scrimmage.

Sandwiched between his scores was Strickland's 25-yard touchdown canter early in the second period.

South Carolina's fourth marker was scored by Co-captain Jack Couch from the 3-yard line. Tulsa's lone score came late in the third period, the first time it got past the Southerners' 45-yard stripe.

Tigers Whip Yale, 20-14, To Capture Big 3 Title

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 13.—Princeton squeezed a 20-14 victory over stubborn Yale today and successfully defended its "Big Three" football championship.

A pre-game favorite, Princeton hardly looked the part until the final period when it rallied to score twice. And then the Tigers had to fight off a stirring Yale onslaught that barely missed going all the way in the dying minutes of the encounter.

Yale, aided by Levi Jackson, its great Negro back, surprised the 57,000 throng early in the contest and later astonished the crowd as it held a 14-7 advantage going into the final period. But the Tigers, led by Val Wagner, George Sella and John Webber finally exploded.

Forgetting the Tigers' 47-7 rout over Harvard last week, Yale went 77 yards near the end of the opening quarter for the first touchdown—a bullet pitch, Jackson to John Setear, covering the last 3 yards.

Bill Collins intercepted a pass as the period ended and set the stage for the Tigers' equalizer early in the second quarter. On the sixth play of a 37-yard drive, a pass from the 12, Sella to Ed Reed, hit pay dirt.

After holding Princeton on the four shortly after the intermission, Yale capitalized. Sella fumbled Jackson's 55-yard punt on the Blue's 45, where Rufus Phillips recovered. Yale then went the distance in ten plays, Tex Furse scoring from the one on a quarterback sneak. Bill Booe converted for the second time and the way the Bulldog was moving at this point there was indications of an upset.

But Princeton didn't feel that way about it, going 74 yards in nine plays. Wagner tossed 12 yards to Cliff Purrus, who was standing in the end zone, Hal Urshel converted to tie up the game.

The Tigers caught fire. Their delayed bucks began to function and Yale's line seemed to be tired, yielding wide gaps. Driving 56 yards, most of them on power plays, Sella ran around his right end from the 12 for the final score.

Yale hadn't quite finished, however. After having sensed victory through most of the game, the Bulldog staged a final rally which went 55 yards, dying on the Princeton 16 as time ran out.

Colgate Holds Orange, 20-13

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 13 (AP).—Colgate's football team, threatened by a brilliant second-half passing attack, scored a 20-13 triumph today over underdog Syracuse before 36,000 fans.

Syracuse, trailing 13-0 at the half, called on Halfback Bernie Custis to do the throwing. Custis, who had to leave the game because of injuries with a few minutes' playing time remaining, completed 13 passes in 30 tries for a total of 178 yards.

Colgate's three touchdowns were scored by Halfback Paul Mulligan, Egler and Allaire. Tallying for Syracuse were Halfback George Davis and Custis. Mulligan went over from the Syracuse 7 near the end of the first period climaxing a 76-yard sustained drive.

Colgate's second touchdown was scored by Egler from the Syracuse 2, winding up a 93-yard drive. In the third period Custis carried to the 21 and Davis sprinted the rest of the way on the next play for Syracuse.

Colgate briefly showing its first-half driving power, moved the ball 94 yards in nine plays in the same period, with Allaire hitting pay dirt from the Syracuse 1.

Custis scored in the final period on a line plunge after passing Syracuse to within inches of the goal line.

BULLIS SCORES—Dean Smith of Bullis Prep takes a 19-yard pass from Duke Wuzzardo for a touchdown in yesterday's game with the Georgetown Frosh at Bullis. The Bullis team romped home, 42 to 0

Dean Paces Big Red in Thriller

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 13 (AP).—Bob Dean led Cornell to a rousing two-touchdown rally in the last quarter today to nip Dartmouth, 27-26, in a spine-tingling Ivy League game that sent 30,000 spectators home talking to themselves.

Subbing at fullback for Jeff Fleischmann, who was carried from the field with a broken ankle in the second period, Dean drove over from less than 1 foot out, to tie the game with 2 minutes and 40 seconds to go.

Then the senior from Bloomington, Ind., dropped back and booted a perfect placement point to put the Big Red on the right side of the ledger, with a chance to win the Ivy crown if they can whip Penn Thanksgiving Day.

After closing the gap to six points on Paul Girolamo's smash in the first two minutes of the last period, the Cornell opportunists took advantage of a fumble to win.

John Clayton, a master faker out of the T formation for Dartmouth all afternoon, faked once too often. He spun in a fake handoff and Bob Ellis, an alert Cornell guard, grabbed the ball right out of his hands. Ellis lost control of the ball but Eric Jensen recovered on his own 39.

With Dean and Moose Miller twisting and churning through the middle and around the ends, Cornell moved to the Dartmouth 3 in six plays. Then Dean bulled over tackle for the all-important tying touchdown.

It was a nip-and-tuck game all the way with Dartmouth scoring in the first two minutes on a buck by Herb Carey from 1 foot out. Six minutes later Frank Bradley stepped away for a 69-yard touchdown run and when Dean added his first of three placements, Cornell led, 7-6.

Dartmouth took to the air in the second period with Clayton heaving 16 yards to Joe Sullivan for the tie-breaking score. Early in the third period Clayton hit Tom Rowe for 24 yards out for another t. d. after Bill Spoor recovered Bradley's fumble.

A 39-yard run by Miller gave Cornell its second score, but Dartmouth bounced right back when Hal Fitkin drove across from the 2, following a thrilling 74-yard broken field jaunt by Sullivan.

That sent Dartmouth into the last period with a 26-14 lead to protect, but they couldn't do it. Cornell took over and rolled 43 yards before Giroloamo banged over for the touchdown. Dean never got his placement try off the ground as Bob Haley fumbled a high pass from center.

Late Rally Decisive

Finn's Passing Futile, Harvard Whips Brown, 30-19

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 13 (AP).—After digesting a painful dose of Ed Finn's famed forward passes, a hard-fighting Harvard team rallied for a 30-19 ictory over Brown in their forty-seventh football clash today before a 25,000 crowd at the stadium.

Finn, whose markmanship helped the Bruins win six straight after dropping their opener to Yale, startled the Crimson during the first few minutes by tossing a 35-yard pass that Chuck Nelson caught on Harvard's 25, before romping for a touchdown.

After the kickoff, Right Guard Jack Chernak blocked a Chuck Roche punt and Center Jack Scott recovered for Brown on Harvard's 25.

Young Scores From 3

As Joe Condon faked a fourth-down field goal try, Finn tossed to Nelson on Harvard's 3-yard line, from where Roger Young plunged for the Bruins' second counter.

After the teams changed goals, Fred Kozak, the Brown booter, punted to his own 30 and the Crimson running attack, which eventually totaled 270 yards, started to roll. The fleet Crimson backs took five bangs at the Brown wall before Fullback Paul Shafer plunged over from the 2.

Shortly after, Nick Rodis gave the Crimson another scoring chance, which was capitalized on when Chip Gannon tossed 25 yards to Moffie, by recovering a fumble on Brown's 30.

Another Finn Pass

Finn's final decisive gesture was a 38-yard scoring overhead to Young just before the half ended. And from then on, Harvard held sway.

During the third period, Jim Noonan threw 22 and 28-yard scoring tosses to wingers Art Hyde and Johnny Florentino and in the finale the Harvard sharpshooter contacted Moffie in the Brown end zone but one of their teammates was offside. But Emil Drvaric salvaged some of that wasted effort by booting a 16-yard field goal to end the scoring.

In addition to its impressive overland gains, Harvard collected 102 additional yards by completing six of its 15 aerial attempts to total 16 first downs against 10. Brown made 157 yards by air, completing 7 of its 18 aerials, and 127 more by land.

McCary's Late 44-Yard Run Gives Virginia 7 to 0 Victory

4th Period Dash Beats West Va.

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 13.—Virginia's captain, Joe McCary, a West Virginian playing with a broken thumb, found it didn't hamper him in the least on a 44-yard touchdown scamper in the last period that made the Cavaliers' Commonwealth Day a 7-0 success over West Virginia here today.

Gov. William M. Tuck and the rest of the 14,000 Scott Stadium spectators were brought to their feet when the fourth quarter was just 55 seconds old. Dudley DeGroot's tricky attack backfired when Charley Becca wasn't satisfied with a five-yard gain and tossed a lateral that McCary grabbed on West Virginia's 44 and raced across untouched.

West Virginia		Virginia

19	Forward passes attempted	17
9	Forward passes completed	4
106	Yards by forward passing	44

27.7	Punting average from scrimmage	33.2
63	Total yards all kicks returned	61
3	Opponents' fumbles recovered	4
58	Yards lost by penalties	70

End Carlton Elliott made the conversion but the Virginians were far from in. The Mountaineers' Jimmy Walthall, who went into the game the Nation's fourth leading passer, started living up to his reputation and pitched the losers all the way to the 4 on an 86-yard march that ended on the Virginia 2 with 40 seconds left.

That's when Walthall, high school teammate of hero McCary at Princeton, W. Va., fumbled on the usually safe quarterback sneak and back Ralph Shoaf extricated the Cavaliers from a trying situation that could well have been a tying one.

Mountaineers March

West Virginia started its desperation march after Virginia failed on an attempt to add another touchdown to its total.

With Johnny Papit breaking loose, the Vavaliers went all the way to the Mountaineer 12 where the boys from Morgantown took over after a fourth-down pass by Dick Michels was dropped by Steve Osisek.

Papit, by the way, gained 109 yards in 21 tries but won't improve his position as the country's sixth leading rusher. He had been averaging better than seven yards a try compared to today's five.

Anway when Virginia gave the ball over, the West Virginians seemed ready to go all the way. From the 12, Walthall passed to Pete Zinaich for a 6-yard gain. Then End Roy Lester made a terrific catch of a Walthall toss and it was good for a 36-yard gain to Virginia's 46.

Walthall Completes Nine

Walthall only completed 9 of 17 attempts for 106 yards, but he continued to sizzle at the end. After faking a punt, he hit Charley Becca for another first on Virginia's 32. Jack Morton took a short one from Walthall and neatly tightroped his way down the sideline to Virginia's 14.

After letting Zinaich hit the line for a mere yard, Walthall again went into action and Lester, the glue-fingered end, cooperated to give West Virginia a first on the Cavalier 4 .

West Virginia started off the second half with a sustained drive that was good for 47 yards. From the Virginia 17, though, Walthall threw a bum lateral that Zinich finally recovered for an 11-yard loss. Gene Simmons, drop-kicking specialist who made a 33-yard field goal against Waynesburg, tried one from the 28-yard marker. It was low and wide.

McCary, making his return after breaking his thumb last week, did set up a scoring opportunity in the second period when he pounced on a lateral by Vic Bonfili that went astray on West Virginia's 22. But Virginia didn't even come close on its passing attempts.

Today's loss was West Virginia's sixth straight to its Old Dominion rivals and the Mountaineers haven't beaten the Cavaliers since 1922.

Fullback Steve Sylvester scored two touchdowns and booted one extra point to pace his Bolling Field team to a 25-0 win over Fort Meyer yesterday at Bolling Field.

Sylvested scored on runs of 9 and 15 yards. The other two scores came when George Smith bucked over from the 1 and Athol Lemons went for 3 and a score on an end around.

BONK BOOMS THROUGH—Maryland's Harry Bonk breaks through left tackle and guard and dashes 76 yards on the Terps' first scrimmage play in yesterday's game with North Carolina at Griffith Stadium. He reached the 10 before Bill Flamisch of the Tar Heels pulled him down. Bonk's run led to the game's first score as the Terps went over a few minutes later, but the Tar Heels won, 49-20

Butterfinger Bowl Looms For Terps

History was made, but it also repeated itself yesterday as 34,588 fans saw the Tar Heels of North Carolina smash Maryland's butter-fingered Terrapins, 49-20, at Griffith Stadium . . . It was Washington's biggest college football gathering of all time . . . The previous high was set back on October 5, 1935 . . . That was when the Rose Bowl champions of Alabama came to town to play George Washington . . . Some 30,000 folks turned out for what was doped as a toss-up . . . It was the same kind of toss-up as yesterday's game, Alabama roaring to a 39-0 victory despite the great Tuffy Leemans.

Lu Gambino, the Terps' 1947 ace who couldn't quite make the eligibility grade this season, was in Maryland's dressing room and on its bench . . . The inspiration he engendered, if any, was lost on Terp fumbles.

With the Black and Gold three touchdowns behind at halftime, bleacher wolves were starting to howl . . . All sorts of unkind things were said about Maryland, including such phrases as "quit cold," "out of their class," "false advertising," etc. . . . Coach Jim Tatum was white with chagrin as he led his boys to the dressing room . . . Assistant Coach Jim Meade, a great talker, expressed worlds by saying nothing.

Huge marching bands of both Maryland and North Carolina combined in halftime entertainment with the Christmas motif . . . That tiny gridman wearing No. 14 and working out with the Terps before the game was the 9-year-old son of Bill Cobey, Maryland graduate manager of Athletics . . . The Terps, incidentally, broke with custom by failing to go to their dressing room after the pre-game warm-up.

There was Justice (first name Charlie) but very little mercy displayed by the Tar Heels . . . Only seven minutes of play remained when Choo-Choo and his running mate, Hosea Rodgers, were pulled out of action with the rest of Carolina's first string . . . Maryland now understands how undermanned George Washington University felt after a 47-0 whaling . . . Even as a former pupil of Carolina's Coach Carl Snavely, Maryland's Coach Tatum could expect no easing up . . . College football is like that nowadays.

Crack of the Day: "Maryland's bowl hopes just went down the drain."

D. C. Beauticians Battle to Set George's Hair

Washington's beauticians are pulling hair for the honor of dressing Gorgeous George's coiffure for his wrestling match against Marvin Mercer Wednesday night at Turner's Arena.

Already, Rene, Antoine, Emile and the Oglivie Sisters have offered to do the job free. Other bouts on the program are Laverne Baxter against Ivan Kamaroff and Bibber McCoy against Frank Hebda.

Two Harvard 'Chow Hounds' Would Test Yale's Hickman

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 13 (AP).—Two Harvard law school students don't believe the stories that Yale Football Coach Herman Hickman "can eat more than any two men alive."

Today the two students challenged Hickman to an eating contest at a neutral table.

Describing themselves as veterans of "copious Army chow, Southern barbecue and Cambridge beans" the pair, Paul A. Nurick, of New York, and Robinson O. Everett, of Durham, N. C., sent the challenge to Hickman by mail.

They said his visit here with Yale to play Harvard next Saturday would be an opportune time.

Friends at the law school call the pair the "biggest chow-hounds" at Harvard.

To make it sporting, the law students agreed to pick up the check if they lose, and of course, they expect Hickman to pay if they out-eat him.

Mikan Gets 38 Points

Providence, R. I., Nov. 13 (AP).—With big George Mikan scoring 38 points, his highest total of the current Basketball Association of America season, the Minneapolis Lakers defeated the Providence Steam Rollers, 90-67, before 4225 fans here tonight.

In gaining their third league victory against two defeats, the Lakers moved ahead 6-5 early in the first quarter and remained in the van the rest of the way. An early fourth period rally paced by Mikan, Herman Schaefer and Jim Pollard put the game well out of the reach of the Rollers, who had stayed within eight points most of the way.

Mikan's 24 points in the first half set a new B. A. A. scoring record. Kenny Sailors paced the Rollers with 25 points.

Navy Wins Grid Title—150-Pound

New Brunswick, N. J., Nov. 13 (AP).—Navy won its third straight 150-pound football championship and permanent possession of the George Smalley Memorial Trophy today by defeating Rutgers, 25-7. Navy has been undefeated in 16 games during the three years' existence of the Eastern Intercollegiate 150-Pound Grid League.

N. C. State Coasts, 20-6

Pittsburgh, Nov. 13 (AP).—Beattie Feathers' North Carolina State Wolfpack forced Duquesne's hard-luck gridders to swallow their sixth straight defeat today, with the visitors coasting to a 20-6 victory.

The Dukes battled to a 6-6 half-time tie, but a quick kick that traveled 70 yards over the goal line set up the third quarter Wolfpack touchdown that decided the winner. The final fourth quarter score by North Carolina State came on a pass into the end zone with 10 seconds to go.

The Wolfpack scored first in the first quarter on a 55-yard runback of an intercepted Duke pass by Ronald Simon, right end from nearby New Kensington, Pa.

Duquesne's only score came in the second quarter after a 48-yard run by Ralph Longmore, of Pittsburgh, put the ball deep in North Carolina State territory on the 8-yard line. Line bucks carried to the 1-foot line and then Len Kubiak carried the ball through the line to score.

Late in the third, the Wolfpack scored in six plays. On the sixth play, Bob Smith went over through left tackle standing up. In the fourth quarter, Ogden Smith tossed a pass into the left corner of the end zone to Oscar Boseman, right halfback, for the final score.

Dawson 7-5 Favorite in Milan Fight

Freddie Dawson, a sharp-punching young Chicagoan, moves into Washington against Charley Milan, Baltimore battler, in a scheduled 10-round bout at Turner's Arena tomorrow night.

Dawson, who fought a blistering draw with Lightweight Champ Ike Williams and later lost a split-decision to the 135-pound king, will be a 7 to 5 favorite to turn back Milan.

Dawson is ranked among the first five contenders in both lightweight and welterweight divisions.

Ray Robinson is believed ready to abdicate his welterweight title to campaign as a middleweight, and Williams is expected to follow the lead by giving up his 136-pound title to go after the welterweight crown.

With this in mind, Chicago Matchmaker Jack Hurley plans to pit Dawson against Bernie Docusen, ranking 136-pounder from New Orleans, in a November 26 bout that could springboard the winner to the title.

Young Dawson has an impressive ring record. He knocked out Eddie Miller, Australian featherweight champion, in two rounds, and repeated that performance with a knockout of Vic Patrick, Aussie lightweight and welterweight king.

Recently he stopped Billy Justine and the late Kid Dinamita, and he also holds victories over Dave Andrews, Gene Burton and Doug Radford.

He meets an experienced and respected welterweight in Milan. The Baltimore battler holds two victories over Buster Tyler, conqueror of Beau Jack and Tommy Bell, and has beaten Bobby Lee and Santa Bucca. In previous local showings, he battered Norville Gaddis and Oscar Wright.

Two five-rounders and a pair of fours support the Milan-Dawson scrap. Fives match Don Weber against Walter Ham, and Garland Edwards against Jesse Baker.

Monday Morning Quarterbacks Will Have Field Day Over Maryland's Sad Sacking

By Bus Ham
Post Reporter

WHAT THE MONDAY morning quarterbacks will have to say about the Maryland-North Carolina game:

In Maryland's humiliating defeat, the Terps' line had no apologies to make. The big boys up front repeatedly stood their ground after errors by their backfield buddies put them in trouble.

Charlie Justice was watched so closely that he did not get away once for a long run. He gained only 22 yards in 15 tries. But the beauty of having a threat like Justice on your team is that he makes it possible for the other boys to go places when the defense concentrates on him.

At that, Justice had a good day. His quick-kicking upset Maryland's plans from the outset, and he averaged 47 yards, some of his better kicks sailing into the teeth of a strong wind.

And it was Justice who caught a pass for a touchdown on one of the day's smartest plays. Charlie broke to his left as if he might catch a lateral. Then he cut down the sideline and sprinted into the end zone. Just as he arrived there, Hosea Rodgers dropped a soft pass into his arms. Neat.

Maryland's opening strategy backfired and it was Justice who caused it to do so. The Terps won the toss and tried to take advantage of the brisk wind at their backs by kicking to the Tar Heels instead of receiving. But Justice quickly quick-kicked them right back into a hole.

The striking difference between the teams was in the speed of the opposing backfields. The Terps had no one who could run off and leave the opposition. But every Tar Heel runner who got his nose in the wind ran as if he was scared.

Maryland made some quarterbacking decisions that long will be second-guessed. North Carolina's first touchdown on an intercepted pass was on a ball thrown into the flat at a time when the Terps were rolling and had a 7-0 lead.

Late in the game, trailing by four or five touchdowns, the Terps played it conservatively too long, kicked on third down, refused to gamble for a few yards, and were very slow in opening up their passing game, their best weapon. They had nothing more to lose even if their passes had cost them two touchdowns on interceptions.

Sure, it was too bad that Maryland looked so ragged in defeat, just when Washington had demonstrated that it will support college football in big-league style.

But you can't say it was a dull day.

Next year the Tar Heels may be back at Griffith Stadium against the Terps on November 12, and Justice has another year of eligibility.

The 1949 game is definitely scheduled and the only question is whether the game will be played here or at Chapel Hill. The Tar Heels liked yesterday's crowd, the trip to Washington is the big event of the year for the students, and that 49-20 win didn't make them mad either.

Bowl-Bound Tar Heels Trample Terps, 49 to 20

tributed another, while Justice and Rodgers checked in with the others.

Swept off their feet by a lightning Maryland tally before the game was two minutes old, the Tar Heels quickly regained their composure, tied the score and then rolled up 21 ponts in the second quarter to break the backs of the Terrapins.

Although they outstatisticed the Tar Heels in practically every department except punting which the great Justice dominated with a 47-yard average, the Terrapins were a dismal lot until late in the fourth quarter.

Then, as the crowd started spilling out of the stadium, Quarterback Vic Turyn launched a passing attack which brought three touchdowns, two for Maryland and one for Carolina, in less than two minutes.

In all, Turyn completed four touchdown passes. He passed to Carolina's Maceyko for two, and to Joe Kuchta and Pete Augusburger of Maryland for the others.

Johnny Idzik scored Maryland's other six-pointer barrelling over from 4 yards out in the first period after Harry Bonk had knocked the Tar Heels off their feet with a 76-yard sprint, the first time the Terps got their hands on the ball.

The battle between the statistical Goliaths saw both tumble where they were supposed to be strongest. Maryland, the Nation's No. 1 pass defense club, allowed Carolina to complete 7 passes for 82 yards, three for touchdowns.

Against the Tar Heels, the Nation's No. 2 defense club, Maryland passed and ran for 349 yards, 247 coming on the ground where until yesterday Carolina had restricted seven opponents to only 45 yards per game.

The spirited crowd had hardly settled in their seats before Maryland, a 13-point underdog, spread consternation in the Tar Heel ranks with a touchdown.

Fullback Harry Bonk, taking the ball on a quick handoff from Turyn, slammed through an opening between guard and center and chugged 76 yards down to the Carolina 10-yard line when Maceyko caught the 210-pound fullback from behind.

On third down, Idzik wedged his 165-pound frame between guard and tackle for the touchdown which created a near riotous scene in the Maryland stands. Guard Bob Dean neatly converted and it was 7-0 Maryland, believe it or not. Maryland's supremacy, however, was destined to be short-lived.

The Terps halted Carolina's first bid on the Maryland 37 where Ray Krouse, a great tackle yesterday, smeared Justice for a 3-yard loss on fourth down. This evoked a tremendous cheer, but what followed two plays later was greeted with no enthusiasm from the Terp constituents.

On two tries, Turyn made a first down on the Maryland 37-yard line. His next maneuver was a perfect one—for Carolina. Attempting to hit End Fran Evans with a pass, Turyn instead pegged to Maceyko who caught the ball on the Carolina 40-yard line and breezed 60 unmolested yards for a touchdown.

Bob Cox's kick was true, the first of seven he was to make, and the two teams were back where they started, all tied up.

It took the Tar Heels only two Maryland fumbles and three minutes to unravel the knot. Justice's second quick kick—an 84-yard boot which went over the goal, started it all.

Vern Seibert fumbled on the Terp 20 and Mike Rubish reclaimed the ball for Carolina.

An Art Weiner end-around and an 8-yard sweep by Justice moved the ball to the 4 where the Tar Heels had first down and goal to go, but they were still 4 yards away when they ran out of downs.

Rodgers rammed into the aroused Maryland line three times and couldn't get an inch and Justice was stopped dead in his tracks on fourth down.

Disaster, however, soon followed Maryland's gallant stand. This time Vic Turyn fumbled and Mike Romano recovered for Carolina on the Maryland 7.

Flamisch started the drive for the tie-breaking score by fumbling but recovering for a 13-yard loss. Justice got 5 of it back with a short flip to Art Weiner, but on third down Justice, back to pass, was smeared for a 4-yard loss.

On fourth down, the incomparable Choo-Choo stepped back and deftly passed to Ken Powell in the end zone to wipe out Maryland's two great goal line stands and give the Tar Heels a lead they built up as the struggle progressed.

To make it 21-7, Carolina moved 44 yards with Justice pitching a 14-yard pass to Ken Powell for the score.

The Terps were guilty of their fourth piece of bad strategy just before intermission — another fumble—and Carolina made it 28-7. This time Turyn fumbled, Romano recovered on the Terp 16. On third down, Justice passed to Kennedy for 14 yards and a touchdown.

The Tar Heels scored only once in the third quarter. They moved 40 yards this time. Officials ruled that Maryland interfered with Weiner on a Justice pass and the Tar Heels had a first down on the 8. Justice then raced into the end zone to haul in a Rodgers pass to up the count to 35-7.

Turyn set up the sixth Carolina touchdown by completing a pass to Kennedy early in the fourth period. The Tar Heel wingback intercepted on the Carolina 49 and rcaed all the way to the Terp 10 where Jake Rowden knocked him out of bounds. Kennedy, however, went over on the next play, a double reverse which saw Kennedy bowl over Jim Brasher just at the goal line.

With the crowd on the way out, convinced, perhaps, that Maryland couldn't overcome a 35-point lead in two minutes, Turyn switched to a passing game. He hadn't passed since the first quarter when Maceyko intercepted his first pass. The 72-yard excursion ended with Turyn passing to Kuchta for a touchdown.

After the Terps had recovered an onside kick on the following kickoff, Turyn continued to pass. He completed two in a row to Maryland receivers, but his third went to Mr. Maceyko again and Maceyko sprinted 66 yards for Carolina's last touchdown.

There were only 45 seconds left, but the Terps had enough time to tally just once again. Turyn passed 50 yards to Johnny Baroni, Harry Bonk made 18 through the middle to advance to the 6-yard line. Then Turyn flipped to Pete Augusburger for a touchdown seconds before the gun sounded.

Kentucky Trims Florida

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 13 (AP). — Kentucky spotted Florida an opening-minute touchdown and then called on its aerial wizard to win a free-scoring 34-15 Southeastern Conference victory here today.

Florida scored first, getting its tally in 2:48 of the first period. Ralph Genito fumbled the opening kickoff on the Kentucky 17, Florida recovered and began its push. Seven plays later Doug Belden tallied on a sneak and Laz Lewis upped it to 7-0 with his conversion.

The winning Wildcats moved 72 yards for a tally after the kickoff, featuring four aerials. George Blanda heaved to Wallace Jones on the two and he stepped over. Bobby Brooks tied it at 7-7 with his placement.

Kentucky recovered a fumble at its 26 to begin its final scoring drive.

Howard Wins By 34-0 Score

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 13.—Eddie Jackson's Howard University eleven defeated Delaware State College, 34 to 0, tonight at Wilmington Park before a crowd of 1500 chilled fans.

Scoring early in the first period, the Howard combine had to keep a stiff offensive in order to hold their six-point lead during the first half. Howard's only score in the first period was set up when Jordan blocked a Delaware punt and Anderson recovered. Two plays later, Goodson, all-State end from Washington, took off for 20 yards around left and for the tally.

Early in the third quarter Vigel Anderson took a Delaware punt on his own 10 and ran the length of the field for the second score of the game. Thompson put the ball through the uprights to make the score 13 to 0. Howard picked up a safety in the third period and three more touchdowns in the fourth for their final total.

Bullis Whips G. U. Frosh By 42 to 0

By Billy Gilbert

Bullis Prep chalked up its sixth win of the season as it trounced the Georgetown Freshmen, 42-0, yesterday at Bullis.

Geno Paglucia paced the Prepsters to victory, scoring three touchdowns and booting all six extra points for a combined total of 24 points.

In the first period, John Wuzzardo passed to Dean Smith for 19 yards and a score.

Paglucia scored his first touchdown late in the second quarter on a line buck from 1 yard out, climaxing a drive of 36 yards.

A Jim Joyce to Richie Ivanhoe aerial set up the next Bullis score in the third quarter. The pass carried 13 yards to the Georgetown 17. Paglucia plowed through center for the touchdown on the next play.

Ted Kukowski set up the fourth Prep score when he fell on a loose ball on the Frosh 23. Six plays later Paglucia bucked over for the tally.

In the final stanza, Dean Smith intercepted Bob Deacon's pass and returned it to the Georgetown 17. Two plays later Smith went over from the 1.

The final Bullis marker was a Joyce to Ivanhoe heave for 10 yards and a touchdown.

Gonzaga Beats Devitt, 19-13

Don Nicastri two touchdowns paced Gonzaga's Purple Eagles to a 19-13 win over Devitt Prep, yesterday on the Georgetown University field.

Nicastri's scores came in the third quarter when he reeled off 55 yards through tackle and 12 around left end.

Devitt's Dick Valentine recovered a fumble by Gonzaga's Tom O'Keefe in the end zone for Devitt's first touchdown. Bob Stewart scored Devitt's second six-pointer in the last few minutes of the game.

But the tally was not enough to offset Gonzaga, whose Tom O'Keefe had scored a few plays before, from the one-yard line after Devitt was penalized 15 yards for roughing.

Oriole 2d By Nose in $10,000 Race

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bowie, Md., Nov. 13.—Christiana Stables' Service Pilot turned in his second stake victory of the year in a thrilling finish of the $10,000 added E. K. Lynch Memorial today. Ridden by Carson Kirk, Silver Spring, Md., saddle artist, the 6-year-old was up in the last jump to hang a nose defeat on R. E. Carter's Oriole in the twelfth running of the distance event. Third money went to Brookmeade Stable's Inseparable in the field of nine after a number of scratches.

A crowd estimated at 12,500 saw the first of 13 days of racing due to wind up the Maryland fall season. Those who backed Service Pilot, going alone after the scratching of Alexis, his entry mate, collected at the rate of $5 to $2. The winner was the favorite.

Although rain fell here last night, a bright sun and a strong wind dried the oval and it was fast for the entire card. The winner was clocked in 1:47 1/5.

Rides Confident Race

Kirk, who was aboard his seventh stake winner of the fall season, rode a confident race on Service Pilot. He refused to take part in the forward running in the early stages. At this time Oriole was setting the pace, followed close by Butler, Big Dial and Inseparable.

Tacaro Briar came to the outside to get in the front-running battle along the backstretch, but Kirk still sat tight on the favorite. In the stretch, Oriole turned back bids from Butler and Inseparable. Service Pilot then rallied and came boldly along the outside to catch Oriole right at the wire. Inseparable held on to be third ahead of the tiring Butler. Tacaro Briar dropped out of it in the final sixteenth.

Fifth Victory in 13 Races

The victory was the fifth of 1948 for Service Pilot in 13 outings, mostly in top allowance and handicap company. Today's effort netted $8,025 to bring the 6-year-old's earnings to $30,395.

Alairne, owned by George M. Jacobson of Washington, D. C., won the fourth race, rallying in the stretch to dispose of Brookmeade Stable's Dart By. The latter was second, two and a half lengths behind the winner and a length in front of Stemar Stable's Happy Victor in the field of six going a mile and 70 yards. The winner, handled by Carson Kirk, paid $5.40 and was clocked in 1:45 3/5.

Sidney Jacobs' Love Story rallied from a sluggish beginning to take command and then lasted by a half length in the second race, which drew 12 cheap routers for a test of a mile and three sixteenths. Mrs. J. J. Kates' Grey Hood was a charging second. Five lengths farther back came Mrs. M. Keller's Sir Imp to be third. Jockey R. J. Martin put up a good ride on Love Story, a $9.60 shot which put the finishing touches on a $33.60 daily double, started when H. G. Bedwell's Fancy Answer took the first race at $8.20. The winner was clocked in 2:04 3/5.

Touchdowners Hear Rowland and Tatum

Football Coaches Bo Rowland and Jim Tatum of George Washington and Maryland will be guest speakers at the Touchdown Club's weekly luncheon Monday, 12:30 p. m., at the club.

Bidwill Star As G. U. Prep Wins, 7-6

The scant margin of Bill Bidwill's extra point kept the Little Hoyas of Georgetown Prep in the unbeaten ranks as the prepsters defeated an aspiring Episcopal High eleven 7-6 yesterday on the losers' Hoxton Field.

Episcopal, defending Virginia State prep school champions, had only won two games so far this season, but they refused to concede anything as they struck quickly in the first period on a 68-yard pass play from Ish Sheffield to Jack Dilweg. Ralph Wilillams' try for the extra point was short.

The wind hampered the Hoya passing attack all afternoon, as alert Episcopal defenders intercepted four times. The teams battled nearly three periods until the Hoyas began a drive which, aided by a crucial roughing-the-kicker penalty rolled from their own 20 to the Episcopal 35. Bill Bidwill then ripped around left end for a 25-yard gallop to the 10. Four plays later, Dan Callahan plunged from the 2 for the score. Bidwill's game-winning kick was perfect.

Episcopal	6	0	0	0—6

Georgetown: Touchdown—Callahan. Conversion—Bidwill (placement).
Episcopal: Touchdown—Dilweg.

Brown's Streak Ends

George Brown, place-kicking specialist of the Syracuse University team, booted 27 straight conversions last year before missing his opening kick of this season.

Trough Hill Wins 'Chase Hunt Race

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

Middleburg, Va., Nov. 13.—Mrs. Stephen Clark, jr.'s 6-year-old bay gelding, Trough Hill, thrilled a shivering crowd of 6500 hunt race enthusiasts today to win the featured 2½-mile Mary Mellon Steeplechase at the twelfth race meeting of the Middleburg Hunt Race Association.

Through Hill led hte entire distance to finish five lengthst ahead of Ella C. Widener's Adaptable, winner of the $15,000 added Manly Steeplechase at Pimlico last Wednesday.

Trough Hill, ridden by veteran Tommy Field, portrayed his well-known jumping form to win the $2000 added fixture in the fair time of 4:44.3 over a course made heavy by last night's downpour.

Adaptable, ridden by P. Smithwick, was rated well off the blistering pace and moved up from last place going into the final fourteenth fence, taking the measure of G. M. Bostwick's Gunboats and Mrs. J. P. McCormick's Black Fox Run, but was never good enough to wear down the smooth running Trough Hill. Gunboats and Black Fox Run finished in that order.

G. Bliss Flaccus' Big Mike overcame his refusal to run at the Middleburg spring meeting and literally cantered to a 40-length victory in the cofeatured Gerald B. Webb Memorial Steeplechase under the steady hands of E. Bennett. Mrs. Lewis H. Kelly's Invulnerable drifted in second and H. O. Firor's Argyle of Belwood, former show ring hunter, ridden by game Earl (Whitey) Phelps, also a familiar show ring figure, lost his rider at the thirteenth fence and was remounted to finish within the time limit to take down third money.

Holy Cross 13-6 Victor

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 13 (AP).—Holy Cross exploded two quick touchdowns in the third period to gain a 13-6 victory over Fordham today before 7500 spectators at Fitton Field.

Walter Brennan's pass to End Leo Troy and the latter's spectacular scamper brought a touchdown on a 54-yard play. Jim Murphy kicked the extra point.

Three minutes later, after a Fordham punt had traveled only 8 yards, Ray Sullivan swept around his right end for 44 yards to the Rams' 8. Brennan then pitched to End Jim Dieckelman in the end zone for the second Holy Cross touchdown.

The Rams escaped a shutout by marching 72 yards. They started late in the third period and counted on Larry Higgins' 1-yard slam in the third minute of the final chapter. Andy Lukac and Langdon Viracola did the bulk of the carrying on the Rams' long drive.

The victory gave Holy Cross a 11-10 lead in games in the 46-year-old series. Two games have resulted in ties.

It also enabled Dr. Bill Osmanski's Crusaders to even their season's record at four victories

Bowl-Bent California Crushes Cougars, 44-14, for 13th in Row

Jack Swaner And Jensen Spark Attack

Berkeley, Calif., Nov. 13 (U.P.).—California's Golden Bears rolled to their thirteenth consecutive victory today, mauling Washington State, 44 to 14, and taking another long stride toward the Rose Bowl.

Scoring in every period, and grinding out huge yardage on the ground with their one-two punch of Jackie Jensen and Jack Swaner, the Bears also surprised the Cougars with an aerial attack that scored one touchdown and set up two others.

Coach Lynn (Pappy) Waldorf used 41 men in the slaughter and they kept the high-powered offensive moving right from the opening gun by piling up a 21-7 half-time lead, adding 7 points in the third quarter, and 16 more in the final.

Swaner Scores Twice

Even Center Doug Duncan got into the act when he intercepted a Cougar pass on the Washington State 15 and ran it back for a touchdown early in the fourth period.

California scored first in the opening period on a 77-yard march featuring Jensen and Swaner down to the Cougar 32. From there Billy Main scooted around end to the 3 and Swaner plunged over.

They ran it to 14-0 early in the second with Swaner again ploughing over for the score.

Washington State offered one of the trickiest open-field runners to face the Bears this season in the person of little Jerry Williams. He made a beautiful pass catch in the second period from the hands of Bob Gambold to set the Cougars deep into scoring territory.

A few moments later Gambold passed to End Fran Polsfoot in the end zone for a score and Dick Lippincott made the first of two conversions.

Cullom Sets Record

That was the last Cougar threat until the waning moments of the game when Williams took a California kick-off on his own 12 and raced 88 yards to score.

California made it 21-7 at the half with Jensen ploughing over from the 3, and ran it to 28-7 at the end of the third quarter when Bob Celeri passed 5 yards into the end zone to End John Cunningham for a touchdown.

Duncan collected on his interception for the next score; and the Bears got two more on a safety. Passes from Celeri and Jensen to Bob Keckley and Charley Sarver set up the next touchdown on a 54-yard scoring march. Celeri went around for the tally.

Jim Cullom converted six times to set a Pacific Conference conversion record with 20 in a row breaking the old mark of 15.

Oklahoma Trips Nebraska; Kansas State Dealt 22d Loss

Norman, Okla., Nov. 13 (AP).—After penalties and fumbles kept them scoreless the first 25 minutes Oklahoma bowled over Nebraska, 41-14, here today in a Big Seven Conference football game.

The victory before 28,000 spectators was Oklahoma's seventh straight of the season and fourth in the conference. A triumph over Kansas next week would give Oklahoma the championship.

Nebraska made the game's first score in the second quarter on a 49-yard pass play when Frank Collopy unlimbered a 37-yard pass to Howard Fletcher, who ran the rest of the way to the goal.

The Cornhuskers' final tally was at the start of the fourth quarter when Ralph Damkroger snatched a fumble out of the air and scooted untouched 42 yards. Jerry Moore made both extra point kicks.

Oklahoma rang up three touchdowns in the last 4½ minutes of the second quarter and then closed out with three more in the third quarter as Coach Bud Wilkinson cleaned his bench.

Six different Sooners made touchdowns, but Oklahoma's flashy lefthalf, Darrel Royal, pitched to two besides scoring himself. The other scorers were George (Junior) Thomas, Jack Mitchell, Frankie Anderson, Lindell Pearson and George Brewer. Leslie Ming sent five of six extra point kicks true.

Manhattan, Kans., Nov. 13 (AP).—Gerald Hackney, a bone crushing fullback and pint-sized Dana Atkins came within six yards of powering Kansas State to the football upset of the year today.

But the Wildcats couldn't quite make it, losing 20 to 14 to Kansas University for their twenty-second straight Big Seven Conference defeat.

Kansas, favored to win by just about any score it cared to, protected its undefeated league record with a three-touchdown first half flurry that left the heretofore impotent K-Staters 20 points to the rear.

A record Kansas State crowd of 18,000, shocked and frenzied over the proceedings, might have seen the Wildcats win their first conference game since 1944 had it not been for the passing of a Kansas' Dick Gilman.

Kansas State scored in both the third and fourth quarters. The Wildcats lost another scoring opportunity in the last period when they bogged on the six-yard line.

Even in losing Kansas State came up with the most sparkling play of the day in the third period. Hackney, a 207-pound sophomore, smashed through the mid-section of the Jayhawk line and chased 96 yards to score. The Wildcats poured it on after the Hackney jaunt. In the last 15 seconds Atkins, 155-pound quarterback, whipped a 42-yard pass that Leo Ross caught over the goal.

Wesleyan Whips Trinity, 16-0, For Its 22d Straight Victory

Middletown, Conn., Nov. 13 (AP).—Wesleyan University rolled over a Trinity College football team, 16 to 0, to run its winning streak to 22 games.

With a minute and a half to go in the second quarter, Wesleyan drove to Trinity's 15 on two long passes by Harry Forbes, one to Dan Robinson and the other to Charley Medd. With less than a minute to go Jack Geary booted a 23-yard field goal for the first score of the game.

Opening the second half, Mack Wenner returned a Trinity punt to Trinity's 41 where Forbes took a handoff from Medd and romped over for a touchdown. Don Burdick converted.

In the final period, after holding on its own 4, Wesleyan punted and in an attempted return punt from Trinity's 18, the kick was blocked and the ball rolled behind the Trinity goal. Adair Robinson fell on the ball after it had caromed off the goal post for the final score.

Tulane Trims Baylor, 35-13

New Orleans, Nov. 13 (AP).—Tulane's Green Wave stayed in the bowl picture and just about knocked Baylor out of it today by thoroughly trouncing the Bears, 35-13.

About 45,000 fans saw Tulane run up its highest score of the season, and that against one of the finest defensive clubs in the Southwest.

All Baylor had was the passing of Quarterback Adrian Burk, which engineered the Bear touchdowns, but it backfired on the interceptions which set up Tulane scores.

Price Scores

Ed Price's hard running paced Tulane on a 71-yard drive to its first touchdown. He circled left end for the last 11 yards.

Baylor came right back for a 54-yard scoring march on Burk's passing. He threw 5 yards to Harold Riley for the touchdown.

The Wave surged 66 yards to another touchdown, made on Joe Ernst's 21-yard pass to George Kinek.

A third-period put exchange worked the ball to the Baylor 34 where Ernst sparked another score. Bill Svoboda crashed guard for the final foot.

Again Baylor brought the kick-off back for a scoring march on Burk's passing, this time 72 yards. Jasper Flanakin took a toss from Burk and slipped away from Tulane tacklers to go to the last 27.

USC Pummels Huskies, 32-7

Los Angeles, Nov. 13 (AP).—Southern California's Trojans hooked up with their old rivals, the Washington Huskies, today and proceeded to bang out a 32 to 7 victory before 44,345 onlookers.

Jeff Cavath's Troys got off to a 13-point lead in the first quarter the first on a 66-yard drive, the second after a gift fumble on the Huskies' 4-yard line.

From then on it was a Trojan clambake.

In the third period the Huskies, with Mike Scanlan pitching passes, traveled 77 yards. The scoring strike exploded from behind a screen pass to Fullback Henry Tiedemann. It was good for 31 yards.

The Trojans backs shared honors, with Don Doll elected to score two of the five touchdowns, one on a pretty piece of line slashing for 16 yards.

In the final quarter a pass from Dean Dill to Al Cantor, a couple of substitutes, was good for 54 yards and the chance for Fullback Bill Martin to smash over for the final tally of the game.

GW, Harvard, Kings Point Tie For Regatta Lead

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 13 (AP).—George Washington, Harvard and the Merchant Marine Academy were tied for the lead when sailors from 13 colleges bowed to darkness and a buffeting wind at the Intercollegiate Yacht Racing Association's invitational regatta today.

The three leaders had 35 points apiece after three races, but face plenty of opposition when the series reopens tomorrow.

Pete Putnam of Harvard won the last race and came ashore the leading skipper with 27 points. He finished second to Eric Nordholm of George Washington in the opening event.

Ted Collins of G. W. U. won the only other race completed.

Team scores (each race and total): George Washington, 14, 14, 7—35; Harvard, 13, 8, 14—35; Merchant Marine, 11, 13, 11—35; Brown, 10, 11, 13—34; New York Maritime Academy, 6, 9, 10—25; Navy, 12, 12, 0—24; Delaware, 7, 4, 9—20; Hobart, 1, 6, 12—19; Cornell, 5, 7, 6—18; Maryland, 3, 10, 4—17; Princeton, 9, 0, 8—17; Stevens, 4, 5, 5—14; Colgate, 8, 3, 3—14.

100-Yard Run Aids Pitt Top Purdue, 20-13

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 13.—Pittsburgh's Panthers shook loose Jimmy Joe Robinson for a 100-yard touchdown run and scored two others with short rushes today in a 20-13 victory over the Purdue Boilermakers.

The 30,000 fans saw an 82-yard touchdown sprint and one for 56 yards in the battle of fleet halfbacks.

Pitt's Lou Cecconi returned a Purdue punt 40 yards to set up a 1-yard scoring plunge by Fullback Carl DePasqua in the early minutes of the game.

Harry Szulborski of Purdue, leading rusher in the Western Conference, made a 56-yard, S-shaped touchdown run in the second quarter. Robinson took the following kickoff on his goal line and zig-zagged the length of the field.

A blocked Purdue punt set up an 8-yard scoring run by Robinson in the fourth quarter. Purdue scored with 40 seconds to go on an 82-yard punt return, Bob Hartman catching the kick on his 20 and handing it to Kenny Gorgal for the rest of the trip.

It was Pitt's second victory over a Big Nine team season. The first victim was Indiana. The Panthers never had beaten Purdue before in their five-game series.

Late in the final quarter Szulborski stopped departing fans in the aisles with a 59-yard kickoff return but Purdue lost the ball on downs at the Pitt 22.

Although Li'l Harry picked up 133 yards in 16 rushes and caught two passes for 33 yards, the entire Pittsburgh team made only 96 yards by rushing and 21 by passing.

SMU Pass Beats Arkansas; Texas Defeats TCU, 14-7

Fayetteville, Ark., Nov. 13 (AP).—Southern Methodist University's Mustangs scored on the last play of the game to defeat the Arkansas Razorbacks, 14 to 12, today.

An Arkansas homecoming crowd of 22,000 watched Halfback Paul Page snag a 16-yard pass from Gilbert Johnson and fall into the end zone as the final gun sounded to turn a seemingly certain defeat into victory.

The win was SMU's fourth against no losses in their bid for a second straight Southwest Conference title.

An unexpected duel between SMU's Doak Walker and Arkansas' Clyde Scott failed to materialize. Scott was carried from the field with a knee injury in the first quarter. Walker carried the ball seven times but wound up wtih a net 10 yards lost. His two place kicks, however, produced the points that spelled the difference.

Scott netted 31 yards on five tries. Arkansas was hurt seriously by 14 penalties for 121 yards.

The Razorbacks scored in the first period when Fullback Leon Campbell piled over from the SMU 1-yard line. They made it 12-0 in the third quarter as Campbell ran 68 yards for a touchdown.

SMU marched back 80 yards for its first tally and Kyle Rote dived over from a yard away.

Southern Methodist: Touchdowns—Rote, Page. Points after touchdowns—D. Walker, 2 (placements).

Fort Worth, Tex., Nov. 13 (AP).—Texas' bruising power paid off with two quick touchdowns in the third quarter and the Longhorns plugged their leaky pass defense enough to dump Texas Christian University, 14-7, here today.

The pin-point passing of Lindy Berry sent Texas Christian into a second quarter lead, but Big Ray Borneman and Randall Clay tore the middle of the Horned Frog line to bits in the second half.

On the third play of the third quarter, Borneman broke through the center of Texas Christian's line and squirmed and twisted his way 60 yards to a touchdown.

Within 6 minutes the Steers struck again. Byron Gillory climaxed a 64-yard drive with a wide end sweep that ate up the needed 2 yards for the touchdown that beat the Frogs.

Berry engineered a 53-yard drive for Texas Christian in the second period and Big Pete Stout finished it up with a 9-yard jaunt to score.

Clay kicked both extra points for Texas and Homer Ludiker made good on the only opportunity the Horned Frogs had.

Ohio State Socks Illini By 34 to 7

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 13 (AP). Rampaging Ohio State, lone obstacle between Michigan and an undefeated season, today plastered its worst defeat on favored Illinois, 34-7, and kept the Buckeyes' faint Rose Bowl hopes alive.

An Illini homecoming throng of 65,732 saw the Bucks methodically fashion a 13-7 lead through three quarters and then explode for three last period touchdowns.

The Bucks struck on Pandel Savic's 10-yard payoff pass to Jerry Krall in the first period and Krall's 10-yard end sweep early in the third period.

Illinois showed its teeth for the first and only time in the third period when Bernie Krueger hit End Walt Kersulis on a 17-yard touchdown pass, trimming Ohio's lead to 13-7.

But the determined Buckeyes grew stronger all the way.

First, Krall pitched a 9-yard touchdown toss to Back Alex Verdova. Then Bucky Wertz, third string quarterback, flipped a 39-yard pass to Jim Hague on Ohio's 5 and Joe Whisler banged over from that point.

The fifth Ohio State touchdown came on an unscheduled play. Sub Fullback Curly Morrison was back to punt, with fourth down 10 on Ohio's 45. Hard rushed, Morrison started to run and, behind a phalanx of blockers, easily scampered 55 yards for a touchdown.

Illinois	0	0	7	0—7
Ohio State	7	0	6	21—34

Ohio State scoring: Touchdowns—Krall, Verdova, Whisler, Morrison. Points after touchdowns—Hague (placements).
Illinois scoring: Touchdown—Kersulis. Point after touchdown—Maechtle (placement).

Gophers Overpower Scrappy Iowa, 28-21

Iowa City, Iowa, Nov. 13 (AP).—Massive Minnesota bruised its way to a 28-21 victory over Iowa today in a sizzling flurry of touchdowns.

The underdog Hawks gave their husky Big Nine rivals a terrific battle for three quarters but in the end it was Minnesota's power that paid off.

It didn't come. Minnesota recovered a fourth quarter Iowa fumble on the Gophers' 18 and they took off on the drive that brought them their fourth conference victory and kept alive faint Rose Bowl dreams.

Minnesota drove and passed to three touchdowns. They came on marches of 62, 47 and 61 yards. Little Billy Bye did the scoring on short spurts each time. Gordon Soltau added the extra points.

Iowa, afire with determination, matched those first three touchdowns. But the tired Hawks couldn's halt the last Gopher splurge, and they were unable to match the cliching Minnesota touchdown in the last quarter.

The Hawks made it 7-all on a 13-yard pass from Al Dimarco to Jack Dittmer in the second period. They struck again on the second play of the third period on Jerry Faske's left-handed toss to Dittmer. This thriller covered 42 yards.

Dittmer was hemmed in by two Gophers on the six and the ball was deflected into the air. The Iowa end snatched it on the four and was over for the score. Ron Headington made the second of his three placements to deadlock the count at 14-all.

Ralph Doran, a senior playing his first year of college football, brought the Hawks into their third and final tie with a 50-yard burst through the Gopher line late in the third period.

Badgers Win One For Harry, 26-0

Madison, Wis., Nov. 13 (AP).—The University of Wisconsin punched over four touchdowns against a weak Marquette University squad today to defeat the Hilltoppers, 26-0.

A crowd of 43,000 saw the Badgers take their twentieth victory in the 24-game intrastate series, and their second triumph against six defeats this season.

Northwestern Gives Irish Scare, But Loses, 12-7

ner fumbled, only to have Mike Swistowicz of Notre Dame drop the ball on the next play.

Chuck Hagmann recovered but a penalty dropped Northwestern back to its 45. Don Burson passed to Aschenbrenner for 15, Murakowski ripped off two first downs and then Ashenbrenner failed to make his yardage by inches and Notre Dame took over on its 9.

It took 16 plays for Notre Dame to score with Terry Brennan's 22-yard run the brightest spot in the relentless parade.

Back and forth the battle swayed. Northwestern, again led by the 195-pound Murakowski, smashed to Notre Dame's 24 early in the second period but nothing came of it.

In the third quarter, with Gay making his presence known decisively in place of the ailing Emil Sitko, Notre Dame kept pounding away at Northwestern's goal.

With the ball on the Northwestern 14 the stage was set for the game's big thrill. Tripucka passed sharp and hard sidewise across the field. It was intended for Terry Brennan, but Murakowski got it instead.

The Notre Dame defense was so spread out that Murakowski's dash down the sidelines was without interruption. Tripucka came the closest to overhauling him. Running slantwise down the field he dove at Murakowski on the Notre Dame 30-yard line but missed.

The effective conversion, coming after Stephen Oracko's earlier miss of Notre Dame's chance for an extra point, made it look like Northwestern had all it needed to win.

Here it was that Gay and Landry rose to the heights. Just as the third period ended, Gay returned Aschenbrenner's punt to the Notre Dame 37. Landry made two successive first downs, carrying to the Northwestern 37, and Gay punched out another on the 27. Landry, on a quick opener, shot to the 15. Gay made five through the stubborn Northwestern line, then added seven more. And then Landry carried almost to the goal line from where Gay took it over.

That was all, although Notre Dame kept on driving, with interference on a pass giving the Irish the ball on the Northwestern 16. The mighty line of Northwestern held, but Notre Dame had another chance a few minutes later when Burson, trying to pass, fumbled and Capt. William Fischer of Notre Dame recovered on the Northwestern 9. Again Northwestern held. Notre Dame tried a field goal in the waning seconds, but it went wide.

The Nation's top football game, between second-ranking Notre Dame and eighth-ranking Northwestern, was played out under gray skies before a chilled but hysterical crowd. It was Notre Dame's twenty-third victory over Northwestern against three wins by the Big Nine team, and two ties.

Northwestern entered the game with only one defeat, 28-0, by Michigan, the team most frequently compared with Notre Dame.

Notre Dame had all the edge in statistics, leading in first downs 18 to 10, in rushing 308 yards to 101, but trailing in pass yardage 65-61.

The game was a battle of big, powerful lines. Alex Sarkisian, although injured, shone at center for Northwestern, and Fischer played a mighty game for Notre Dame at guard, as did Leon Hart at end.

In individual statistics, Aschenbrenner made 27 yards in 11 attempts, and Murakowski 74 in 19 tries—not counting, of course, his 90-yard touchdown run. For Notre Dame. Gay made 70 in 11 carries, Brennan 78 in 12, and Landry 41 in nine.

Utah Ties, 20-20, With Oregon State

Corvallis, Oreg., Nov. 13 (AP).—High-scoring Oregon State ran up three more touchdowns today, but again fell short of victory as the inspired Utah Redskins came from behind to earn a 20-20 deadlock. For Oregon State this made 10 touchdowns in the last three games without a win.

The Beavers appeared comfortably out in front, 20-13, with five minutes remaining. But the Utes charged 45 yards to a touchdown and got the tying point over the crossbars just 45 seconds before the gun.

Quarterback Cannon Parkinson sneaked over from the 1-yard line for the touchdown. Bud Gleaze calmly booted the tying conversion.

B-Team Back, Sub Pace 27-13 Missouri Win

Columbia, Mo., Nov. 13 (U.P.).—A sluggish Missouri football team, still licking its wounds from last Saturday's bad trouncing by Oklahoma, shook off the lethargy in the second half today to beat Colorado, 27 to 13, in a Big Seven Conference game.

Colorado led 7-0 at the halftime and the crowd of 22,500 sat in chilled silence until the Bengals, working around a fourth-string halfback and a fullback up from the B team, generated the four second-half touchdowns.

It was Ed Stephens, sub halfback, and Bill Houston, 220-pound B team fullback, who got the Tigers going. Stephens tossed 43 yards to Mel Sheehan, end, to tie the score. Then Stephens went 28 yards for another tally.

Houston then took over the offensive burden. He tallied once and set up the final score with his plunges, Bus Entsminger tossing to Sheehan for the counter.

Rice Deals Aggies 12th Straight Loss

College Station, Tex., Nov. 13 (AP). The Rice Owls ground Texas A. and M. into its ninth straight defeat of the season today, cashing in on three fumbles and an intercepted pass for a 28-to-6 mud-caked triumph.

The vicious Rice ground game swept up a 21-to-0 margin in the first half, and the Aggies never could get their offense to clicking consistently. A blocked kick gave A. and M. its score.

Navy Bows to Lions For 13th Loss in Row

singer punt and then pounced on the fumbled ball on the Columbia 19. But Navy yielded the ball on the Columbia 10 after four running plans got only nine yards, with Marquardt missing first down by a foot on his final plunge.

The Middies moved back in Columbia territory twice more before the quarter ended. Baysinger completed a 20-yard pitch to Marquardt and the latter on the next play scampered 24 yards around right end to Columbia's 16, but the threat stalled when Klemovich smeared Marquardt for a loss at left end.

A 76-yard quick kick by Norland and a penalty set Navy back to its own 1-yard line, and it marched bravely to Columbia's 25 before Green's fumble halted the drive. Powers cnotributed a 40-yard run through the Lions' middle for the biggest hunk of yardage.

Navy couldn't get out of its own territory on the muddy field in the second half until the last five minutes of play, when Rossides fumbled on an end run and Schiweck recovered for the Middies on the Columbia 30.

Baysinger passed to Carson for a first on the 20, and hit the same target for another first down on the 10. Marquardt ripped viciously through the Lions' secondary to take the ball all the way after a wide pitch-out from Baysinger, but Navy's finest moment of the afternoon came to grief at that point. Marquardt lost control of the ball in the end zone and Kusserow recovered for Columbia.

G. W. Beaten By Duke In 62-0 Rout

Guard Charlie Gunner was banged up in the third quarter and was removed to a local hospital with a fractured left leg and dislocated left ankle. Gunner will remain in Durham and is definitely out of the Georgetown game.

Conceding that their land attack would be futile against the heavier Duke line, the Colonials resorted almost exclusively to passing. Davis was the most successful G. W. aerialist, completing 7 out of 17 for 112 yards.

His tosses brought G. W. to Duke's 17 and 24 in separate first-half drives. But after he went to the sidelines at half-time, G. W. could pick up only two first downs, one by a penalty.

Duncan Runs 85

Three times Duke turned G. W. passes to its own advantage and scored. The last Duke touchdown was probably the most sensational. End Bill Duncan intercepted a pass from Joe Buell and raced 85 yards into the end zone. Mike Souchak followed with his eighth straight conversion after missing his first try.

Jack Friedlund intercepted three passes to set up two touchdowns, and scored one himself.

Freddie Folger, the Mount Airy, N. C., back, who has been bothered by bad ankles all season, gave North Carolina (Duke's foe next week) notice that he's back in shape. He picked up 61 yards in 10 running tries and scored two touchdowns. He completed four out of six passes for 99 yards. Cox, his alternate, completed only one pass in three tries, but that one was for a touchdown of 19 yards to Jim Brown.

Scoring Resume

Here, briefly, is a resume of duke's touchdown parade:

First quarter—Friedlund intercepted a Davis pass, and Jack Mounie went over from the 1. Paul Stephanz capped a 52-yard march by crashing for the second touchdown from the 1. 13-0.

Second quarter—After a 30-yard drive, Mounie tallied from the 1. Then Folger sparked a 78-yard probe and scored from the 1. 27-0.

Third quarter—Another Friedlund interception put the ball on G. W.'s 5. Friedlund scored on an end run from the 11. Tommy Hodges whacked over from the 1 after a 40-yard advance. Score, 41-0.

Fourth quarter—Cox returned a punt 50 yards to the G. W. 21. Folger, trapped while attempting to pass, ran the rest of the way over the goal line. A G. W. fumble gave Duke the ball on the Colonial 13. Cox passed to Brown for the touchdown. Then Duncan wound it up with his interception and 85-yard touchdown run back; 62-0.

Villanova players who have faced Army teams for the past five seasons regard the current West Point aggregation as the hardest-hitting of all.

Army Wins On Pass in Last Minute

1 yard out for Penn's first score in the opening quarter and had lugged the leather across for the Quaker's second tally to keep his team in front, 14-13, at the half.

His father died on Wednesday, and the funeral at Atlantic City has been postponed until next Monday so that Dooney could get his shot at the West Point crowd. That he didn't personally superintend the season's crowning upset was no fault of the man who is built like a mail box.

Penn proved that Army's vaunted running attack could be contained. Gil Stephenson, the "new Doc Blanchard," was stopped almost cold by Chuck Bednarik and his husky teammates. But for Califfa's passing, Army would have taken a beating.

First Downs: Army 11, Penn 9

Army, the nation's No. 3 team in last week's Associated Press poll, made only one first down in the first 30 minutes of play—on a pass. Penn made seven. The final tally was Army 11 firsts, Penn 9. Penn gained 198 yards by rushing to Army's 167.

Penn scored the first touchdown in the midst of a driving rainstorm which stopped a few minutes later as suddenly as it had started. After Galiffa's fumble of the slick ball had been recovered on Army's 14, the Quakers scored in five plays. On fourth down from the two Dooney passed to Sponaugle in the end zone. Herb Agocs' kick made it 7-0.

Army came right back to tie it up. Climaxing a 78-yard push, Winfield Scott took off down the side line for a thrilling 48-yard touchdown run. Capt. Bill Yeoman split the posts to make it 7-7.

Dooney Gets Penn's Second Score

Dooney cracked across for Penn's second score early in the second quarter after another Galiffa muff had been recovered by Don Detorre, Penn tackle, on Army's one. Agocs made it 14-7.

On the ensuing kickoff, Stuart gathered in the ball three yards inside his own end zone, cut sharply to his left sideline, and went all the way as Yeoman threw a key block for him at midfield. Yeoman missed the kick and the quakers led, 14-13.

The second half was mostly Bedlam. Army dove 52 yards in nine plays to score its third touchdown, Stuart shot off his right side 7 yards for the marker. Yeoman again missed the point.

Then came Dooney's 42-yard scamper at 9:29 of the closing quarter to make it Penn 20, Army 19. That was when Galiffa came a-galloping to the rescue of Coach Blaik and his men.

They Make It Hot At La Plata Race

La Plata, Argentina, Nov. 13 (AP).—Fans didn't like the way the first race was run at La Plata racetrack today.

Item won the race, but the crowd felt that the heavily backed Albor, which came in second, had been given a poor ride by Jockey Luis Martinez. So:

One person was wounded by a bullet, and an inspector employed by the track was held on a charge of using firearms; angry bettors jumped on to the track, smashed windows in the stands and burned newspapers in an effort to set fire to the installations.

Police eventually restored order. The wounded man was taken to the track infirmary.

Texas to Cut Oil Output for Conservation

Houston, Tex., Nov. 13 (AP).—The ax is expected to fall Monday on Texas crude oil production.

That is the day the State Railroad Commission has indicated orders will be signed shutting down 17 fields producing approximately 400,000 barrels of crude daily.

The conservation-minded commission last Wednesday authorized preparation of the orders, the shutdown to remain effective until wasteful flaring of oil well gas is halted. It long has been the practice in Texas to burn in the open field gas production in solution with oil.

The shutdown would drop the Nation's daily crude production from an all-time high of 5,626,700 barrels (as of the week ending November 6) to approximately 5,225,000, a figure about 15,000 barrels less than the daily average a year ago.

"Purely Conservation"

Texas' production would fall to around 2,125,000 barrels daily, the State currently producing about 44 per cent of the Nation's crude.

"This shutdown will be purely a conservation measure," Chairman Ernest O. Thompson said. "For three years the commission has been warning the operators to conserve flare gas or have their wells shut down."

The commission apparently is confident the industry's supply-demand situation is excellent, despite winter's demands for heating fuels.

Several speakers at the American Petroleum Institute convention, which concluded Thursday in Chicago, released industry statistics which probably were available to the commission before its course of action was set.

Fred Van Covern, institute statistician, said an all-time high of above-ground stocks for all oils on October 31 totaled 582 million barrels, compared with 514,241,000 barrels a year earlier.

Increase Since War

He said crude production has increased 750,000 barrels daily since the war, and that between 38,000 and 39,000 wells will be drilled this year compared with 33,173 last year and 33,911 in 1920, the previous record.

The head of API's committee on long-term petroleum availability, L. F. McCollum, president of Continental Oil Co., said:

"By 1953 the availability of natural petroleum produced in the United States is estimated to reach an upper range of 7,300,000 barrels a day. That figure would be 2,300,000 barrels a day more than actual production in the peak war year of 1945."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 13 (AP).—Dock workers' strikes and railroad embargoes were too much for the bulls in corn today. The yellow cereal dropped more than a cent, closing at the day's lows, while the rest of the grain market gave a highly mixed appearance.

At the start everything was a bit lower, but wheat and soybeans rallied during the day. The advance left wheat just about where it had closed yesterday, but soybeans ended a little above that level. Oats, rye and lard declined.

Wheat closed ¼ lower to ⅛ higher. Corn was 1¼ to 1½ lower. Oats were ⅛ to ⅜ lower. Rye was 1½ to 1¾ lower. Soybeans were ¾ to 1½ highr, and lard was 15 to 30 cents a hundred pounds lower.

The shipping tieup on the Atlantic Coast, ranging from Hampton Roads on the south to Portland in the north, had more influence on corn than wheat. Larger quantities of wheat are being exported, but the corn movement to terminals is now at its peak. Wheat arrivals are not heavy and it is felt most surplus grain has been marketed.

Thus far, railroad embargoes do not apply to grain. But grain can be shipped only as long as there is room in seaboard elevators to store it. Once that room is filled up, shippers will not be able to obtain permits from the elevator operators to ship the grain. Some traders think this won't take very long.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Stock Prices vs. Trade Prospects

Word comes out of Chicago that we're in a bear market. Justin Barbour, a leading exponent of the Dow theory—Wall Street's equivalent of the polls—pronounced the break in stock prices on Tuesday as the last straw.

Livingston

For Barbour and for other Dow theorists, the line of least resistance for common stocks from now on is down. And the trend will continue down until it turns up. That's the Dow theory—no kidding.

Technically, the bear market came about this way. On Tuesday, industrial stock prices took a drubbing. They closed at 173.94 in the Dow-Jones index. This was 2 points below the close of 175.99 on September 27—a previous low. The breakthrough confirmed a similar and previous breakthrough by the railroad shares. And so the bear market was confirmed.

Volatile Investors

As I see it, we've already had sufficient decline to constitute a bear market. On Monday, November 1, the day before election, a shareholder in United States Steel went to bed cheered in the knowledge that Steel common was worth $84.25. That wasn't far below the year's high of $87.62. But on Wednesday, when United States Steel finally sold on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange, he was poorer by $5.25 a share.

What a commentary on Wall Street, on American investors! United States Steel, as a corporation, hadn't changed over election day. Irving Olds was still chairman of the board, Benjamin Fairless was still president. The bank balances were as big as ever, backlogs were substantial, plant and equipment were modern, efficient, and being expanded. Yet investors rerated the entire value of the company. United States Steel was the same, but investors felt differently about it.

What went for Steel went for duPont, American Tel. & Tel., Standard Oil (N. J.), and so on. By the end of a week—at the close of the market on Tuesday, November 9—United States Steel was down $11.50—or 14 per cent from its Monday close. Small wonder that Carl Apponyi, of Edgerton Eykoff & Co., Los Angeles, described the selloff as a "baby panic." You can see it clearly in the following table. It shows the prices of leading stocks before the election and a week later; also the per cent decline in the postelection week and the per cent decline from the 1948 high:

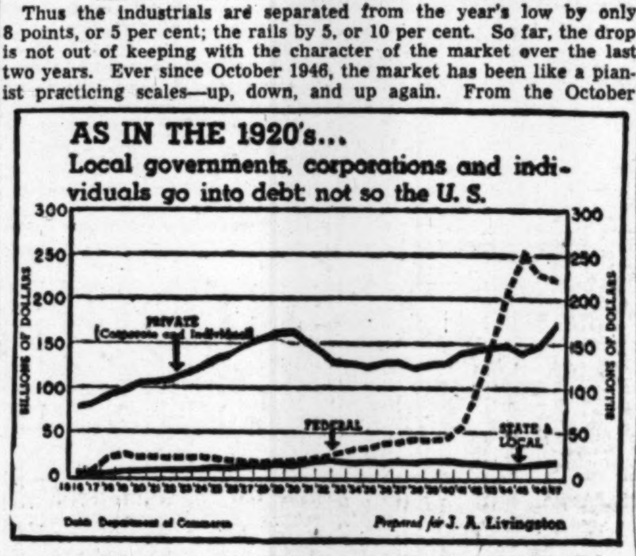
	Price before election	A week later.	% decline in week.	% decl. from year's high.
A. T. & T.	153⅛	150⅞	—1.7%	—4.9%
American Woolen	45⅛	40½	—10.3	—28.8
Anaconda	38⅛	33⅛	—12.2	—18.8
duPont	181¾	170	—6.5	—10.0
General Electric	42⅛	37⅝	—11.5	—12.5
General Motors	65¾	59⅞	—8.9	—9.3
Johns-Manville	40⅞	35⅝	—12.6	—15.4
New York Central	16⅜	13⅛	—19.9	—29.0
Sears Roebuck	42⅞	37⅞	—11.7	—12.4
Standard Oil New Jersey	80⅛	72⅝	—9.4	—21.8
Union Pacific	92	82½	—10.3	—14.3
United States Steel	84¼	72¾	—13.7	—17.0
Dow-Jones Industrials	189.76	173.94	—8.3	—10.0
Dow-Jones Rails	61.97	53.83	—13.1	—17.1

The postelection selloff has been so swift that stocks are down almost to their lows of the year. Yet they started not far from the 1947-48 highs made in June '48. That's easily seen in this table.

Dow-Jones Index	'47-'48 high.	Nov. 1, close.	1948. low.	Approx. rec. level.
Industrials	193.16	189.76	165.39	173
Rails	64.95	61.97	48.13	53

Thus the industrials are separated from the year's low by only 8 points, or 5 per cent; the rails by 5, or 10 per cent. So far, the drop is not out of keeping with the character of the market over the last two years. Ever since October 1946, the market has been like a pianist practicing scales—up, down, and up again. From the October 1946, low of 163.12 the industrial stocks advanced to 184.49 in February 1947, then dropped back to 163.21 in May, then advanced to 186.85 in July, then moved back to 165.39 in March 1948, then up to 193.16 in June, and now they're down to around 173.

AS IN THE 1920's...
Local governments, corporations and individuals go into debt not so the U. S.



Data Department of Commerce
Prepared for J. A. Livingston

Presumably, as the industrials approached the 163-65 level, bargain-hunters would be busy—on the theory that there would be another run-up on the scale. That's a strong support level—a "triple bottom" in chart-reader parlance.

Six Basic Business Props

Nor has the business outlook changed materially. The basic props still are: (1) Unsated demand for automobiles; (2) rising armament expenditures; (3) ECA aid to Europe; (4) domestic housing needs; (5) necessary plant expansion, still not finished—public utilities particularly; (6) long-deferred State and local public works.

Admittedly, Dewey might have been easier on big business than Truman and a Democratic Congress. Truman, to bring the budget into balance, may ask for an increase in corporate taxes. On the other hand, he will be insistent on a low-cost housing bill. Such legislation will sustain new residential construction in the face of a sticky market for homes recently built.

Moreover, the postwar job of rebuilding the Nation has not even begun. Post-World-War-I history is bound to repeat. Then, State and local governments embarked on huge public works undertakings—highways, schools, sewerage and water systems, hospitals, public buildings, airports, playgrounds, etc. The Federal Works Agency estimates that State and local needs run to about 100 billion dollars, of which highways alone amount to 60 billion. At the 1948 rate of installation, these works would require 33 years. Obviously some speed-up in projects is likely, if any slack in manpower and materials occurs.

Financing the projects ought not be difficult. During the twenties, State and local governments sold bonds easily. Presumably they can do so again. But, the difference between this period and the last postwar period is that then the Federal Government reduced its debt over a decade (see chart). This time, after the initial drop, Federal debt may go up again—because of European aid and rearmament. If so, the United States Government will compete with State and local governments and private borrowers for money. Which is one reason the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board consider it essential to support the market for Government bonds.

Newspaper 'Ad' Linage Hits Peak

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—Media Records announced today newspaper advertising in October was in greater volume than in any other month in history.

For the first time since it has been collecting information on linage, covering the past 21 years, the Media Records chart showed a total in excess of 200 million lines. The lowest monthly volume was 72 million in February, 1933.

Media said total advertising in the first 10 months of this year was 14 per cent greater than in the same months last year and 18 per cent greater than in the same months in 1929.

Weather Retards Trade at Retail

The volume of wholesale orders this week remained near the high level of previous weeks. Prompt delivery was requested by many buyers as they sought to restock diminished inventories of seasonal goods. The reorder volume of women's winter apparel continued to be sizable; orders for spring styles were booked in an increased volume.

Supersized Pipes to Carry Oil 1100 Miles From Iraq to Sea

Chicago, Nov. 13 (AP).—An oil expert told yesterday about what to expect from those two huge pipelines—each much bigger than the United States famed "big inch"—which are in prospect for the Middle East. They will be the world's biggest.

General Manager M. G. Gamble of the marine department of Standard Oil Co. (N. J.) told of the big pipes in a news conference at the twenty-eighth annual meeting of the American Petroleum Institute

Plans are for the super-sized pipes to run from the Persian Gulf and Kirkuk fields in Iraq to the Mediterranean, Gamble said.

The first of the lines—the smaller—will be a 30 to 31-inch job. "Big Inch" is only 24 inches. Gamble said the new line is expected to be completed by January, 1951.

The second line is even bigger—from 34 to 36 inches—and twice the capacity of "Big Inch." Its capacity is so much greater because the lines are rated on their square inch size. "Big Inch" has an area of 576 square inches, while the proposed line's area will be about 1215 square inches.

Gamble said the new lines will be about 1100 miles long. Tankers now carrying oil from the fields have to travel about 3500 miles—and return empty.

Gamble said the new lines also will eliminate the tax for transit through the Suez Canal. He said the pipes require less steel than the equivalent amount of tankers, and need about one-fourth the manpower to operate.

In all, the lines are expected to cut about 40 cents a barrel off production costs of oil delivered to New York, Gamble said.

Most of the oil produced in the area will go to Europe, thus cutting down the amount the United States is required to ship there, Gamble said.

If anything should happen to prevent completion of the lines on schedule, the world would find itself short of tankers, Gamble said.

Small Gains Exceed Losses Among Stocks

New York, Nov. 13 (AP). — The stock market found a temporary resting place this week after a $6,500,000,000 post-election price slash.

That loss in the market value of all shares listed on the exchange occurred in three disastrous trading days. The most recent was last Tuesday when the general price level plunged to the lowest since late March. Since Tuesday prices levelled off, for the most part straying a point or less from the previous close.

In Saturday's short session gains outweighed losses and the price average showed a slight advance. Changes either way, though, were mostly fractional.

Major exceptions were American & Foreign Power $7 and $6 preferreds, each of which dropped to new lows for the year. The $7 issue lost 3¼ at 51¼ and the $6 was down 5½ at 43½.

WHAT STOCKS DID	Sat.	Fri.
Advances	325	522
Declines	216	274
Unchanged	229	242
Total issues	770	1038

The declines followed word that several stockholders had appealed a reorganization plan which had been approved by a Federal District Court.

After the Thursday recess the market slowed down and prices seesawed in a narrow range.

A new approach was taking shape in downtown Manhattan.

How much ground this near attitude had gained was questionable. While the furious selling attacks had stopped—possibly only temporarily—there was certainly little indication that a fast rebound was in the making.

Failure of a rally to get underway was a disappointment to many Wall Streeters. It was noted, though, that the market had gone through a violent wrenching, that not for years had the price level dropped so much in so short a period, and that thousands of stock traders were still scratching their heads in bewilderment over what had happened.

Recovery, if it comes, might be a painfully slow process. Or unpredictable Wall Street may change its mood as suddenly as on the day after the election.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—Cotton futures today closed irregular with final prices 50 cents a bale lower to 5 cents higher.

Hedging was relatively heavy in initial dealings and depressed the market 70 cents a bale before mill buying and short covering rallied prices to approximately Friday's closing levels. Late hedging and profit taking took part of the advance.

Dealers said the Atlantic Coast maritime strike posed no immediate threat to cotton exports, since the Gulf ports, which handle the bulk of shipments abroad, are still open. Closing of Gulf ports would disrupt the ECA cotton export program, it was conceded, but most traders believed it would be settled in a short time.

General McAuliffe said "NUTS"
THAT'S THE WORD he put in the history books on December 22, 1944 when the Germans demanded the unconditional surrender of Bastogne in the Battle of the Bulge. Inelegant but eloquent. Typically American.
In effect, that's also the answer President Truman gave the political experts — even members of his own party — when they tried to tell him he didn't have a chance. The President's victory proved once again that the American people respect a man who "won't run away from a fight."
And maybe "Nuts" is the only adequate answer to those who are fighting the election fight all over again . . . to their predictions of disaster and the fear they breed . . . to the apathy, apprehension, and all the wild alarms of the past week. Remember, if there were no election to complain about — then, we'd really have something to worry about.
You see, we think democracy is something more than just a good idea. Believing in it means believing in the judgments of the American people, accepting them, trying to do a job within the established framework. Let's not talk about our rights; let us talk and think about our responsibilities.
One campaign tactic did get us a little riled. That was when the moth-eaten bogey of a Wall Street tycoon was trotted out.
But there's no sense getting too worked up about that. All's fair in love or war — or an election fight. In America.
Mr. Truman knows as well as anybody that there isn't any "Wall Street." That's just legend. Wall Street is Montgomery Street in San Francisco. Seventeenth Street in Denver. Marietta Street in Atlanta. Federal Street in Boston. Main Street in Waco, Texas. And it's any spot in Independence, Missouri, where thrifty people go to invest their money, to buy and sell securities.
These are the financial shopping centers of America, where industry must go for the money it needs to keep the wheels turning. If the money goes into hiding, the wheels slow down.
But in an atmosphere friendly to all types of honest enterprise, the American people will put their money at risk in the hope of earning a fair return.
Then business will have the life blood it needs to accomplish again that miracle of production which is as necessary to win the peace as it was to win the war.
Mr. Truman knows this. Mr. Truman believes this. Or so we think. If we're wrong — well, we'll wait until we're proved wrong. Certainly, we're not going to yell before we're hurt.
So there was an election. So what happened? Specifically, what has happened to change the ideas of people in the financial shopping centers about the value of the securities they own?
Thus far — nothing. The greatest industrial machine of all times is still going — and going at a record rate. We're still doing business at the old stand and under the same conditions that have prevailed for sixteen years.
All of which reminds us of something Mr. Truman's predecessor said, "We have nothing to fear but fear itself."
Still true.

Business Unit Still Lags in Chest Drive

The Community Chest released figures yesterday showing that about 70 per cent of the divisions in its Big Business Unit have records below that of the over-all Chest average of 65.71 per cent of quota filled.

About 70 per cent of the larger Government agencies and departments, on the other hand, have turned in records better than the Chest average, according to the statistics, based on pledges turned in last Friday.

Chauncey G. Parker, chairman of the Chest campaign, said he hoped figures on the two units, whose combined quotas amount to 72 per cent of the Chest's total $4,566,790 goal, would offer "givers and campaigners alike a clear picture of the distance we have to go to reach the goal."

Government Unit 'Best'

Business I Unit has collected 60.68 per cent of its $1,785,271 quota so far, while the Government Unit, "best" of the campaign groups, has collected 85.4 per cent of its $1,524,557 quota.

The Government figures, based only on the records of 38 agencies and departments which employ more than 500 persons, showed that 27 of these had records above the Chest average.

Of eleven large Government divisions under the Chest average, none was below 44 per cent of its quota. Two divisions, the Department of the Army and the American National Red Cross, were over 100 per cent and seven others were above 90 per cent.

Figures for the 72 divisions in the Business I Unit showed that 49 were under the general Chest average. Six of these were below 10 per cent, including five in the Construction Area, and Division 76, Consultants and Business Services, in the Insurance and Professions Area.

Four other Business I divisions which were under 10 per cent last week had climbed as much as 10.33 percentage points to get out of this lowest-ranking group.

Only two Business I divisions showed no change since the previous week: Division 26, Laundries, under John Chevalier, stayed at 14.56 per cent, and Division 62, Brokers, under Fenton Cramer, at 65.58 per cent.

Two Make Spectacular Gains

Two business divisions showed spectacular gains over the week. They were 84, Universities, under M. R. Bruin, jr., which leaped from 40.27 per cent to 94.59 per cent, and 43, Auto Dealers, under Clark D. Moody, which went from 42.30 per cent to 85.59 per cent.

Five separate big business divisions are over 100 per cent now: 21, Women's Wear, under Howard Grothe; 32, Department Stores, under B. B Burgunder; 38, Drug Stores, under John W. Hichinger; 51, Utilities, under Robert W. Wilson; 90, Architects and Engineers, under Charles W. Wohlgemuth, jr.

The Architects and Engineers hold the highest record in the unit, with 149.71 per cent of their $1832 goal turned in already.

Unit Reaches 60% of Goal

The Community Chest's Big Business Unit has made 60.68 per cent of its $1,785,271 goal, according to reports submitted last Friday. A total of 54,322 gifts have been received from 154,212 employes in the area.

South Capitol St. Bridge Steel Arrives in D. C.

First steel for the $4,900,000 South Capitol st. bridge across the Anacostia River arrived in Washington last week, District Highway Department officials said yesterday.

Additional shipments from the American Bridge Co. plant in Pittsburgh are expected on November 26, and first work on steel sections is planned for early next month. Stone piers already have been erected. The structure is financed entirely by District highway funds.

The steel is being piled in a storage yard above Sousa Bridge, and later will be swung by crane on barges which will transport the metal downstream to the bridge site.

2 Hearings Set On Apartment House Rentals

District Rent Examiner James G. Tyson will hold a hearing Monday at 11 a. m. at Rent Control Headquarters, 1740 Massachusetts ave. nw., on proposed rent increases on 181 units of the General Scott Apartments, 1 Scott Circle.

Present rents range from $53 a month for 1½-room units to $97.50 for 3-room apartments. Proposed rents are from $60.42 to $111.15.

A hearing on a proposed rent increase on 70 apartments at 2700 Connecticut ave. will be held Monday at 9:30 a. m. by Rent Examiner William F. Mansfield. Present rents range from $28 for 1½-room units to $97.50 for 4-room units. Proposed rents are from $34 to $118.75.

McLean Gardens Tenants to Appeal Proposed Boost

District Rent Examiner Denis K. Lane has denied a request by 700 tenants of McLean Gardens, one of the District's largest housing developments, for reconsideration of his 6.9 per cent rent increase recommendation, it was learned last night.

The tenants, represented by the law firm of Arnold, Fortas & Porter, will appeal to District Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell for administrative review of the decision on the 720 apartments, Reed Miller, member of the law firm, said last night.

Cogswell already is making an administrative review of Lane's decision on the 1300 dormitory rooms. Lane ruled that no change should be made in the present rents and the development owners, the Fairmac Corp., asked for a review.

Meanwhile, rent boosts on both type of housing, which were scheduled to go into effect November 5, have been held off pending a final decision.

$11,200 Rewards Spur Search for Coed's Slayer

Boulder, Colo., Nov. 13 (AP).—Rewards totaling $11,200 spurred the search for the rape-slayer of 18-year-old Theresa Foster tonight.

Colorado University's board of regents announced they would give $10,000 to the person who provided information leading to the killer's arrest. Boulder's newspaper, the Camera, has collected $1200 in contributions from residents of this college town. This will be added to the reward jackpot.

Miss Foster, a freshman engineering student, disappeared Tuesday night while returning to her rooming house from a meeting of a Catholic students' organization.

Her body was found Thursday on the snow-covered bank of a creek nine miles south of here.

Youth Cancels Marriage Offer

Huntington, W. Va., Nov. 13 (AP). William Collier, the Marshall College student who wanted a bride with $100,000, has changed his mind.

In a statement tonight, he declared, "I have decided to withdraw my offer because of adverse criticism by supposedly intelligent people." Collier previously had stated he would marry any woman in the United States who would provide $100,000 for him to finish his education in psychology and set up a business as a psychiatrist. He is a freshman.

Collier had one offer. It was from a woman who said she had two children but did not have the money. But she said she could get it.

Dies at Graveside

Ambridge, Pa., Nov. 13 (AP).—Today, as usual, Mrs. Katherine Schneider, 68, made a weekly visit to the grave of her husband, Joseph, who died 13 years ago. As she knelt in prayer she collapsed. The coroner said she had died of a heart attack.

Jury Overruled By Lie Detector In Murder Trial

Shelby, N. C., Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Because a judge felt that a lie detector came nearer the truth than a jury handicapped by "our outmoded rules of evidence," Robert Howell today had escaped a second degree murder sentence.

A jury found the 28-year-old carpenter guilty of shooting to death pretty, red-haired 15-year-old Betty Smith, an unwed mother, but Judge J. Will Ples, jr., said "the jury was wrong in who did the actual shooting."

Instead, his wife, Pratt Dover Howell, 27, was ordered to serve 12 months for manslaughter. Experts said a lie detector confirmed her confession that the girl she accused of being her husband's sweetheart was shot as they struggled for possession of a .32 caliber pistol.

"This Is Bob Hollander Speaking"

For the past 25 years I have specialized in the sale of the better-type restaurants and have sold many of the well-known restaurants in this city. I have been representing some of my clients for as long as 20 years, during which time they have bought and sold exclusively through me. I am now in a position to handle the sale of a few more good paying restaurant propositions. If you are thinking of selling and have a profitable business I will be pleased to appraise same for you at today's market value at no charge or obligation, and unless I feel I can sell it I will not accept your listing, so both of us will save time. Incidentally this is the first time in many years that I have requested listing through an advertisement, but while there are many places on the market for sale in Washington, I will not offer them to my clients unless they are good paying propositions and the price asked is fair.

A DAZZLING EXAMPLE

Of restrained decoration combined with the latest in modern equipment this 5-room apartment surpasses any other we have seen. All rooms look down through picture windows onto the tops of trees in a broad avenue or street. Given the means, most of us willingly pay extravagant prices for scarce and beautiful things. In this case the owner seems more concerned to give full value. Night or Sunday, call Mrs. Merillat, CO. 5165. Louis P. Shoemaker, 1719 K St. N.W., NA. 1166.

NEARLY 20 ACRES

On the outskirts of Alexandria, and suitable for high-density development; fronts 2 macadam roads with a total frontage of over 2,000 feet; the necessary utilities are in the neighborhood, and a large housing project is under way on the adjoining tract. Price $31,600.

RIVERWOOD

Here is probably the last and best section for beautiful homes available in close-in Va.

Every lot is about the size of 3 or more ordinary lots, each containing from 40,000 to 80,000 square feet. Still you are only 15 minutes from Washington.

High in the beautiful wooded Virginia hills with all improvements in. Wide streets, curb, guttering, water, sewer, electricity. Every cross street deadended for safety to children and minimum traffic.

Lovely ramblers and ranch-type houses are now being built here because the lots are large enough to accommodate just such homes.

Prices range from $4,000 to $6,750 each, or about 18c a foot, which is 40 per cent less than residential lots cost in similar neighborhoods.

If you can afford a nice home or plan one later, this is where it belongs, as the natural charm of the neighborhood and size of each lot justify your best efforts and planning.

Satisfactory terms can be arranged either on the lots or completed homes, several of which are under construction.

Come up and see us this weekend, we'll be here until dark Saturday and Sunday.

First Lady Prefers Sidelines, But—

It's Time for Our Town To Have Real Inaugural With Bang-Up Parade, Ball

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

IT'S ABOUT TIME the Nation's Capital staged a bangup inauguration. Since President Roosevelt's fourth term officially commenced with a simple "swearing in," there hasn't been any kind of public show for eight years. And, during the preceding FDR ceremonies, parade and military fuss had to be tailored to the length of time President Roosevelt was physically able to remain standing at review.

Recently, this department picked up a few random items from Democratic National Committeeman Melvin Hildreth who, since 1933 has been chairman of the Inaugural's Committee on Tickets, Grandstands and Arrangements.

The actual swearing-in ceremony takes place on a high stand supported by four pillars. The structure is especially erected for each occasion and stored in between times. Congress only pays for seats closely adjacent to this outsized podium. The cost of grandstands plus decorations is met by the sale of tickets. In addition to notables and the press, who sit free, in 1940, for instance, some 30,000 seats were sold ranging in price from $2 to $10.

Toughest Inaugural was back in 1933 when, on March 4 all banks were closed and no checks, only cash, could be accepted. But Mr. Hildreth, an attorney whose clients include a circus, rose to the occasion, applied the circus method of double checking receipts, disposed of $75,000 worth of admissions, never lost a penny.

The grandstand decoration centers around a specific patriotic motif chosen after consultation with Government architects. Roosevelt's inaugural motifs included the facade of Independence Hall and Andrew Jackson's birthplace.

Take Home Souvenirs

ANOTHER EXPENSE defraying item is an elaborate official program made up as take home souvenir and innocent of advertising. At each inaugural a special medal is struck off, sold for a dollar. Bearded sculptor Jo Davidson has designed the plaque for some time past. But last spring he came out flat footed for Wallace, so another artist will get the commission.

In past administrations the Inaugural Ball was tops in political and social elegance. Lately the function has been sidestepped because of its increasing unwieldiness, the tremendous difficulty in checking so many wraps. But, nevertheless, Mr. Hildreth believes there'll be some kind of ball next January.

Components of the military parade, which, in pre-Roosevelt days used to file past the reviewing stands four to six hours, are selected and their transportation expenses paid by the armed services. But the District of Columbia does apportion funds for inaugural expenses and it's nice to know that some $37,000, a left-over plum from the last Roosevelt ceremony, remains at hand in the bank.

The Inaugural Committee also retains a surplus of a few thousand dollars derived from seat and program sale. So let's throw all the money into the kitty, have a big parade, a swell spectacle, something to tell our grandchildren!

Rose for the First Lady

RUMOR HAS IT that colour de rose will prevail at the White House. Eleanor blue will give way to the cheerier rose tones selected by both Mrs. Truman and Margaret for their inaugural gowns. Unlike her remarkable predecessor, Mrs. Truman's personality, her likes, dislikes, have not been subjected to the seachlight of publicity which plays around most thrones. This is because the First Lady's friends insist Mrs. Truman was reared in a family so close knit, so self-sufficient, that her whole life has been devoted to fostering her small circle's utter wellbeing.

Bess Wallace's father died when she was a young girl. She grew up in a large, comfortable house on Independence's fashionable Delaware st, with her small, quiet, genteel mother, her three brothers—Frank, George, Fred. Her father had headed a milling company which made, amongst other products, an extra fine flour called "Queen of the Pantry." Her brothers carried on the business, sent their sister to the Barstow School, the most exclusive in and around Kansas City.

A constant companion to her brothers, her friends say, she acquired their masculine way of thinking, made it keynote of her character.

Harry Truman lived on a farm at nearby Grandview. His father died when he was young. He shouldered many financial responsibilities, never was able to marry until after the First World War. The young Trumans, after their marriage, lived with their mother-in-law, kept to the family circle.

When the Trumans came to Washington, Margaret, then a young girl, was not too strong. To Helping St. Nick

Christmas season is the gift season, and for several weeks now Washington society, club and church groups have been busy seeing to it that St. Nick will have enough for everybody. They have planned bazaars, parties and special sales for raising funds to help extend the holiday spirit to needy families, both in this city and abroad.

Typical of these is the American aid to France, Inc., which has scheduled its holiday benefit bazaar for Wednesday, November 17, at the French Embassy.

Then on November 30 the Thrift Shop will have a doll sale, the proceeds of which will be used to provide shelter and hospital care for Washington's needy children.

Mrs. Murdock Makes a Hobby Of Collecting Capital Facts

By Marie McNair

A DAY doesn't pass that Mrs John R. Murdock, wife of the Representative from Arizona, doesn't pick up some new fact about Washington.

Ask her anything about the Nation's Capital and if the answer isn't in her head, she can find it for you in her voluminous files. Washington, you see, is her hobby.

When this slight, gray haired little lady came out of the colorful West a dozen years ago, she realized she knew little about the city which was to be her home. Forthwith Myrtle Murdock started intensive research on the history of the seat of government, dug her way through an amazing amount of material to give new light to little known facts.

Her first thought was "My friends back in Arizona should know something about the history of this city." So—she prepared in letter form a series of articles which were published in the Arizona Republic.

Out of these pieces for the paper grew a book, "Your Uncle Sam in Washington," its almost 200 pages bound in red, white and blue paper jacket, a treasure trove for historians, students, Capital visitors or new residents. Illustrated with photographs of outstanding buildings, the book takes you through the Capitol building, the White House, the Senate and the House, Supreme Court and the Library of Congress. It reveals obscure facts on the magnificent art which adorns the Capitol, frescoes and friezes by Italian-born Constantin Brumidi, who Mrs. Murdock discovered, lies in Glenwood Cemetery in an unmarked grave.

For the uninitiated there's a chapter on an official White House reception, how to proceed once you enter the mansion, what you'll see once you're there.

During her 12 years in Washington, Mrs. Murdock found time to take her doctorate in education at George Washington University, along with caring for three children and fulfilling the duties of a Congressman's wife.

The Murdocks lost a son in the war—young David who was killed in action in Sicily five years ago.

His "Dear Mom" letters have been printed in booklet form by his mother and "Remembering David" is a collection of letters written to his grief-stricken parents from hundreds of friends.

Two other children, now grown, now married, are Rachel, who is Mrs. George Ellis of Scottsdale,

It Looks Like a GOP President—For Congressional Club

By Genevieve Reynolds

DEMOCRATS landslided into the White House and Congress, but there's at least one strategic spot where a Republican may reign supreme. Unless there's a constitutional upset, a GOP lawmaker's wife will take over the presidency of the Congressional Club in January.

Five prominent Republican women were being talked about for the post, but one—Mrs. Charles Clason of Massachusetts — automatically was dropped from the race when her husband was defeated for a return engagement in the House of Representatives. Then there's a large boom for dynamic Betty Farrington, wife of the Hawaiian Delegate, to enter the race, but few think she will consider the post after taking over the national presidency of the Republican Women's League. Sure to be nominated for the office are Mrs. Lawrence Smith of Wisconsin; Mrs. Ralph Church of Illi-

Girl, 17, Entering College, Tells Mother She's Emancipated From Health Rules at Home And Nowadays Breakfasts on Coffee and Smoke

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My daughter Celia, 17, who has just entered college, vows that she is adult and that my health-rules no longer apply to her.

I am neither baffled nor surprised by this attitude, which I accept as a rather painful phase of her growth, and I feel that in time she will swing back to proper balance; but in the interim years, what of her health?

That question is no joke. It is acute, due to the fact that I have taken a girl her age into our home as a paying guest. This girl, I'll call her Dina, says matter of factly that she has been allowed to drink coffee since the age of two years. Hearing this, Celia feels restricted and wants to do as Dina does.

Consequently the two girls' breakfast consists nowadays of a cup of coffee each and a few minutes' relaxed exhaling of cigarette smoke. I seethe when I see them at breakfast, ignoring fruit or fruit juice, cereal and milk, just nibbling at toast, then feverishly lighting their cigarettes and sitting back with their coffee.

Paying Guest Gave Daughter New Ideas

OF COURSE my irritation shows in my face, even in the desperate tone of my voice, when I cite the health menace and urge them to drink their milk or at least their fruit juice. But no; they say, "Food makes us ill." And Dina especially emphasizes that if I force her to eat by my insistence, she feels nauseated all morning.

Celia is five feet six inches tall, weighs 130 pounds and until recently just glowed with health, having always been nourished on a steady diet of milk, vegtables, fruits, cereals and meat. She has been a vital happy girl, but what now?

On a diet of coffee and cigarettes for breakfast, how would she fare if exposed to any epidemic? And a few years hence will she be a good health risk for motherhood? Can you help me reason with her? Or do you think it's out of my hands and that I should stop worrying? The last is a foolish question, of course; for I can't be unconcerned unless somebody convinces me that these years of youth aren't important to an adult's health history.

F. L.

Nervous Stomach Isn't Glamorous

DEAR F. L.: Doubtless it's true that Dina feels nauseated if a normal breakfast is forced down her gullet; but the fact is nothing to brag about. To borrow a term from animal husbandry, it means she is seriously "off her feed."

Her addiction to coffee and cigarettes for breakfast, and no solid nourishment, is part of a vicious circle of "shot" nerves, which by her own admission has its origin in chronic malnourishment dating away back.

Unaccustomed to the exercise of digesting good food, Dina's sickly stomach quails from the very thought of it; so she is obliged to keep going on nervous enery for lack of daily adequate intake of basic energy-making fuel, and to "whip up" this unnatural exertion she relies on coffee; then turns to a cigarette to lessen her jitters,—the one being a stimulant, the other being a sedative.

All of which is more Dina's misfortune than her fault, of course, if family laxity betrayed her into bad hygiene practices from babyhood; but in view of Celia's better conditioning, she has little excuse for copying her.

Wan Diva Stuff Is Tragi-Comic

THE BREAKFAST tableau is tragi-comic, with Dina smugly advertising pathetic ignorance, projecting the defensive theory that it's more fetching to be a nervous wreck of sorts at 17 than a vital glowing beauty with an A-1 digestive tract; and with Celia, naively impressed by this "wan diva" stuff, blanking out her intelligence and playing the fool with her stomach, too.

Is the situation out of your hands? A doctor, discussing this topic with certain young persons some years ago, told them bluntly that after 16 years of age, they were directly accountable for their health and dietary habits, provided they'd been rightly taught before and had access to good nutrition.

In effect he said, if you elect to undermine constitutional vigor before its prime, by playing with false appetites for caffeine, nicotine or alcohol, neither parent nor doctor can prevent it; but while you exist you will never know full zest for living and the blame for it is on your head. So much for that.

Stop hammering at the girls. Give them this article to read and go relax. But if Dina's pert rude disregard of your wishes continues defiantly unfurled, I think you'd be justified in inviting her to make other guest-arrangements.

Free Love or Polygamy?

'Share-the-Man' Is Slogan Of Postwar Spinster Crop

By Alvin Steinkopf

London, Nov. 13 (AP).—The scientists who run the Marriage Society of Great Britain have just gone over a waiting list of almost 6,000 persons.

With a red pencil they crossed out the names of all women more than 30 years old. They won't get a husband through the society and the overwhelming probabilities are they will become old maids

"It may seem a brutal thing to have done," said Mayo Wingate, the psychologist of the team of specialists that manages the marriage society. "But these women have no chance, so what's the use. This is a scientific business."

For a time, at least, the organization which mates human beings scientifically has closed the door to the woman over 30. There are exceptions of course, and the over-30 girl may find a husband. But the mathematical chances in Britain are so small that the busy society has ceased trying.

"It is an appalling thought," said Wingate. "But there is the situation—and we are here to look the facts in the face."

The society, a non-profit organization with the highest professional backing, has just finished a survey which indicates that the proportion of persons in United Kingdom seriously wishing to get married is 100 men to 114 women.

"Those 14 extra women are hard to handle, and they present a social problem which is simply beyond us," said Wingate.

"We can't, of course, entertain such frivolous solutions as legalized polygamy, but it has

By George Boultwood

Hamburg, Germany, Nov. 13 (AP).—About two million women in the British zone of Germany have no hope of getting married.

In an official public opinion poll by the British military government, one third of the people questioned said they would not disapprove if these women had affairs outside wedlock.

The military government's public opinion research organization explored the possibility of polygamy being practiced again. Over 500 people were questioned in Hamburg and the neighboring country district of Schleswig-Holstein.

In Hamburg, 13 per cent of those questioned said they expected polygamy to spread. In Schleswig-Holstein the percentage was 14. But the great majority disapproved of it.

To the question: "Would you tolerate polygamy?" only 2 per cent in Schleswig-Holstein and 8 per cent in Hamburg answered "Yes." In Hamburg the age group 31-44 showed themselves most willing to tolerate polygamous unions.

The city people gave these reasons for tolerance: to propagate humanity; to overcome economic difficulties of spinsters; sympathy for other women; to avoid forcing men into being liars and because "polygamy is more natural under the circumstances."

Nearly 30 per cent in both town and country said they saw no moral reason against free love for the unmarried.

Diplomatic Circling

By Elizabeth Maguire

HOLIDAY preparations and election reactions have caused a pause in diplomatic diversions. Except for the Russian celebration on Sunday, parties have been on a smaller scale, and for the coming week churches are busier with bazaars than embassies are with receptions.

Predictions have gotten diplomats into a predicament. One ambassador gloomily confided he expected to be recalled momentarily because he had assured his government of a Republican landslide. "They haven't a chance," he cabled about the Democrats.

JESSICA DRAGONETTE, famed soprano, will be decorated today with the Ruban of Isobella the Catholic at the Spanish Embassy. Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, is coming down for the ceremony. Other guests will include representatives of the cultural department of the State Department and members of the embassy staff.

GOLFING IS STILL in full swing at the Chevy Chase Club. In the recent women's championship, Mrs. Hume Wrong, wife of the Canadian Ambassador, was runner-up, with Mrs. Hugh Nicolson the champion. Mrs. Wrong is giving a luncheon for some of the women golfers at the embassy on Tuesday the 23d.

Rather than golf, pretty Senora de Heurtematte, wife of the Panamanian Commercial Counselor, sticks to ballet for exercise. "In Panama I teach," she says, "but in Washington I take lessons."

She is a real enthusiast about the dance. A branch school of the Washington School of Ballet has already been set up in Panama by Senora de Heurtematte, and in January, she is leaving for Costa Rica and Guatemala to establish branch schools there. Students of the schools are exchanged.

A BENEFIT BALLET, "Hansel and Grettel," will be presented by the Washington School of Ballet at the Lisner Auditorium some time during the holidays. Proceeds will aid crippled children in Washington. Mrs. Robert Guggenheim and Senora de Heurtematte are working together on the benefit.

THE CHARGE D'AFFAIRES OF LEBANON, George Hakim, will be host at a reception on Monday, November 22, to celebrate Lebanon's Independence Day. Before her independence was gained four years ago, the country of Lebanon was Mandate A of the League of Nations.

Spaghetti Supper To Benefit St. Paul's Building Fund

A delicious spaghetti supper will be served Monday evening by the Young People's organization of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Mr. Robert W. Smith is in charge of arrangements and the supper will begin at 6 and continue to 8 o'clock in the rooms of the new church on K st. between 24th and 25th sts. nw. The building fund for the new church will be the beneficiary.

St. Paul's Church for more than 80 years stood on 23d st. just South of Washington Circle and was torn down to make way for the new George Washington University Hospital. During the four years of building the new church, services were held in St. Thomas' Church and the parish moved into its Gothic building the latter part of June.

The building fund also will be the beneficiary of the annual bazaar which will be held Saturday, November 20, also in the rooms of the new church. Both events will give ample opportunity to view the new church and chapel.

The Service Set

By Norma Lanum

BRIG. GEN. and Mrs. B. M. Hovey will be leaving Bolling Air Base soon and all indications point to a transfer to a South American diplomatic post for Bolling's popular commanding officer.

At any rate, the Hoveys have started packing. They plan to get away shortly before Christmas and spend the holidays in San Antonio with Mrs. Hovey's mother, Mrs. Mary E. Wilson. From there they will move on to their new assignment.

General Hovey, who enlisted in the Air Force as a private in 1923, has been very well liked by his staff, and his wife has served as president of the Air Force Officers' Wives' Club.

FOOTBALL GAMES always draw several service families away from Washington these autumn weekends. Among those who went up to Philadelphia for the Army-Penn game yesterday were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Samuel D. Sturgis, jr., who were the guests of Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, superintendent of West Point, and Mrs. Taylor.

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. E. C. B. Danforth will leave Thursday for a few days in New York and Boston. The main purpose of their short trip will be to see Harvard, the general's alma mater, and Yale in their annual pigskin contest on Saturday.

Already painstaking preparations are being made among the military group for the Army-Navy game on Thanksgiving week-end. Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Willard A. Holbrook and Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Charles P. Hall will entertain several Sweet Briar classmates of their daughters, Misses Joanne Holbrook and Gail Hall, that weekend. Then the girls will go up to the game together on the Army-Navy special train.

United Nations Club Ball To Celebrate 7th Anniversary

Plans are being completed for the United Nations Club seventh anniversary benefit ball, which is scheduled for Friday, December 3, at 8:30 p. m. in the Presidential and Congressional rooms of the Statler Hotel.

Miss Meredith Howard, president of the club, has arrived in Washington from California to appoint chairmen for the various committees, and Miss Suzanne Rosenberg, one of the founders of the club, has come down from New York for the weekend to help with arrangements. Miss Rosenberg, a resident of Washington since the early war years, will spend this winter in New York with frequent trips to the Capital.

Attorney General Tom Clark will be honorary chairman of the United Nations Club Ball, which will benefit CARE food package service for needy Europeans. John Reilley is treasurer of the benefit, with Mrs. John Allan Dougherty as patron chairman.

Mrs. Roy St. Lewis, assisted by Mrs. Thad Brown, jr., is chairman of the ticket committee, and publicity chairman is Mrs. Harold B. Hinton. Carter Barron is chairman of the arrangements committee.

The United Nations Club benefit ball will present, as in former years, the United Nations pageant and the massing of the colors and will be climaxed by the crowning of "Miss United Nations of 1949," who will be chosen from among the youth and beauty of Washington's Diplomatic Corps. It will be remembered that the beauties titled "Miss United Nations of 1948" and "Miss United Nations of 1947" were, respectively, Nora Martins, daughter of the recent dean of the Diplomatic Corp, and Marjorie Morgenstierne, daughter of the present dean of the corps.

The United States Army Air Forces Band, under the direction of Maj. George Howard, will furnish music for the pageant and John Harkrider, the New York and Hollywood director, will come to Washington a week in advance of the ball to contribute his services in staging the pageant.

Lounge Costumes for Holidays at Home Are Elegantly Simple

Gentle Christmas Hint To Good Old St. Nick

By Peggy Preston

DARLING ST. NICK: I hope you will forgive me for this crass reminder—but Christmas is just around the corner. It may have slipped your mind, you know, and this little note is merely meant to be helpful. However, if you want to take it "hintful," I won't object.

Any day now you will begin twisting your whiskers and puzzling your cute ole head over what to give me for a present. So, in order to spare all that wear and tear on your nervous system, I've decided to write you early and let you in on a few little gift items that are especially dear to my heart. I'd gladly barter my left eyebrow for any one of them. And I might say right here, Dear Santa, that unless one or another of these ideas materialize into a present under my tree on December 25, I will melt away from disappointment. I will, in fact, never write you again.

KNOWING THE PRACTICAL side of your nature, I am not relying on mere words to get my ideas across. Jean Spadea, The Washington Post's talented fashion artist, pitched in beautifully and sketched the five figures on this page, which we humbly submit for your consideration.

These sketches have to do with my notion of how I want my "indoor" wardrobe to look. Being an old-fashioned guy, you probably call such garments housecoats, hostess gowns, bathrobes or negligees. We moderns refer to them as "lounge costumes." We're eternal optimists.

But the name matters not one whit. They will always remain articles of attire that spell luxury and security, that smack of happy, graceful living. They are the little things that give a girl a lift when they are a gift. To buy them ourselves destroys half their value. For these are the intimate tokens we want from someone who loves us very much. So please pass the word along, will you, Santa? See that it reaches the right sources—quick-like, before all the pretty ones are gone.

Take, for instance, the glamour-packed ensemble (A) at the left. I like to picture myself looking like that on Christmas morning—serving coffee to my family, presenting the while a picture of studied elegance and grace.

Or take Sketch B at the right—It is Christmas night, and relatives and friends have gathered close to celebrate a happy holiday. And there am I in a lustrous black velvet hostess gown. At the Empire neckline and low cuffs are gathered taffeta in tones of pink or blue—precious tones for a woman's complexion. Then, flowing from the waist at back—pieces of wispy net or black point d'esprit. Devastating, that's what it is.

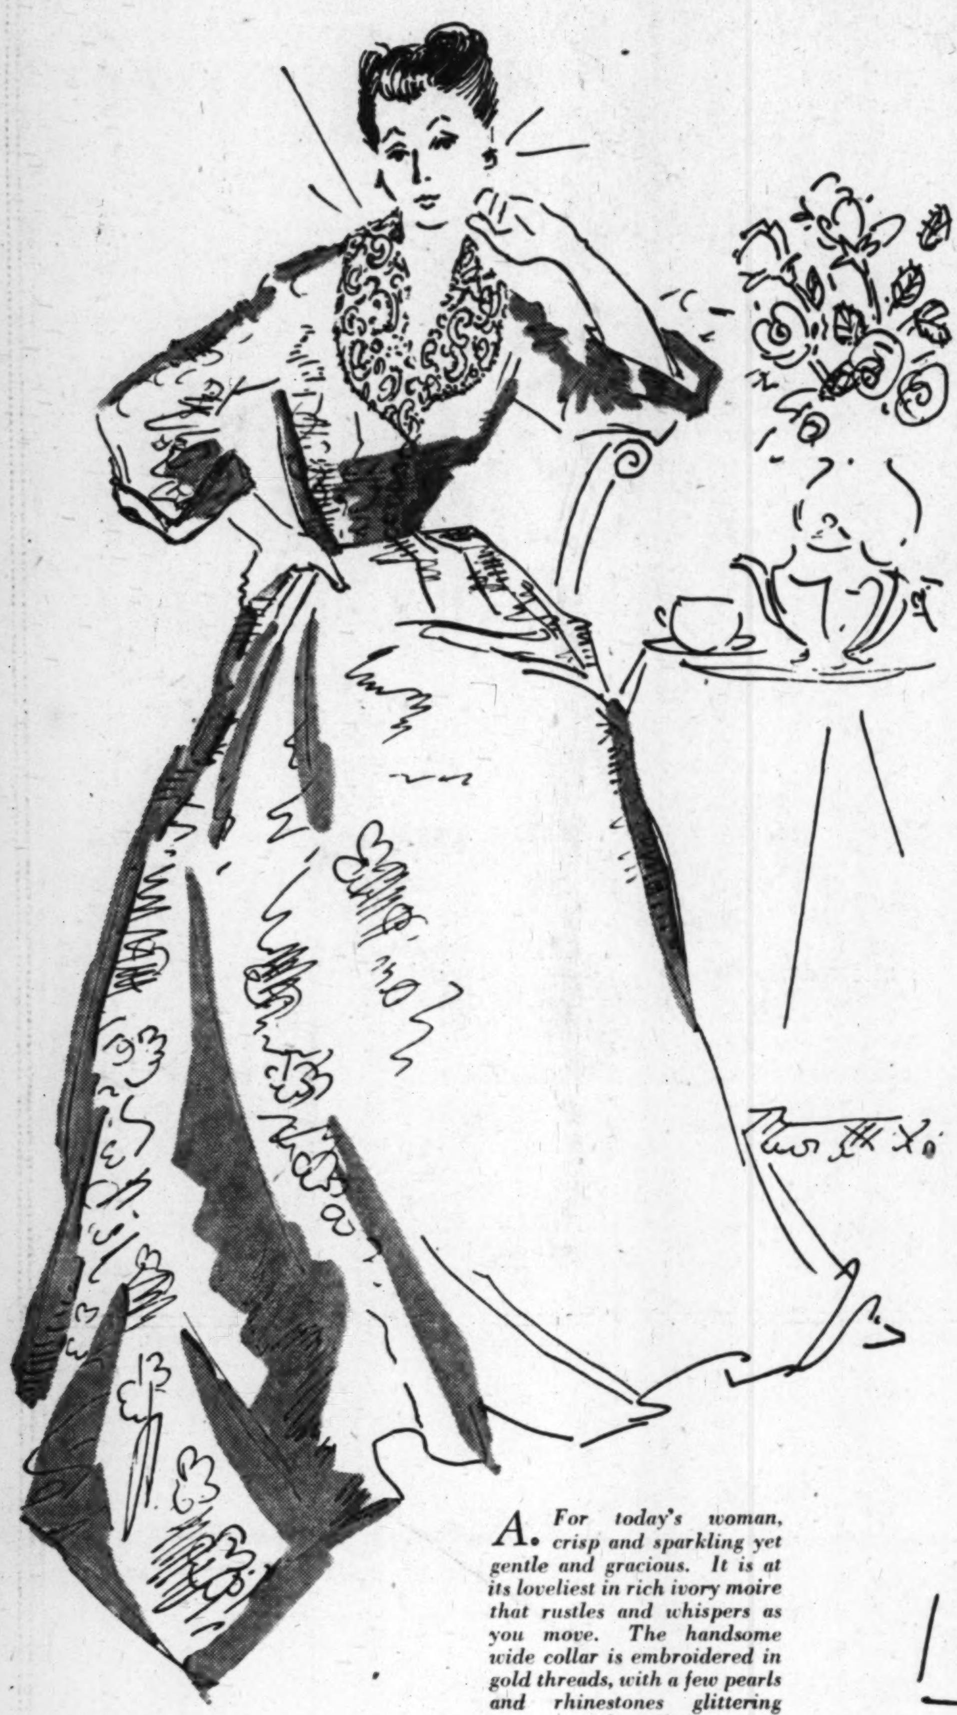
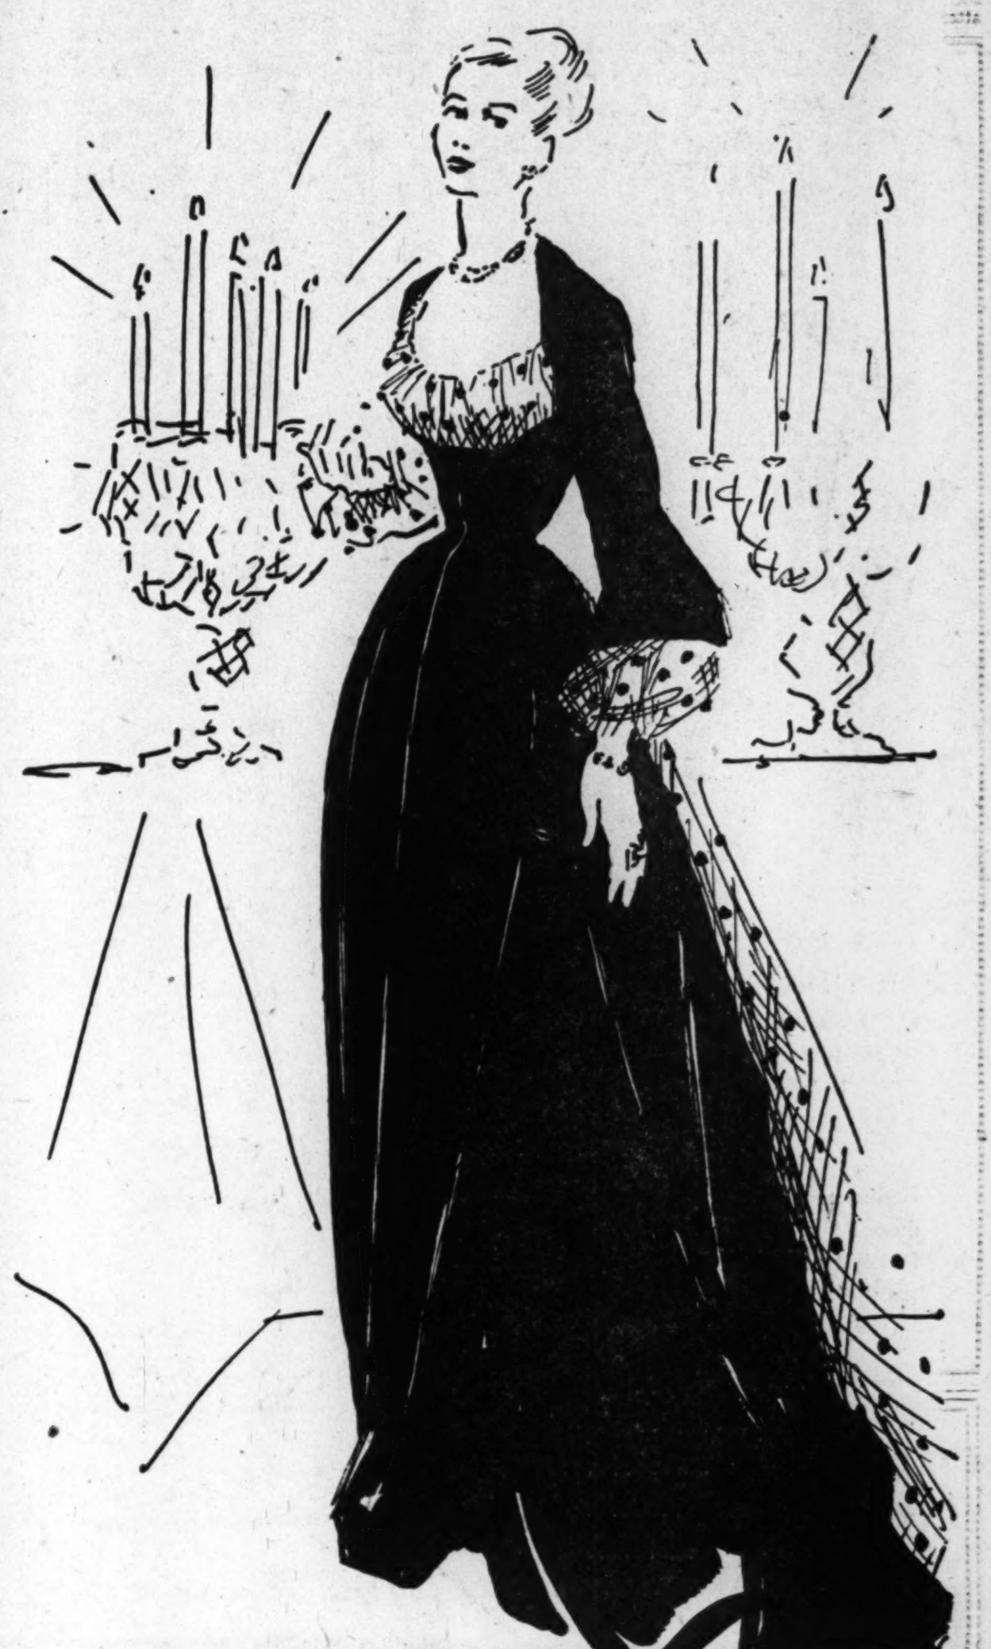
THAT'S THE STORY, Santa. Think the boys will get the point?

With grateful greetings of the season, we remain,

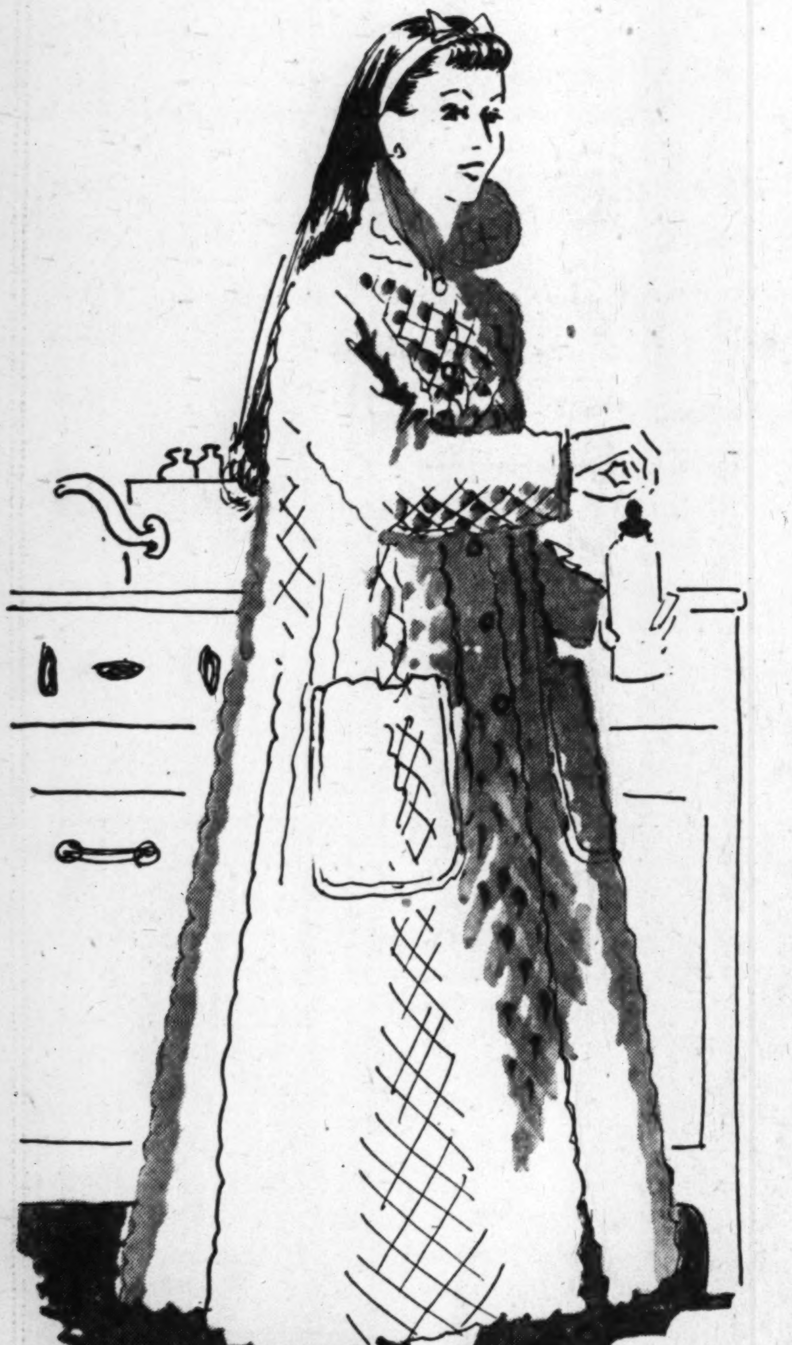
THE WOMEN.



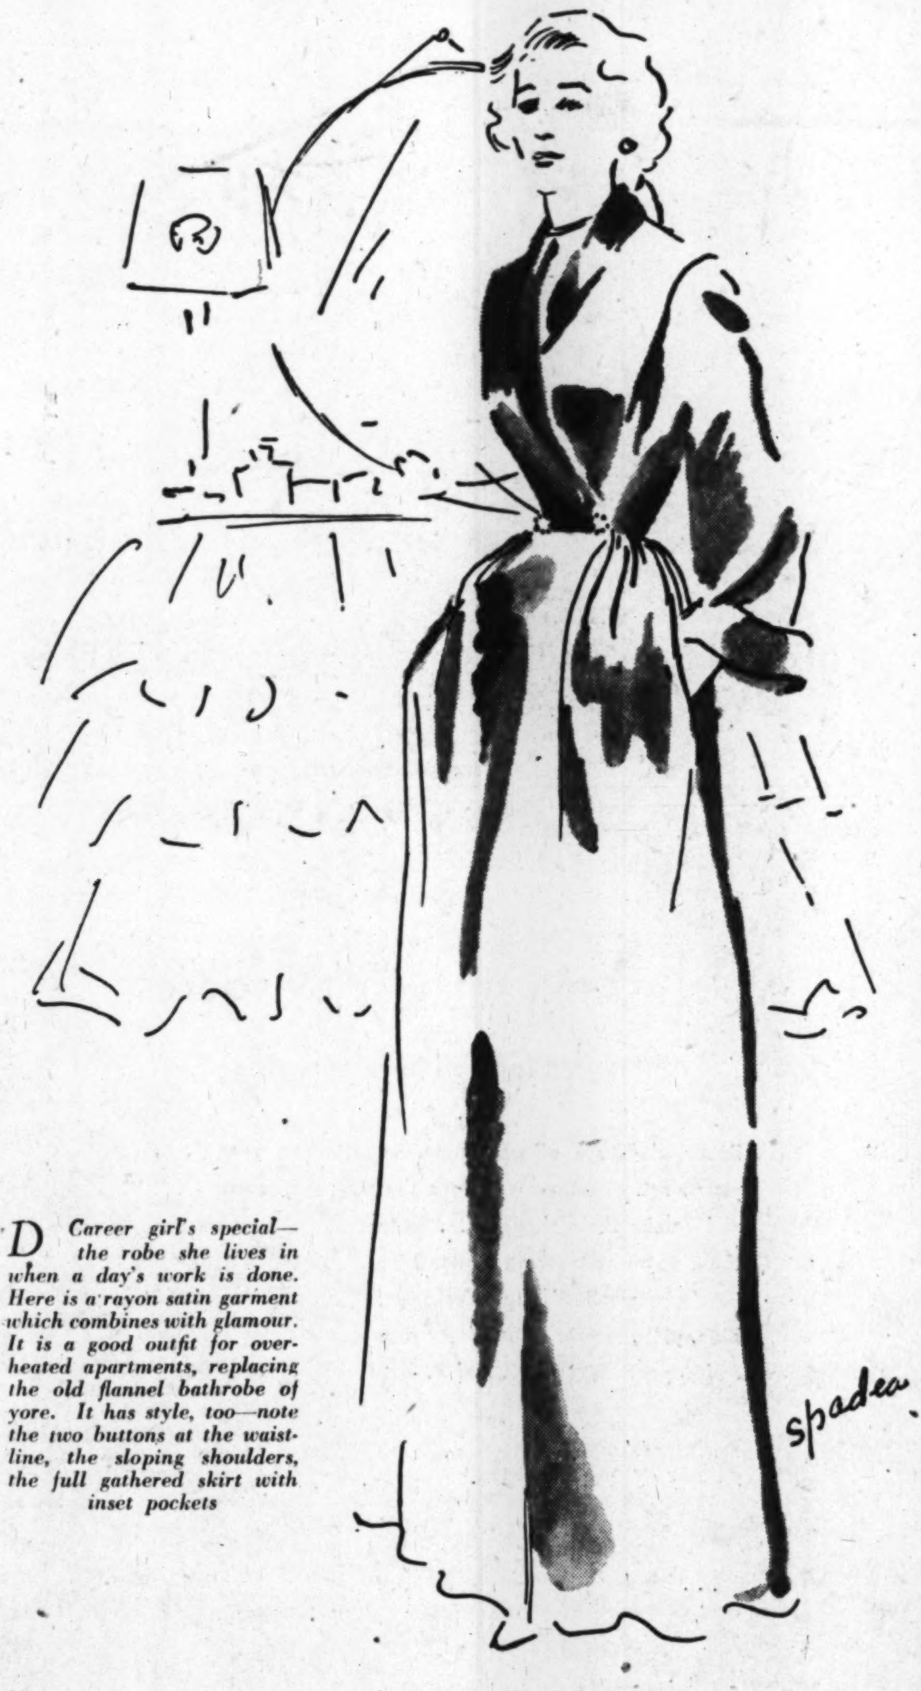
A. For today's woman, crisp and sparkling yet gentle and gracious. It is at its loveliest in rich ivory moire that rustles and whispers as you move. The handsome wide collar is embroidered in gold threads, with a few pearls and rhinestones glittering through



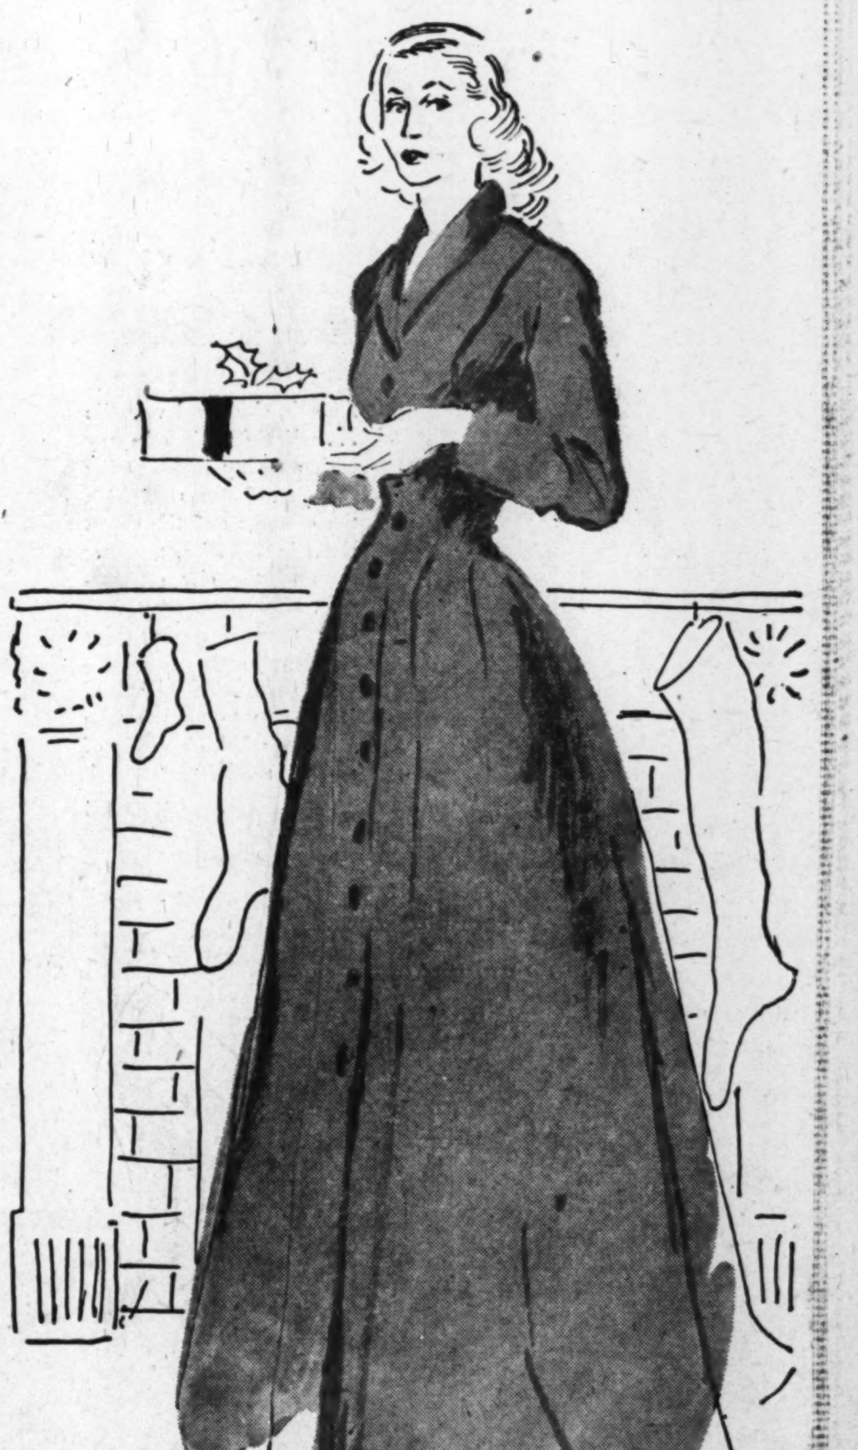
B For an informal evening at home or a festive holiday—black velvet with pastel taffeta at neck and sleeves



C Those 2 o'clock feedings — they are the things that try women's souls. But they could be made less arduous, couldn't they?—in a pale blue quilted rayon taffeta robe, cut with a swagger and dash, three quarter length, huge pockets and stand-up "Napoleonic" collar



D Career girl's special—the robe she lives in when a day's work is done. Here is a rayon satin garment which combines with glamour. It is a good outfit for overheated apartments, replacing the old flannel bathrobe of yore. It has style, too—note the two buttons at the waistline, the sloping shoulders, the full gathered skirt with inset pockets



E An ultra-practical garment fashioned of sheer wool, warm, winsome and wearable. Have it in any color you like, but how about a glowing, golden yellow, bright with the New Year's hopes and cheer make sure that her daughter had a hot lunch each school day, Mrs. Truman remained at home, seldom attended such cheery semiofficial get-togethers as the Senate ladies luncheon club.

Time For Real Inaugural

She Prefers Behind-Scenes Role

THOUGH SHE didn't make many intimate friends, Mrs. Truman set her clear, logical mind to helping her husband. He never made a speech without first rehearsing it before her. She became a shrewd analyst of people and politics, remained where she wanted to be—behind the scenes. In October, for instance, when the Trumans returned from a campaign trip, she noticed the cameramen, assigned to "shoot" their homecoming parade, were aiming their machines only where the crowds were thinnest. She commented on the crowds of people who had flocked to the campaign train. "The newspapers must be very wrong," she said, "they said only 3000 turned up in Elkton—but it looked like at least 25,000 to me."

She found the crowds immensely stimulating, campaigning thrilling. Mrs. Truman explained to friends "she had not wanted her husband to run again, had begged him not to. But finally she relented. Harry is so sure he is right, so sure that the people will know he is right, that I hope he wins!"

Personally, she has no hobbies, collects no special gimcracks, doesn't go in for sports—though she used to be good at tennis—shops around for her clothes, buying many back home in Chasenoff's department store. She has a strong handshake and has greeted so many people that her right hand is actually larger than her left. Mrs. Truman, incidentally, would rather shake hands with 500 men than 200 women. The reason? Women, meeting the First Lady, are more enthusiastic than men. She can remain on a receiving line for hours without tiring—because her feet are even stronger than her hands!

She is punctual to the dot and once involved in a cause, a most faithful worker. One of the First Lady's philanthropies is the P. E. O., a secret society with some 90,000 women members.

Old Friends Remembered

LIKE HER HUSBAND she is determinedly loyal to old friends. One of her intimates is Rachael Whalen, a buyer at Chasenoff's department store. Leaving for New York after a stay with the Trumans, the White House made her hotel reservation. The desk clerk, giving Rachel the onceover, sniffed when she asked for her room, mentioning the officially made reservation—then nearly fell flat on his face. Mrs. Truman does all sorts of small thoughtful things which are seldom publicized. Reading in the papers that the daughter of an acquaintance was in town for only a few days, she invited the young woman for a special tour of the White House. At luncheons given for Senate wives—they're no longer lined up in advance according to rank—but received as informally as though Mrs. Truman was in her own home—which, indeed, she is! Then, too, she turns up at charity sales with small gifts—showing she has really thought about being kind. An example is her contribution of a doll to the Thrift Shop sale to be held November 30.

Collecting Capital Facts

Ariz., and John, who served as a lieutenant colonel in the Air Force and also lives in Arizona.

A NEW DEBUTANTE added to this year's crop is Miss Julia Ann Halloran, daughter of Comdr. and Mrs. Edward R. Halloran, who's a senior at George Washington and a former student at St. Agnes School. The debutante will make her bow on December 29 at a tea-dance at the United Nations Club.

TOWN TOPICS: Daily double delighting the matchmakers is Dorothy Perkins Rogers and Lyle O'Rourke. The tall, dark and handsome local lawyer is spending all possible spare time in New York, to see the lovely Mrs. Rogers, former wife of John Bond Rogers, who was once engaged to our glamour girl, Peggy Townsend. Peggy deserted to marry Pete Vogel, and now she's Mrs. Gould Shaw.

A delicious story going the rounds in New York, concerns the plight of Mrs. Noel Macy a guest at the National Horse Show at Madison Square. I don't vouch for its accuracy, but THEY do say that the chic Mrs. Macy dropped a petticoat right in the lap of Frederick Hammer as she was about to leave her box. With great aplomb she reached down, gathered the filmy bit of femininity in her hand and cooed: "What an original way to meet nice people; I must try it again some time."

GOP Woman Is Slated for President

nois and Mrs. Hal Holmes of Washington.

INCIDENTALLY, the Congressional Club is the only organization known to this department that elects its officers in January. And there's a good reason, too. If voted into club office earlier, madame president, might find that her husband had been balloted out of the House or Senate by his constituents long before she's ready to take over her new duties. Hence the wives of the Nation's lawmakers, familiar with the fickle, precariousness of politics, choose their new leader only after all the returns are counted.

Rotation between Democrats and Republicans for presidents is the technique employed by the club members. For example, Mrs. Harold Burton, wife of the Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, preceded Carrie Davis. Selma Burton is a GOP and Carrie, a Volunteer State Democrat. Carrie took office during a predominantly GOP Congress, and some GOP feminine leader will do her stint surrounded mostly by Democrats. Well, that is, unless the Congressional Club upsets its long time tradition.

CHIC, handsome Mrs. Church, who is spoken of for president, came to Washington in 1934 when her husband was elected to the Seventy-fourth Congress on the GOP ticket. From time to time she has held various offices in the exclusive Congressional Club—composed of wives of the Nation's lawmakers—and for the past couple of years taught the club's speech class. Ella Church, an able talker and campaigner, was one of the first around town to impress upon her Congressional sisters that they could do some effective speaking-up for their spouses amongst women's groups if not on campaign stumps.

Talented as well as erudite, Mrs. Church now heads the Wellesley College national committee in the 75-million-dollar drive.

WORLD-TRAVELED Mrs. Hal Holmes has been an integral part of the social and educational as well as congressional circles since she came to the Nation's Capital when her husband was first elected to the House in 1942. The former Margaret Coffin and Hal Holmes are both Phi Beta Kappas and college deans. In fact, the romance between the two budded and blossomed when he was serving as dean of men, and she dean of women in one of the State colleges.

Friendly, intellectual Mrs. Holmes has none of the vagueness of manner often associated with the scholar, of which she definitely is one. Possessor of a delectable sense of humor, the feminist once declared that 100 years ago the three elemental R's for women were readin', religion and respectability. But the four R's of womanhood today as she sees it are responsibility for citizenship, realms of gold (advancement into higher educational circles), ready money, and en rapport with the world.

HOLDING down the presidency of an important national organization would be no novelty to capable Mrs. Lawrence Smith, wife of the Wisconsin Representative. She recently polished off a term with honors as head of the American Legion Auxiliary.

Man Shortage

been proposed by some rather serious thinkers."

The society is only indirectly concerned with the problem of excess women. Its principal function is to make a success of the marriages it arranges on a scientific basis.

To the calculating specialists of the society love and romance are charming incidental music, which, however, have little to do with influencing the success or failure of a marriage. The specialists like to see love blooming, but only after a psychologist, an anthropologist, a surgeon and a hard-headed man of affairs who knows about economics and the housing shortage, have decided that basic factors which make a couple congenial all point to probable success.

★ ONE MORE NOTE this week on the "return to elegance" we talked about last Sunday. Top Recker nominates a most elegant candidate: pure silk brocade we are now showing . . . for draperies or upholstering. It comes in gold, eggshell, crimson, almond and a pinkish rose. $13.75 a yard.

★ COTTON DESIGNERS are sending us so many exciting ideas this year that we find it hard to decide which to write about first. What's more, most of the price tags are surprisingly modest.

★ FOR INSTANCE, our "Bird Cage and Peacock," a $2-a-yard cotton for draperies or slipcovers. Imagine a white-gray-pink display on a jet black background. It's intricately designed, has a lot of zest, and will go pleasantly with your Colonial things. Three other color combinations in warm greens, browns and yellows.

★ HAND-PRINT COTTON (apples, leaves and blossoms) with a real "folk" feeling. One color combination you may like from this group is a deep, honest chrome green with touches of walnut brown—on a sand background. More about cottons (and some new linens) next week.

★ TOP RECKER makes quite a few slipcovers all year 'round. Here are some good reasons: you may want to paint or paper a room, and brighten up furniture pieces, too. Slipcovers are of course a good solution—and with the mills humming with inspiration and production, your choice of weaves, textures, colors and designs is practically endless. And if you have climbing, hopping, jumping children, slipcovers make practical furniture-savers. Incidentally, we believe we have one of the canniest slipcover cutters in these parts.

About Recipe for Stuffed Cabbage

I would appreciate if you could help me locate a recipe for a Hungarian dish called Stuffed Cabbage. The cabbage is stuffed with meat and has a sweet and sour taste. A. C.

A stuffed cabbage recipe follows, although I am rather dubious about about this being the one you have in mind. Perhaps some reader who specializes in Hungarian cookery will be kind enough to provide a Hungarian recipe for this dish.

STUFFED CABBAGE

1 head cabbage
1 pound lamb, minced
2 onions, chopped
1 cup uncooked rice
3 to 4 tomatoes, sliced
½ cup water
Meat stock

Cook cabbage until tender. Drain and carefully separate leaves from stem end. Combine lamb, onions, rice, salt and pepper, and mix well. On each cabbage leaf, place 1 tablespoon of meat mixture. Roll leaf over filling and turn ends under so as to secure each roll. Place filled leaves in greased pan, add tomatoes, water and sufficient stock to half cover rolls. Cook in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) and about 1 hour or until rice is tender. This recipe serves six persons.

Can you tell me of any stores in Washington that sell the Aubrey pattern of Noritake china. Also, the Normandy pattern of Czechoslovakia china? E. A. J.

A local department store carries Noritake china, but it is in postwar patterns, identified by number only. It seems that little, if any, Noritake china in prewar patterns is now coming in. Little Czechoslovakian china is reaching this country either, I am told. I haven't been able to locate anyone with the Normandy pattern in stock. Any suggestions, readers?

To L. B., who asked about the picture "Philosopher's Son". This painting, by the artist Henry Major, was used on a calendar several years ago by the Brown and Bigelow advertising firm in St. Paul, Minn. If she wrote this company, I'm sure she could obtain any information she wants about the painting. Possibly they would send her a print of it. This week's Saturday Evening Post carries an article about Henry Major, who also painted the more famous picture "The Gay Philosopher." H. G. C.

Recently, the movie star, Turhan Bey, appeared on the radio program "We, the People". His offering that evening was "Wisdom of the Prophets". Do you or any of your readers know who wrote it? R. J. E.

Can you help on this, readers?

I have an old oil portrait, painted on wood which hangs over a fireplace on an outside wall of cement and hollow tile. More and more mold appears on the picture and it is harming the paint. What can be done to get the mold off and prevent further molding? W. E. S.

Several weeks ago we discussed in this column the problems involved when an amateur attempts the cleaning and restoration of an oil painting. Because so many different kinds of oils, binders, and foundations are used for oil paintings, to safely clean and restore them requires expert skill. Therefore, I would suggest you enlist the aid of a professional restorer to remove the mold. However, until you have it restored I would urge you to move it from the wall where it now hangs as it is obviously absorbing moisture from the cement wall.

IF YOU KNOW YOUR BEEF GRADES, you can serve the family a succulent pot roast like this without giving the budget a beating. The meat is "utility" grade, comes from grass-fed beef, and has fine flavor, though it takes longer cooking than fancier corn-fed beef.

Here are directions for preparing a 4-to-6-pound utility beef pot roast: Season meat with salt and pepper. Sprinkle with flour and rub in well. Brown slowly on all sides in a little hot fat in a heavy pan. Cover with chopped onions (four medium-sized ones). Add ¼ cup water. Cover tightly and cook over low heat at simmering temperature for 3 to 4 hours or until meat is tender.

Helpful Hints for the Housekeeper

A little starch in the final rinse water will give a dainty stiffness to lacy frills.

Felt and velvet hats should be brushed well before each wearing to get real service out of them and to have them look attractive.

Look over the wire bed springs occasionally to be sure there are no loose wires that are apt to tear good bedding. Any suspicious ones may be taped with strips of adhesive tape.

A grapefruit knife is an excellent article to use when removing obstinate olives or pickles from a tightly packed jar. The curved blade will slide under the object and pull it up without breaking or marring it in any way.

Homogenized Milk

Homogenized milk is more easily and more quickly digested because of the small curds formed during digestion. Moreover, homogenized milk is a more uniform product from which everyone derives the full nutrients found in milk.

Expanding Corset Industry Tugs With Fitting Problems

By Sam Dawson

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—The foundation garment industry is expanding these days although doing its best to curb inflation.

This year it anticipates a $400 million business, to use a nice round figure. The Corset and Brassiere Association of America says this will be an uplift of 6 million dollars over last year.

As for next year, the consensus of 94 manufacturers showing their spring styles at the annual opening here today is that the outlook is very encouraging. They have some new twists to the fundamental problem.

Industry spokesmen say they finally have convinced most women that a good foundation is a health and comfort necessity and no longer just a luxury.

But competition definitely is growing, and so some companies are starting a two-way drive of their own:

To teach the ladies how to wear these garments—"don't lean against the bones in the girdle like a picket fence."

To school the fitters in how to get customers into the items—and, even more important, how to get them out again.

Industry members still blush when they recall the time a noted radio star, after a breathless broadcast, had to be cut loose from her foundation. Not to mention the uncounted ladies who spent the night in garments from which they could not squirm free.

So they're running schools to deal with the fair sex's number one problem. A visit to one certainly is a revelation.

The instructor at the school for salesladies from the corset shops which Warner Brothers Company of Bridgeport, Conn., conducts here, says women approach a foundation garment fitter with the same mystical trust with which they hand themselves over to a doctor.

All fitters in stores are women and industry spokesmen see little chance of this changing. Rosie may become a riveter, but Charlie can't become a corsetier.

The instructor tells the 28 women pupils and one male visitor to the class: "Always fit the fullest part—the waist, hip or bust. Don't fit too tight. Let the customer bend."

Then she tells you how to ease a lady into her harness. "Back up to her back. To get a good leverage, relax the knees, grasp the rear edge of the garment and give it a good sure pull."

This keeps the garment from climbing up when the customer sits. Subconsciously the instructor gives her own foundation a surreptitious downward yank—the great American gesture.

She then cautions her pupils against another great hazard in the business—letting the customer get pinched.

"Run the fastener up and down a few times to see that it works before you trust her with it. And see that the zipper doesn't ride the hip bone."

At this point some models display the latest creations—both looking very attractive, indeed. Some have a diagonal stretch in the leno, or elastic portion. Others have a three-inch stay-up top, under which the instructor could tuck away quite a roll of flesh.

Some have a free-lift bra. The instructor says this caused as great a commotion in the foundation garment industry as the introduction of fluid drive in the auto industry. This is a one-piece garment which permits deep breathing, strong emotion or other chest-heaving, without an accompanying tug on the stockings attached to the other end.

Foundation garments were short in supply right after the war. Some companies had been making parachutes. Elastic and other materials were scarce. All that is happily past. At the corset show they tell you they're back on a ready delivery basis. Prices are higher, but the supply of medium-priced garments is once more ample.

One company knows of at least one male customer for its products. A house painter buys their corselette, a one-piece item. He prizes the support it gives his back.

The Jantzel Knitting Mills announce what it believes to be "the first molded seamless brassiere cup," made of avisco vinyon resin yarn. The company says the new bra is quick drying and won't chafe sensitive skins.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Mystery Bag

The Mystery bag is an after-dinner pastime that can be fun for the whole family. It probably won't be something that you will want to keep up very long, but it will be fun now and then.

Into a cloth, or a paper bag, drop a variety of small objects that aren't too easily identified by touch. Then give each member of the family a number of chances to reach in, feel an object and try to decide what it is. No one should name the thing he thinks he has identified, but should write it down so that no one else can get a clue.

For the younger children you will want to have some easily identifiable things, such as a jackstone, a small rubber ball, celluloid doll, or anything that won't be hard to guess.

Less Work for Mother

About 10 minutes before the small visitor is to go home it is well to stop all play and make the children clean up their playthings together. There is bound to be resentment if it is all left for your child to do after her guest has gone, and the thrill of play is over. Far better to stop in time to let them work together, then it is all part of the play.

Keeps Them Firm

When hanging a line for the purpose of airing clothes, tie loops every 18 inches and hook the hangers through these. The loops will prevent the hangers slipping from the lines.

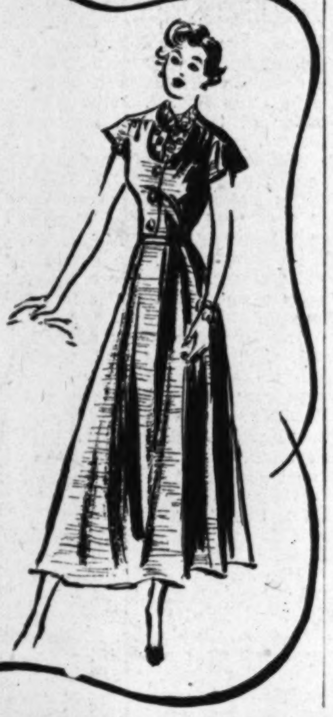
Improving the Flavor

Try adding a little onion to kale when cooking it; serve with butter or margarine or with a well-seasoned cream sauce.

Minced parsley improves the flavor of coleslaw; add a generous amount to the salad before folding in dressing. Thinly shredded green pepper also makes an excellent addition. Both parsley and green pepper add good amounts of vitamin A to the slaw.

Serve green snap beans in a cream sauce occasionally. For extra flavor add grated yellow cheese to the sauce.

THE Maternity SHOP



The gaiety of holiday festivities is captured in this demurely fashionable black faille jumper-effect dress with its bright little sprigged dicky. Expandable waist takes you smartly-smoothly through this time of your life. Misses' sizes.

Congressman-Broker Sees 1949 Sales Boom

By Conrad P. Harness

THE NATION'S ONLY combination Congressman-broker took a look in his crystal ball yesterday and predicted that next year would be a banner one for business. Smart real estate men, he indicated, will be using gold-plated tooth picks as property sales increase.

Victor Wickersham, head of a large real estate firm here at 4625 41st st. nw., and a Representative from Oklahoma's Seventh District, said the brokerage business is booming.

"This office has sold more than $100,000 worth of new homes in the past two days, including a $28,500 residence in Rock Creek Knolls to newly elected Senator Russell B. Long (D., La.), son of the late Senator Huey P. Long. We plan to hire four more salesmen to take care of the increased business."

"People are optimistic. They feel more secure and they're taking action on housing plans held in abeyance pending the election outcome," he added. "Older homes would sell much faster if owners would only realize that most asking prices are too high. They need to be reduced from 10 to 15 per cent to sell on today's market."

The newly elected Representative, who opened his real estate office here after a defeat in the 1946 primaries in Oklahoma, pointed out several reasons why he thought the new year would see better business conditions over the Nation, and especially in the District area. Highlights include:

An expected Federal pay raise.

A four-year tenure assured employes with patronage jobs.

Influx of new Congressmen, plus 1500 new Capitol employes and families, office personnel for congressional winners, etc.

Additions to the Diplomatic Corps as Washington assumes a larger role in world affairs.

Increased wages in several industries.

Creation of new Federal agencies.

National Outlook

NATIONALLY, Wickersham continued, the following would have a favorable effect on business conditions:

An estimated 500 million dollars to veterans in six States for bonuses.

Added expenditures to carry on the "cold war," build more planes, ships and other defense items.

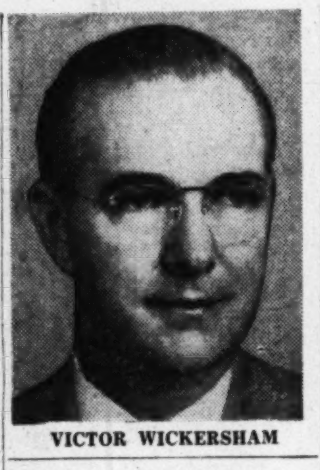
More aid to China to keep it from going Communistic.

Increased farm price supports.

Huge expenditures by the Public Works Agency for highways, reclamation projects, sewer systems, slum clearance, etc.

In a discussion of the housing market, Wickersham declared the tight mortgage situation seemed to loosen up in the last month. Lenders, he said, are more lenient as to the amount of loans. Most, however, still require that veterans make a weekly salary equal to one and one fifth the amount of their monthly payment. Thus, if a veteran makes $78 weekly, most banks will lend up to an amount which is to be repaid at $65 per month.

On the matter of the lack of lenders who lend money at 4 per cent under the GI bill, Wickersham said the GI bill loan provisions should be extended from the present maximum of 25 to 33 years. He also favored legislation liberalizing the provision of the Housing Act of 1948 regarding secondary mortgages. He wants the Government to buy more mortgages, giving banks added funds to finance more home purchases.



VICTOR WICKERSHAM

THE CONGRESSMAN said he had not yet made up his mind how he would vote on any proposal for extension of rent control to March 31, 1950, or public housing measures.

"Public housing is a very complex problem," he declared. "Perhaps one answer would be increased incentives to private enterprise to encourage more construction of low-rent apartments. Incentives in the Housing Act of 1948 are not enough."

"Rent control," he added, "undoubtedly scares capital from investing in new apartment construction and stimulates sales of rental units bringing in low returns based on today's high costs. However, here again is a case where increased incentives to builders in the form of taxes and other measures would probably attract investment capital."

He had definite ideas on what the average buyer is looking for today in a new home. "People lean toward individualism in housing. They want something different from their neighbor. Ramblers are very popular. People are tired of climbing steps. They want comfort, too. Attached garages, automatic heating controls, kitchens with labor-saving devices—prospective buyers look for all of these things. And they now bargain with builders instead of jumping at his first asking price."

"For the first time since the war, buyers feel that materials are up to prewar dependability. They see for themselves that the workmanship meets the highest standards. I may be a natural optimist, but I think we're headed for a great year. You can just seem to feel it in the air.

He said he would be a real estate broker until Congress convenes. After that he plans to devote his entire time to Congress, leaving his business in the hands of his sales manager.

Firm Asks Permit To Build 25 Homes

Claremont Construction Corp. has announced plans for construction of 25 more dwellings in its proposed 450-home subdivision in South Arlington, near Fairlington, off Leesburg pike.

Houses are one and two story, of frame and asbestos shingle construction. A building permit application has been filed. Nearly 200 homes have been erected to date.

Legion Finds Housing For 4500 Veterans

More than 4500 veterans and their families have been placed in apartments and homes here through the D. C. Legion's Veterans Housing Center, the agency has announced. Two widely separated offices of the center have been merged into one unit now operating from Legion Headquarters, 2437 15th st. nw., according to Sylvan King, Legion housing chairman.

The project is a joint endeavor of the American Legion, Washington Real Estate Board and the Home Builders Association. Veterans needing housing apply at the Legion office, show discharge papers, are certified and receive a priority on apartments as they become available. Builders and realtors are cooperating by allotting a certain portion of their vacancies to the office.

The housing plan has been widely heralded for its aid to veterans in their search for housing. Legion groups throughout the country are planning to sponsor a similar plan.

Apartment Bids Taken

Cory Construction Co. is taking bids on construction of a proposed six-unit apartment building at 3410 18th st. ne. The project will be three stories, of brick construction.

Fight On Controls Seen

Realtors in New York For Parley

NEW YORK, N. Y., Nov. 13.—The vanguard of an expected 4000 realtors from over the Nation, including 50 from the Washington area, was in New York today for the forty-first annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, opening tomorrow for one week.

Theme of the meeting is "Opportunities for Greater Service," but the threat of a year's extension of rent control by the Eighty-first Congress is expected to prompt delegates to map a battle plan to fight further controls.

The realtors are expected to unveil their legislative strategy on Tuesday when Calvin K. Snyder, executive secretary of the realtors' Washington committee, discusses the association's legislative representation on the Hill.

According to one informant, the delegates will be told to bring pressure to bear on their congressional representatives in an effort to defeat any proposed rent control extension. In addition, the national headquarters of the association is expected to ask all realtors to contribute money to support a "fight rent control" campaign.

Herbert U. Nelson, executive vice president of the association, recently pointed out "there are eight million people who own rental property. If they are pushed around too much, they will form a political bloc as strong as that of the farmers."

The seven-day convention schedule includes several outstanding programs and speakers. Highlights include: "Locations of Industrial Plants in the Atomic Age," by Gayle W. Arnold, director of plant dispersion, National Security Resources Board.

A speech by former Postmaster General James A. Farley to the Society of Industrial Realtors will be his first postelection address and his first after his return from Spain.

William Craven-Ellis, British construction expert, whose firm was said to have built over 6000 homes in one year, will address various convention sessions.

The future in urban development will be previewed in a "Cities of Tomorrow" exhibit, sponsored by the Urban Land Institute and Architectural Forum. Models and photographs will show the work which will actually be done in cities during the next few years on the basis of pioneer projects already accepted or under way.

Policy of the association on several controversial issues, in addition to rent control, will also be considered. They include public housing, socialization of industry and war housing. New officers will be elected.

Other principal speakers include William Vogt, author of the best seller, "Road to Survival;" J. C. Nichols, dean of American community developers and a past member of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission; Dr. Melchior Palyi, economist, banker and columnist; Earl Bunting, managing director and immediate past president of the National Association of Manufacturers, and Edmund Howard, Englist architect and appraiser.

Besides the regular sessions of the convention scheduled

New Outfit Supplies Avid Gadgeteers

By Aline Mosby

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Any members of the audience who tee-hee at gadgets will please stick around. Gadgets are sane and serious.

And the guys who invent them aren't wild-eyed critters with Rube Goldberg contraptions under their arms, either.

Today's enlightment is supplied by the Gadget-of-the Month Club, which hauls in a million bucks a year supplying gadgets to customers the world over. For $2 to $100, you can join, and the mailman brings around a surprise package each month.

Maybe you'll draw a bobby-pin tray with a gimmick for prying open the pins (saves on ladies' teeth and fingernails.) Or a metal disc to keep the soup from boiling over; a letter opener with a letter-weighter on the end. Or a card dealer to abolish cheating at gin rummy.

Must Save Labor

THESE are dignified gizmos, the club says. They are invented by dignified but lazy people who wish to save energy and used by other dignified people for the same reason.

"Gadgets are not screwy," insists Manager Don Davis. "The auto used to be a gadget. So was the electric light, radio and the airplane. The helicopter is a perfect example of a gadget. Do you laugh at those things now? Gadget merely means a new contrivance. If it's accepted, it becomes a staple."

The gadgets the club orders from inventors or manufacturers have to be labor-saving devices, he explained. The club rings the bell on many gimmicks because their appeal is limited, or they're not practical for mailing.

The club inspects more than 500 gadgets a month. And only one tenth of 1 per cent are axed because they're screwy. Like one guaranteed moth killer. The idea is to step on a thin box and kill the moths after they crawl in, if they do.

"That's like a cockroach killer I heard of," sniffs Davis. "For a dollar you got two wooden blocks, in between which you place the cockroach and strike sharply with a mallet."

Mouse Trap Rejected

SOME gadgets just complicate life. Such as a "better" mouse trap, designed to drown the beastie. This was rejected, along with a geyser ashtray for dousing stogies, a can opener with 18 uses, and a 200-foot pipe cleaner. Members themselves suggest ideas, including an ink eraser on a fountain pen, a suction rake to pick up leaves, a diaper changer.

The club has a half million members. Esther Williams, Red Skelton, Joan Crawford and Van Johnson belong. Ninety per cent of the members are ladies, indicating females are lazier.

U. S. Hiring Job Is Disclaimed By Civil Service

By The Associated Press

The Civil Service Commission has disclaimed the job of hiring Federal employes.

Referring to a statement by former President Herbert Hoover, chairman of a two-party board studying Government reorganization, the commission said:

"The Civil Service Commission . . does not hire Federal employes, except its own personnel, and except for a few isolated instances in war emergencies, it has never done so."

Hoover told a news conference Thursday, among other things, that the Civil Service Commission should be stripped of its labor-recruiting duties and returned to its original function of fixing policies under which the various Federal agencies would hire their own workers.

The commission said it operates this way: it holds competitive examinations for specified positions when there is a need for Government workers. Then it sets up registers listing applicants who have successfully passed the tests, and certifies the names of qualified candidates to the appointing officers of the Government agencies.

Truckers Given 15-Cent Boost

Milwaukee, Nov. 13 (AP).—Approximately 30,000 over-the-road truck drivers and helpers in 12 States and 3 cities have been granted a wage increase of 15 cents per hour, a spokesman for the Central States Drivers Council said yesterday.

David Previant, attorney for the council, said representatives of 150 AFL International Brotherhood of Teamsters locals, ratified the agreement in Chicago Thursday. It had been approved last Sunday by representatives of some 2500 employers engaged in dry freight movement.

The agreement also provides for an increase in mileage rates of one-half cent per mile in States east of the Mississippi River and one-fourth cent per mile in States west of the Mississippi.

Sunday School Plans

Plans are nearly complete for construction of a Sunday school building for the Second Baptist Church at East Capitol and 17th sts.

Road Construction Delaying Start of Shopping Center

Construction of a proposed shopping center near the junction of Riggs and Ager rds., Hyattsville, Md., has been temporarily held up pending word from highway authorities as to where new roads are to be located in the Green Meadows area.

When location of the new roads has been established on a land tract owned by Sidney Lust, the construction of Lust's seven-store center will begin. A spokesman for Lust said his firm expected to be able to start erection by April 1. The project, to cost an estimated $200,000, is planned for completion in the fall of 1949.

Prefab Makers To Meet Monday

Leading prefabricated homes producers are expected at the fall meeting of Prefabricated Home Manufacturers' Institute, Monday to Wednesday at Grand Rapids, Mich., the institute has announced.

The housing situation will be discussed by Mayor George W. Welsh of Grand Rapids, president of the United States Conference of Mayors. James C. Downs, jr., president, Real Estate Research Corp., Chicago, will speak on "The Small House Outlook for 1949." The newest developments in radiant heating of homes will be reviewed by R. S. Dill of the National Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C.

Plans for the manufacture of low-cost economy houses will be discussed, Harry H. Steidle, institute manager, said.

"Government housing officials have urged an increase in the production of houses selling in the $6000 price range," Steidle explained.

Brock to Discuss Low-Cost Housing At Statler Parley

Low cost housing will be discussed by Milton J. Brock in an address Monday before the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington at the Statler, it was announced yesterday by Clarence W. Gosnell, Association president.

BROCK

Mr. Brock, president of the National Association of Home Builders, has traveled all over the United States during the past year observing housing conditions, making detailed studies of methods of producing homes to sell at low cost. His speech is expected to mention the possibility of Federal public housing legislation in the 81st Congress.

The occasion is the annual Fall dinner meeting of the building group. More than 400 persons are expected to attend. Guests of honor include Col James A. Hewitt, area FHA Administrator and Morgan Callahan, Veterans Administration Loan Guaranty Officer.

The United States normally produces over 1000 tons of pig iron per 1000 population each year.

Germany Shipping More Toys To United States

POSTWAR shipments of German Christmas toys to the United States, now increasing, bring back memories of the 1920's, when Germany was the world's leading toy maker, and the now bomb-battered city of Nuernberg the industry's capital.

Japanese playthings then were hardly noticeable among the sturdy wooden carvings from Bavaria and Thuringia—bright peasant carts and animals, dolls and doll houses, and little tin soldiers "made in Germany."

Toy purchases from Japan in 1926 came to less than 9 per cent of total United States toy imports, compared with 75 per cent from Germany, notes the National Geographic Society. It was another story within the next decade, however, as German toy exports declined sharply, and Japanese trade boomed. At the same time, the United States continued to develop its own expanding manufacture of children's playthings.

By 1939, the United States had become the world's largest toy producer, filling most of its own needs and exporting to all nations. Today the United States still heads the list of toy makers and international merchants.

In Germany, the toy industry is slowly reviving. Though exports so far have been limited by postwar problems, familiar items like tops and Christmas tree ornaments are being shipped to the United States from Germany's western zone. Toys once more are adding color to trade exhibits at European trade fairs.

Japan, too, is rebuilding its trade. In 1947 and 1948, small toy shipments were made, predominantly to the United States. Most articles are of plastic, with a few of tin, wood and bamboo.

Population 'Aging' Slowly, Figures Show

THE UNITED STATES is becoming slowly a land of old folks, the Institute of Life Insurance reports, citing Census Bureau statistics.

Principal reasons are a declining birth rate, longer life spans, and reduced immigration, the institute stated. As a result, the median age of the population—the figure which divides the population exactly in half—is now approximately 30 years. At the turn of the century the median age was under 23 years, and in 1800 it was 16 years.

"The experts expect this trend toward an older population to continue for the foreseeable future, even under the most favorable conditions for population reproduction and growth," the institute said. "This population trend is creating a factor with far-reaching implications for the Nation, economically, socially, and politically as well, whose influence is certain to increase as time goes on."

"One important implication of an 'aging' population relates to savings and retirement income. By past standards, the current volume of personal savings and retirement income created in life insurance and in other ways has never been so great. Their adequacy, however, takes on a different perspective if, as the experts predict, the number of people 65 and over is 7 to 9 million greater than now 25 years from today and if, at the same time, the group aged 45 to 64 increases by 10 million or so.

"There are many other implications in this trend toward an older population, running all the way from economic decisions regarding production, types of consumer products, and housing, to questions with a political angle such as old-age assistance needs and the operations of the whole Social Security System."

St. Petersburg Nears Record Building Year

St. Petersburg, Fla., Nov. 13.—This year's record building race is expected to exceed the previous record here of 25 million dollars during the land boom of 1925.

Single family residences comprise the bulk of local building, with apartment houses and de luxe motor courts, new shops and modernization of existing ones accounting for the remainder of this year's building totals.

Amvet Head Inspects Housing

Harold A. Keats, right, national commander of AMVETS, inspected the 108-unit Columbia Heights Apartment project this week and said he was impressed with efforts being made by the builder in meeting housing needs of veterans in this area. Ralph D. Rocks, left, president of the Virginia Veterans Cooperative Association, sponsors, accompanied Keats on his tour. Apartments in the development, located on Columbia Pike in Arlington, Va., are being sold under the cooperative plan. Mr. Keats, a builder himself, is president of the Keats Construction Co. of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Dollar Volume In Construction Hits 1948 Peak

Construction in the District last month measured by dollar volume of building permits issued, was the highest in the past year, the October report of the District Building Inspector revealed.

The total value for October permits reached $5,059,464, the first time since October, 1947, it had reached the five million mark. The same period of 1947 showed permits issued for proposed projects worth $5,270,791. The October, 1948, total is nearly one and one-half million dollars above the September, 1948, total.

A breakdown of permits issued last month included: dwellings, 119, $1,260,000; apartments, 10, $1,338,000; warehouses, five, $343,700; residential repairs, 243, $402,126; commercial repairs, 133, $542,249; plumbing permits on 1056 buildings, $832,744.

New buildings totaled $3,065,700, with $1,993,764 in repairs, bringing the month's total to $5,059,464. Permits were issued for proposed construction to house 87 living units in the Northeast; 291, Southeast; 52, Northwest, none, Southwest.

Red Cross Awards Additions Contract

American National Red Cross has awarded a construction contract for additions to its property at N. Asaph and Wyethe sts., Alexandria, Va. The builder is Davis, Wick, Rosengarten Co., Inc., of Washington. The project, consisting of two additions to existing wings, will be three-story and basement, of brick and concrete. Construction is expected to begin immediately.

Real Estate Official Calls Market Slump Unjustified

Denver, Nov. 13 (AP).—The head of a national real estate association says that the recent stock market break isn't justified by "realities."

J. Clydesdale Cushman of New York, president of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, declared that President Truman's past performance has been "relatively conservative," and the Eighty-first Congress "is only slightly left of center."

However, he told the Denver Association of Building Owners and Managers that the recent election will mean increased pressure for public housing, price controls, wage supports and extension of social security.

Cushman predicted also that there will be no reduction in Federal taxes.

He advised building owners to get ready to meet expected "readjustments" by getting out of debt and avoiding speculative commitments, modernizing buildings with current earnings, improving service and maintaining good public relations.

Bankers See No Decline In Realty Prices

NO SHARP DECLINE in realty prices is on the horizon. There are no trends to indicate a coming depression. New and used homes are harder to sell and buyers are more selective.

These and other statements were heard this week by 2000 officials of savings and loan associations, including a large District delegation, which met in New York for the fifty-sixth annual convention of the United States Savings and Loan League.

Morton Bodfish, chairman of the league's executive committee, dismissed the idea that there is such thing as an economic curve, with depressions every so many years. Pointing out that a serious recession in property values is caused only where there is overbuilding, Bodfish said that this situation does not exist today nor does the Nation seem to be near it.

The director of VA's loan guarantee service, T. B. King, called upon the banking officials to give the builder of homes selling under $10,000 a break at the expense of the builder erecting higher cost housing.

The VA official said that by restricting loans to such builders, the loaning institutions would create a strong pressure on all builders to improve their efficiency, squeeze the water out of inflated costs and to concentrate their building program in the price fields that the average veteran and family, making $3000 per year, could afford.

On the basis of present-day family budgets, King continued, this income level enables the average veteran family to afford a home priced in the $5000 to $6000 bracket. There is no builder in the Washington area now constructing homes to sell to veterans under the GI Bill for under $7500.

King said that the most urgent housing needs of veterans had been met by 1,300,000 home loans to World War II vets. Over 13 million veterans are still eligible to use their loan provision of the GI bill, however.

In a discussion of sound mortgage policy, Ralph H. Smith, league president, hit continued Government investment in the housing field. It is Government policy to encourage home ownership by liberalized mortgage payments over a long period of years. Smith said it is foolish to stretch the repayment period over an entire generation.

Mortgage terms should be drawn with the idea that the home will be paid for early in the lifetime of the buyer, he added.

Negroes, Latin Americans and Japanese Americans, and other minority groups, constitute a large block of potential home owners, Robert R. Taylor of Chicago, pointed out. "In Chicago alone," he said, "Negroes, Japanese and Latin Americans have purchased during and after the war more than 50 million of homes."

Maurice K. Murphy of Rutherford, N. J., was elected president of the league the next year, succeeding Smith.

The 1,250,000,000 pencils used each year by Americans could draw a line 43,475,000,000 miles long.

7% Decrease In New Homes Seen in 1949

THERE will be around 884,000 homes built in the United States next year, a drop of 7 per cent from the 950,000 units estimated for this year, the F. W. Dodge Corp. estimated yesterday.

The building reporting service also said moderate increases in public building and engineering projects are indicated.

Thomas S. Holden, president of the Dodge Corp., reported: "Election day found the American economy at or near peak of a postwar boom. While such inflationary aspects as vastly increased money income, shortages of goods and services, rising prices, wages and construction costs have been conspicuously present, the boom his been unique in a very important respect. It has not been accompanied by a boom psychology."

Holden said conservative optimism had held the boom in check. Buying resistance has already been felt in private building, with equity financing becoming increasingly difficult to obtain.

"Home builders realize the necessity of producing lower priced housess in 1949 than they erected this year," he added. "This will be difficult if further price rises should occur. A moderate slowing down of activity during part of the year would facilitate market adjustment."

West Central Heating Plant Now Operating

The Government's new 8,500,000 West Central heating plant, at 29th and K sts. nw., is now in operation and is helping its sister unit, the 15-year-old East Central plant, to heat some 150 Federal buildings in the area.

The new unit, whose construction was begun in 1941 but interrupted by the war, will have an output of 440,000 pounds of steam per hour from its two giant boilers when Winter weather requires full operation.

Operation of the new plant will permit repairs and maintenance at the East Central plant, whose six boilers have been operating at near capacity during much of the past few years and at full capacity during last Winter's peak periods.

Mechanical Engineer Robert J. Rickey is superintendent of the new installation, constructed under the direction of Commissioner of Public Buildings W. E. Reynolds and Federal Works Administrator Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming.

Bids for installation of two more boilers have been invited by the Federal Works Administration, and the plant will eventually have six

Miami Growth Outstrips Predictions

Miami, Fla., Nov. 13.—Estimates of future Miami growth have been revised upward by Southern Bell Telephone from an estimated population of 800,000 by 1966 to one million.

Estimates put Greater Miami's current population at 402,000. Fifty-two years ago the city was incorporated with 502 voters.

The one million population prediction for 1966 is based on surveys used for long-range expansion plans. The revision upward was taken in the face of new estimates of smaller-size families, tending to indicate the rate of growth will be far greater than the utility had believed possible but a short time ago.

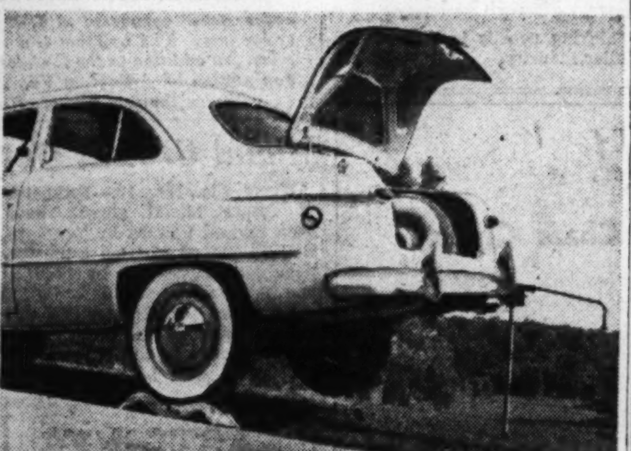
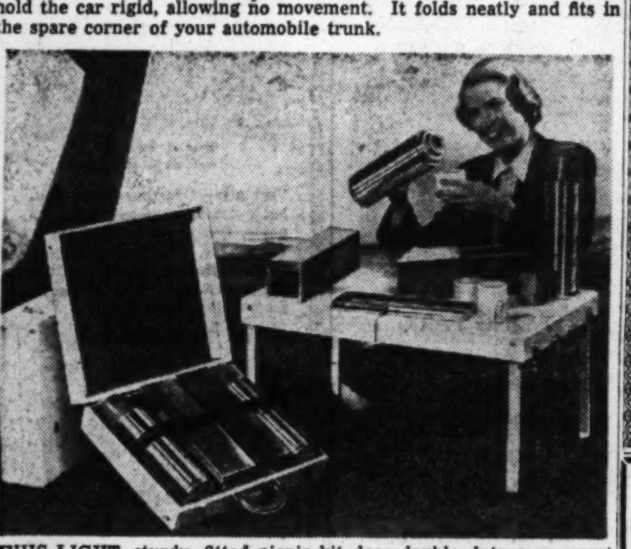
A NEW weatherstripping called "GlaStrip" is made of fiberglass and can be applied by any housewife without staining her hands or marring woodwork or wall paper. The stripping is placed over the opening or crack and pushed out of sight with a table knife. Since it is resilient it springs into place instantly to fill all irregularities. The microscopic glass fiber filaments form thousands of minute air pockets to provide a tight seal against cold drafts, dirt, soot and insects. Available at The Hecht Co.



THE "NoRol CarBlock" was designed to eliminate need of a jack in case of a flat tire. The device is set on the roadway, the car is backed up, setting the good wheel on the block, with the flat hanging in the air ready for changing. The manufacturer says the unit will hold the car rigid, allowing no movement. It folds neatly and fits in the spare corner of your automobile trunk.



THIS LIGHT, sturdy, fitted picnic kit does double duty as a smart carrying case and table. Closed, the "Tour Table" holds two bright, chrome-plated, quart-sized vacuum bottles, each with four unbreakable, flexible plastic cups and two stainless-steel sandwich boxes. Flip open the brass-plated catches and pull out the four strong legs and you have a big, easy-to-clean table that is 14 inches high, 30 inches long and 18 inches wide. The table is covered with strong canvas duck. At Abercrombie & Fitch Co., New York.

Using a flatplate ironer and hand iron in combination, the homemaker can conserve energy by doing her weekly ironing without once standing up, the General Electric Consumers Institute says.

Because the 300-square-inch "buck," or ironing surface, of the G-E flatplate ironer takes the place of the ordinary ironboard, any type of garment—no matter how beruffled—can be ironed quickly and easily without moving from your chair in front of the flatplate, the Institute claims.

In preparing for your weekly ironing stint, it is necessary only to lift the cover off the ironer and fold it down on the right side, where it forms a shelf for a plugged-in hand iron. Turn on the ironer. And place your basket of clothes on the floor on the left side of your chair.

From here on, you simply iron the large flat surfaces of your shirts, dresses, sheets, etc., on the flatplate. And whenever you come to tiny ruffles or plackets which need touching up to look their very best, spread the garment out on the "buck" and apply your hand iron.

M. B. Swanson is back in the home building game after a five-year absence. He built homes for over 20 years before the war, mostly in the Barnaby Woods sector, with around 100 homes erected there. A director of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association, he served as chief appraiser for that firm during the war. He plans to continue building on 40 lots which he owns in Barnaby Woods.

Washington Realtors Seek Albany Clients

The National Association of Real Estate Board's weekly publication "Headlines" recognizes a good Samaritan when it sees one. We quote from the current issue: "President Edmund Brant of Brant Realtors, Inc., Arlington, Va., made a magnamimous gesture to a paralyzed jewel-cutter who recently won $800 on a radio quiz program. The winner wanted to purchase a home where he could set up a specially equipped workshop and carry on his trade. His prize money was $700 short of the down payment on the house he wanted. Brant, who was handling the sale of the house, deferred his commission and paid the title fee himself. The paralyzed man now owns the house of his choice."

Joseph F. Battley, retired Army general of this city, has been reelected president of the National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association for a three-year term at the association's convention in Chicago last week.

Main speaker at the parley was Leo M. Cherne, Director, Research Institute of America, who told the 1500 delegates that the Taft-Hartley Act will be repealed, although the minimum wage is going up and social security will be expanded. He predicted an extension of rent control, increased taxes and possible reimposition of excise profits taxes. He said President Truman would probably be given stand-by powers by the Eighty-first Congress to impose price controls.

The cement supply situation is getting worse, reports the Housing Institute. About half of the areas in the county are short of cement, it added. (Including the Washington area—Ed's note.) "Builders who use less than carload lots are hit hardest. Vitreous china plumbing is becoming more scarce."

Prefab manufacturers are taking Uncle Sam up on liberal credit provisions in the Housing Act of 1948. FHA has issued its second commitment in two weeks to insure a loan under the act's section 609. This one is to New Jersey Permacrete Corp., of Philadelphia, to finance production of prefabs. The loan to be insured covers approximately 85 per cent of the manufacturer's cost, exclusive of profit, for the production of 100 houses to be erected at Burlington, N. J., about 18 miles north of Camden and within commuting distance of Philadelphia. Homes will be one story, five rooms, of poured concrete.

Two Injured By Wringers In Homes Here

Washing machines caused two of the 115 home accident injuries treated in District hospitals last week, according to the Red Cross Accident Prevention Service.

An elderly woman fractured her hand in a washing machine wringer and a 2-year-old boy hurt his arm in another wringer.

Falls accounted for 47 injuries, burns for 10 and accidental poisoning for 2. Four persons got foreign objects in the nose, throat and stomach, 28 cut themselves, 3 were bruised and 21 suffered "miscellaneous hurts." One death was recorded from a fall.

A 31-year-old man lost his eye after he struck himself in the eyeball with a screw driver. A young man burned his eye chemically when he splashed liquid soap on it, and a 14-month-old boy was injured when his sister hit him in the eye with a piece of metal.

A year-old boy burned 20 per cent of his body when he overturned a steam inhalator on himself and an 8-year-old youngster punctured his hand with a piece of wire.

Other children who were injured ran into a toy gun, fell on a screwdriver, a pencil and a drinking glass.

Increase In Freight Charges Shifts Steel To Truck Lines

NEW YORK, Nov. 13 (AP).—Highways are hurling a new major threat against the railroads.

So far it is only a threat, and so far it has attracted principal attention in the steel industry.

Competition from truckers is based on a current competitive edge over their giant rivals.

They are: (1) rail freight rate increases; (2) a shortage of freight cars to haul record steel production (3) a change from the basing point method of pricing steel products to an fob basis.

The railroads have increased their freight rates about 44 per cent since mid-1946 with a petition for another 13 per cent boost before the Interstate Commerce Commission. Truck rates have gone up sectionally by 20 to 50 per cent since prewar.

More Change to Trucks

Each time freight rates go higher, more shippers change to trucks if they can save money. Freight car loadings this year are about 3 per cent under a year ago. Truckers are hauling about 20 per cent more than in 1947.

Steel production now is running near an annual record high rate. But there are only 289,107 railroad gondola cars in service as against 301,587 a year ago.

If steel customers can't load their orders on freight cars, they turn to trucks and to waterway transportation.

Change Also a Factor

The third reason for increased truck competition—the change in quoting steel prices to fob mill from the basing point method under which steel mills absorbed some of the freight—also is linked with higher freight charges.

Steel customers since July must pay the same mill price, and the freight to their plant is added. A number of them changed to truck, where possible, because rates were cheaper.

Higher freight rates and car shortages were given by the head of one of the Nation's largest steel corporations as the prime reasons for what he called an "inclination to change to trucks from railroads."

Sanatoriums' Addition Plans Near Completion

Final plans by the achitects are nearing completion on two additions to sanatoriums planned for erection by the State of Virginia. A 400-bed addition is planned for Catawba Sanatorium at Catawba, Va., and a 350-bed addition to Piedmont Sanatorium at Burkeville, Va.

Harry Poretsky & Sons, Inc., will build four two-story homes in the 900 block of Somerset pl., Hyattsville, Md. A building permit has been issued.

British Auto Makers Hit U. S. Jackpot

By Rader Winget

NEW YORK, Nov. 13 (AP).—The British are winning their fight for a share of the rich American mass market for small automobiles.

British manufacturers in quiet moments will tell you off-the-record that a year ago they had hopes of selling a few thousand cars in America, and with luck they dreamed of a small permanent market here.

Today their sales are double their estimates, and there is a possibility that next year their sales may double again. Their organizations are being built on a permanent basis. They intend to stay—if they can.

The Austin Motor Co., Ltd., is bringing in their 2200-pound cars at the rate of 1000 a month, and they estimate sales at 12,000 for 1948. Next year they will assemble 500 cars weekly in an Ontario plant. Some time in 1949 trade observers believe they may be able to offer 4000 cars monthly for sale through combined Canadian assembly and shipment of completed vehicles from England.

British-made Fords are arriving here at the rate of 2000 a month. About 7000 have been sold this year, and the present rate of shipments gives an estimated 1948 sale of 12,000 cars. It originally was intended to import only 6000 cars this year.

And there are other British, French and Italian manufacturers competing for American dollars.

Cars Sold Themselves

WHO buys these cars and why? An Austin spokesman said his company expected sales to be made to persons wanting a second car for economical operation to supplement their large and expensive American-made first car. They also figured there was a market among people who had to have transportation while awaiting delivery of an American car.

Their theories held true to a small extent. Biggest sales were made, said the spokesman, "on the basis of the fine performance of the car itself."

Word of mouth advertising was the big sales impetus in the beginning for Ford, Austin and the others. The small cars, dealers wince at the word "midget," are not loaded down with accessories, they can be bought without a trade-in, and delivery is immediate.

Expect expanding sales. They seem assured of getting that for at least two years while American producers are catching up with home demand.

Then what?

HERE is the future as seen by both American and foreign producers.

American industry could rub out the foreigners in a minute by bringing out their own small cars, cutting prices on present models, making better cars for the same money, or by following the historic trend of giving finer automobiles for less money.

It is doubtful that they will. Foreign makers are gambling on that. Austin has 100 principal dealers in 30 States, and the number is growing. They have strategic parts depots. Their Canadian plant represents heavy capital throughout the country. Their shipments come direct by water from England to both the East and West Coasts.

Here Are New Ways To Heat Your Home

By Harriet Morrison

HOUSE heating systems are becoming less and less conspicuous. Some are invisible in a room and do not require a boiler or furnace in the basement or utility room. Even boilers, furnaces, radiators and convectors have shrunk in size but not in efficiency.

Of course, the ideal heating system should warm floors, provide even heat throughout the house and should be durable, clean, safe and economical to operate. There is no one magic answer. The selection of a heating system calls for a conference between home owner, architect and heating engineer.

The heating system should be decided on while the house is still in the drawing-board stage. This kind of planning insures the best results. It can cut costs of installing the heating system, can result in fuel savings and can mean greater comfort for the family.

Looking Ahead

IF you are doing some future planning this winter about a house you hope to buy or build, you undoubtedly will consider radiant heating. This type of heating warms you and objects in the room in contrast to other types that warm and circulate the air.

Radiant heating usually refers to a way of distributing heat through pipe coils hidden in walls, floors or ceilings rather than through radiators or registers. This generally involves a circulating hot-water system complete with a boiler in the basement or utility room, although warm air can be used as the heating medium.

This type of heating can produce even heat in rooms. It does not dry out the air or create drafts and takes up no floor space in a room. The absence of air currents keeps walls and curtains clean.

As with any heating system the installation of radiant heating is important. However, in contrast with other systems, radiant heating still is fairly new and not every heating contractor is equipped to do the work. Radiant heating systems tend to require more of an engineering job and present more complications from an installation standpoint than conventional systems. As time goes on, more and more is being done to standardize and simplify the installation process. Once the job is done, operating costs for radiant heated houses run lower than for other types.

Radiant baseboards are another application of the radiant heating principle. Hot water or steam pipes are run through an enclosed metal strip that is installed in place of ordinary wood baseboards. These can be painted to match woodwork or walls. No major changes in building construction are required to install them. Base boards can be put in new or old homes with equal ease and are for use with hot water heating systems. They produce heat inconspicuously at ankle level.

Better Performance

THE trend toward compact, basementless houses has influenced heating equipment. That and the fuel problem. Manufacturers of boilers and furnaces are showing small units suitable for houses being built today.

There is a definite trend to ship boilers and furnaces completely assembled. This has been made possible by re-designing units and making changes that lessen the total weight. The advantage is, of course, that the chance of error in installing the equipment is reduced. Less responsibility is placed on the person who installs the equipment and all-around better performance is assured.

Newest boilers and furnaces, besides being compact, are attractively encased. All controls are inclosed in the jacket and units are finished in gray, brown, a blue-green, deep red or white.

Invisible Heat

A TYPE of heating panel that requires no boiler or system of pipes is one that operates on electricity and is made by the United States Rubber Co. This is a radiant-type panel called Uskon. Panels are conductive rubber ceiling units that resemble wallboard. They consist of electrically conductive rubber sheets sandwiched between insulating layers and operate on 220 volts but there are no wires running through them. The rubber conducts the electricity.

Panels are placed around the edge of the ceiling, leaving the center section unheated. They are controlled by a switch or automatically by a thermostat and can be finished with plaster or paint like any ceiling panel. Operating costs run higher than most heating systems depending on the cost of electricity.

In coal heating the newest piece of equipment is the Anthratube developed by the Anthracite Industry. This is a completely automatic coal-fired unit based on a new coal-burning principle that provides automatic heat and results in fuel savings. Coal is fed automatically and ashes are discharged into dustproof containers. To date the Anthratube is constructed for use with steam or hot water systems and has proven highly efficient. A warm air model is being developed by one firm.

All-year air conditioning systems approach the ideal for indoor comfort but are still pretty much in the luxury class. They can be included in budget houses if they are considered at the drawing-board stage. These systems clean and filter air, control the humidity and circulate warmed air in winter and cooled air in summer. The same ducts and registers are used both winter and summer.

In the Future

THE HEAT pump also produces winter heat and summer cooling. This amounts to a large refrigerating system but still is in the early stages of development. Both gas and electric units are available but either is an expensive proposition.

Board To Act on Hines Assembly Hall

Hine Junior High School students deprived of an assembly hall since their auditorium was condemned last year will meet in a theater if the board of education approves.

The board will consider at its meeting on Wednesday a recommendation of Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning that it give the school permission to hold its assemblies in the Avenue Grand Theater. The recommendation is based on a ruling of the office of the corporation counsel that the students may assemble there.

Other matters to come before the board are: a revision of the course of study in business education offered in junior high schools, and participation of local schools in an art contest sponsored by Scholastic Magazine.

West Pushes Plans To Make Fertilizer

SPOKANE, Wash., Nov. 13 (AP).—The Far West is being groomed to displace the Southeast as the Nation's major producer of phosphate fertilizer.

Proponents of soil conservation and cheap power are pushing phosphate into the spotlight like a carefully rehearsed child in a school pageant.

Western Congressmen urging funds to save the soil often cite the vast stores of phosphate relatively untapped in Idaho. When the gentlemen speak of power, phosphate production is one of the reasons advanced for speeding construction of generating plants on the rivers of the Pacific Northwest.

"Here we are," said Representative Walt Horan (R., Wash.), "suffering from a lack of available soil phosphates, when in our own backyard we have the ingredients to manufacture them.

"They are electricity from our Columbia River, abandoned defense plants in Spokane and Wenatchee that could be partially converted into fertilizer factories, and Idaho phosphate rock."

C. Girard Davidson, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, echoed Horan's remarks in a recent address at Pocatello, Idaho, and added, "It's time for the West to stop depending on Florida and Tennessee output."

Agriculture Department surveys show the Nation's crops are taking phosphorous from the soil more rapidly than it can be replaced by nature. Either the soil eventually will become useless or chemicals must be restored artificially. Phosphate fertilizer is not the single answer but is a partial one, and many Westerners contend not enough is being done about it.

Bell declared, "More research must be done in the Western States to estimate accurately the needs of phosphate fertilizer, although now it is apparent that fertilizer use is far less than might economically be applied."

In Reserve

The housewife having mechanical refrigeration is wise to have a full set of cubes in the tray as well as those frozen in the unit pans. Then if unexpected company arrives, or if she suddenly decides to have a frozen dessert, there is no worry about the ice for dinner or cold drinks later.

Forestville Project Set

Morris Golden plans construction of two stores, both one-story bricks, near the junction of Marlboro and Ritchie rds., Forestville, Md. Tuckman-Barbee Construction Co., of Washington, is reported to be figuring the proposed job.

Proper Vegetable Storage Minimizes Freeze Hazard

WHEN freezing weather threatens the vegetable garden, there is usually a considerable quantity of vegetables in the ground which can easily be stored in good condition until used.

The time to harvest them for storage is as late as possible, with safety. Squash and pumpkins should be taken in before heavy frosts; but most others may be left in the garden until freezing weather. Temperatures which freeze the soil will not injure beets, carrots, cabbage and turnips so long as it thaws out the next day; but they should be lifted before the ground begins to remain frozen all day.

Onions, squash and pumpkins can be kept in any dry shelter for two or three months without worrying about the temperature. But even these vegetables will keep best in a temperature under 40 degrees. Cut the stems of the squash and pumpkins close to the plant; and hang onions in braids, or store in shallow slatted racks, so the air will circulate freely about them.

Parsnips and salsify may be dug, sorted into lots sufficient for a family serving and each lot placed in a paper bag. These bags may be placed in a box and left outdoors, protected only from the rain. Freezing will improve the flavor of these vegetables, and they are easily removed for serving as needed.

Carrots, beets, turnips, rutabagas, potatoes, apples and cabbage may be stored in a shed or unheated garage for so long as the temperature does not fall below 10 degrees above zero. Place them in boxes packed in soil, or peat moss, but not sand; or pack them in cardboard boxes which are placed in larger boxes, and surrounded with shredded paper, sawdust or shavings for insulation.

To protect these vegetables from the lowest winter temperatures convenient receptacle is a 24-inch drain tile sunk into the earth and closed with an insulated cover, which may be opened at will for the removal of any part of its contents. A working drawing of this device accompanies this discussion.

The cover may be made of wood, larger than the tile, but protected with hardware cloth to keep out rodents and insulated with many thicknesses of paper or padding.

All vegetables and fruit placed in storage must be free from decay or injury. Avoid those with skin punctures, and never store vegetables which are wet.

Chintz Curtains

Chintz draperies will stay clean a long, long time if they are cared for properly. They should be shaken out every few weeks and brushed off with a stiff brush. Dirt does not cling to this glazed surface and a little care will keep them clean for years.

To Stretch It Out

When you are sewing on a colored material and afraid you will not have enough cotton or silk to match, make the first seam of the French seam with any thread at all. It will not show and you will save the colored thread for the outside seam.

Most Experts Advise Fall Rose Planting

By Alfred Puts

MOST ROSE experts agree that fall planting of roses is preferable to spring planting in our section of the country. Because the plants must be well matured before digging, this is one of the last garden jobs for the season. The process of maturing is a gradual one, brought about principally by steadily declining temperatures, and it takes a good hard freeze to end it.

Although the plants may be set out any time before the ground freezes for the winter, and even during balmy winter spells if the soil is not too wet, preparation of the planting holes calls for prompt action.

Any good garden soil will grow good roses, but those who want the best must not stint on special preparation. First of all, select a sunny garden spot with good drainage. Proper spacing is also important. Hybrid teas, polyantha and floribunda roses, the most popular for garden planting, must stand not less than 18 inches apart, measuring from center to center. Climbers usually are planted singly, but where two or more are used on a support, set them at least 5 feet apart.

Five stages in a hybrid tea rose from tight bud to full bloom

Preparing the Holes

MAKE THE planting holes not less than 15 inches wide and as deep. Such holes will have a capacity of about a bushel and a quarter each. First remove 6 inches of soil and place it to one side, then the next 6 inches which go on the other side of the hole. Finally, loosen the bottom at least another 3 inches and mix with it 2 quarts of fairly well-rotted manure, of the same quantity of equal parts shredded cow manure and peatmoss, sedge peat, leafmold or commercial humus. Also add half a cupful of raw bone and a level tablespoonful of 4-12-4 plant food. When it is well mixed, tramp it down firmly.

Next, draw on the topsoil, adding per hole one-quarter bushel (8 quarts) of either rotted manure or a mixture of 2 quarts shredded cow manure and 6 parts peatmoss, or any of the other humus-forming materials already mentioned. For good measure, add a cupful of raw bone.

In case of rather heavy soil, use a peck of coarse sand to lighten it. Fill the hole as far as the material will reach and compact it moderately. If the plants cannot be set out promptly after arrival, put them in a cool place and protect the roots with moist soil or a wet bag, but keep the tops exposed to the air.

Placing the Plants

FOR planting, remove only enough soil to permit spreading the roots in their natural position. Injured roots are trimmed back, and unduly long ones are shortened with a sharp knife or the pruning shears.

The planting depth is determined by the thickened joint which indicates the union between the understock and the bud, or scion. Let it rest just below the normal soil level. When the topmost roots have been covered 2 inches deep, compact the soil by firmly pressing it down with the soles of the shoes and by watering it thoroughly. Fill in the remaining depression, drawing on the untouched soil from the second spit.

Firm planting is essential to success and is of special importance in the case of fall planting. Next, prune the tops back to within 12 or 15 inches of the ground.

Fall-planted roses require adequate winter protection and plain soil serves the purpose better than anything else.

SECTION VI | THE THEATER Schools—Stamps—Travel—Art

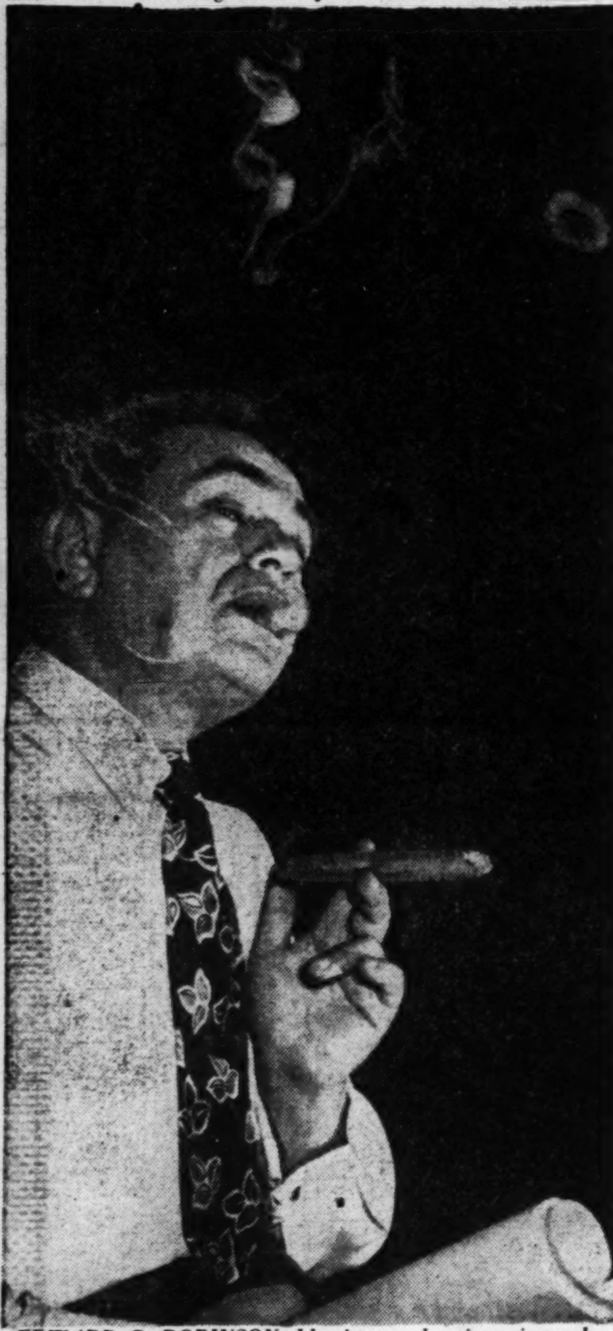
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1948

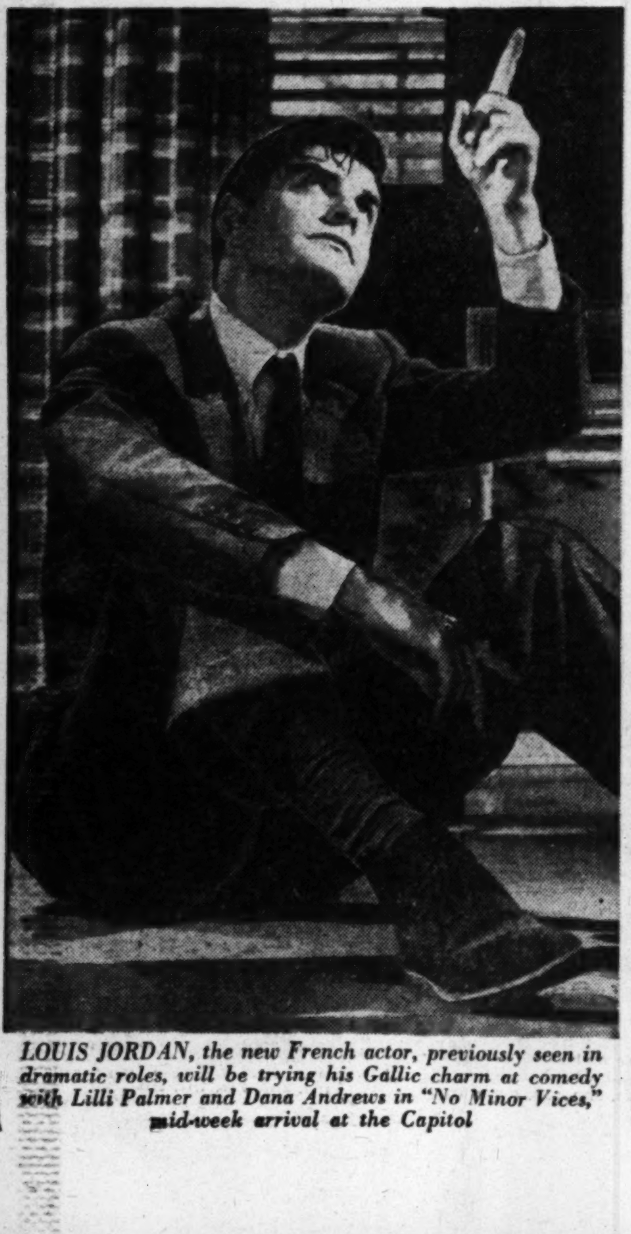
RADIO, Television—Music—Bridge | SECTION VI

Wacky Week Ahead

THE LEADING MEN of the coming week's new movies are long on odd behavior. John Lund, above, is masquerading as a looney fond of bubble gum in "Miss Tatlock's Millions," arriving Thursday at the Warner



EDWARD G. ROBINSON, blowing smoke rings, is working into a mental trance for his role of a visitor to the supernatural in "Night Has a Thousand Eyes," opening Thursday at the Palace



LOUIS JORDAN, the new French actor, previously seen in dramatic roles, will be trying his Gallic charm at comedy with Lilli Palmer and Dana Andrews in "No Minor Vices," mid-week arrival at the Capitol

Now's the Time for U.S. to Get Behind Theater

By Richard L. Coe

WITH THE NEWLY ASSURED President Truman asking his Cabinet officers for their budgetary advice and a Congress reflecting the general philosophy of the New Deal, this is a good time to consider the possibilities for a true national theater.

Despite its brave talk, ANTA—the American National Theater and Academy—is but a shell. Set up by Act of Congress in 1935, this organization has been given no public funds despite its full-blown title. It acts simply as a clearing house for certain sections of the theater. It is anything but an American national theater and academy.

Its complete lack of achievement in the Capital City's present impasse is indicative of its standing. Added to the irony of a theater which has turned its back on the living drama but boasts the presumptuous name of "National Theater," it is peculiarly unfortunate that ANTA has not been able to stir itself into action by moving heaven and earth to have a home in its natural capital.

A Great Chance

BUT the President's new role and the new Congress gives ANTA a magnificent chance. Now is the time to ask the Government for funds to set up a true national theater and academy Government money goes to such cultural pursuits as schooling, libraries and art galleries; the theater and its allied arts are a part of our national heritage. If, as happened last week, the Navy can publicize the obscure advantages of a "kissing meter," surely public funds should be spend for a higher purpose.

Such a theater could be worked on a Statewide basis. Its home could be here; its offerings could tour the cities across the country for a full two years. The cultural needs of millions could be served; the acting profession would be enormously enriched. I shan't go into the possibilities that might extend into such an allied field as music.

And while I don't go for the idea that a thing should be done here simply because it has been done in older lands, a glance at the record of national theaters may be revealing.

Still throbbing from the impact of the war, some of Britain's income goes to the Arts Council, which suports, at least partially, several Old Vic companies and a good many urban and touring theaters throughout the nation. The growth actually began during the war, with the rousing welcome given CEMA and ENSA, with enormous public response to modestly priced theatricals and concerts.

Two in Paris

FRANCE has two state-owned theaters in Paris, the Odeon and the Comedie-Francaise, not to mention two state-owned opera houses, the large Opera, the smaller Opera Comique. Moscow has two, the Moscow Art Theater and the Bolshoi, not to mention the ballet and operatic companies for which that capital is famous. Stockholm has its Kingliga Teatern. And in Berlin you found the Staatstheater, in Vienna the Burgtheater, in Budapest the Nemzeti Szinhaz.

These companies do not necessarily work on a deficit basis. It's up to the managements to stay in the black; prices for the general public are lower than their commercial competitors, but in the years before the war it used to amuse me to pay less for a splendid performance at the Comedie than for a shoddy film at the Madeleine. Actors don't get the absurdly inflated salaries they do under our hit-or-miss real estate setup, but they work for a sure income and it's an honor to be a Societair of the Comedie Francaise. (You've noticed that proud boast in the cast credits of foreign films.)

Such a venture, of course, would have to be headed not by a bureaucrat, but by a leading producer of the commercial theater as we know it. There would be no point in beginning such a thing unless the best people of our professional theater would recognize the honor inherent in being in on the creation of such a scheme.

This they would recognize, I'm sure. On the board of ANTA are the great names of the theater, from Helen Hayes on. It could be made the greatest honor a professional theater person could ask, being named a member of a living ANTA.

Depends on Zeal

HOW such a project could be started depends on the zeal and imagination of the whole profession, but mainly on its present leaders. Lacking any Cabinet department approximating cultural affairs, perhaps the Interior Department and its National Capital Parks Service would be one channel through which such a scheme might be worked. Locally this division handles the Watergate and the Sylvan Theater. Undersecretary Oscar Chapman, an alert, progressive man and one exception to his party's campaign apathy, might be just the person for ANTA to approach.

Thinking of all this last week and considering the enormous potentials of the progressive-minded election, I was delighted to find that much the same thought had occurred to Miss Ida Fox, who has been working like a Trojan behind the scenes to find some way of getting living theater back to the Capital.

One of Miss Fox's cautions was that public discussions of such a plan should also refer to the status of the Federal Theater, which, unlike the fundless ANTA, was a relief organization set up on a federated basis with a national director. One of the reasons President Roosevelt did not press for ANTA money was that at the time of its creation, the Federal Theater had just come into being for relief purposes, a temporary measure.

Spirit Lives On

DESPITE all the foolish talk of a certain (and, come to think of it, forgotten) Virginia Congressman who killed the Federal Theater, its spirit lives on. In scores of community and university theaters as well as in the professional theater itself, its experiments of 14 years ago are now accepted practice. And many theatergoers of today saw their first living theater under its modest, exciting auspices.

Another thing, too—a case could probably be made for regional and community theater on a lower level, less august than Federal sponsorship. That approach is a book in itself.

But certainly now is the time for ANTA to give serious thought to its meaningless title—to seek from Congress the means of implementing its high-sounding charter. This is the best chance ANTA has had in its 13 years of suspended animation.

Bum Steers, 100; Husbands, None

Good Man Still Hard to Find

By Saul Pett

NEW YORK, Nov. 13 (AP).—Dorothy Lawlor, the "wife for sale," is still no sale.

In the five months since she advertised for a husband with $10,000, the ledger of the shapely blonde divorcee shows: letters, 3000; wrong steers, 100; near misses, 20; paid night club appearances, 7; all-expense-paid trips to interview prospects, 2; husbands, none.

The 28-year-old Mrs. Lawlor notes that a "good man is hard to find; the woods are full of phonies—kibitzers, cranks, comedians and guys just interested in a good time, not marriage."

A Colorado rancher wrote he was worth $100,000 but later he couldn't dig up Dorothy's fare; an Ohio machine-shop owner asked twice for pictures which do "not conceal your lovely attributes" and told her to write him care of his barber shop; one man sent a phony check for $1,600,000; all 34 members of a college fraternity house offered to raise the money and submitted a chapter proposal.

A patient in a Louisiana hospital wanted $200 or $300 to get a "parole or pardon"; a radio and appliances dealer in New Mexico talked about his "heart of gold" but never offered any; an Englishman vacationing in southern France casually invited her to "take a ship and come over here, if you can afford it"; a "muscatel drinker" in Arizona apologized for having written that he was a wealthy ranch owner—he was really only a window washer, but surely, he said, Dorothy would like the Arizona air.

Wants His Third Strike

A DAIRY owner in Pennsylvania wrote at length about how much he desired marriage with Dorothy but he kept knocking down his own case. First, he proved that he had been "too dumb" to make his second wife happy, that he had been mismated with his first wife, and anyway his second wife ran off with his first wife's brother. But he would really like to see Dorothy, he said, if it weren't for the "ice cream season."

A tough-minded individualist in Washington proposed, but said: "I don't think you can match my love, as I am very lovable, sweet and romantic . . . what are you, a bar fly and a golddigger, what does a good man mean to you . . . what have you got that I haven't got. I have good looks, personality and money. Money I am not giving you, will handle the money . . ."

One proposal from a Miami night club owner took Mrs. Lawlor down there for two weeks until, she says, she discovered he was only interested in the publicity.

After that, she accepted a cabled invitation to visit a Dominican banker in Ciudad Trujillo but it turned out, she says, he was twice her age and had daughters who were her contemporaries.

Oops, Still Married!

SEVERAL men, after making offers of $10,000, $15,000 and even $25,000, after pleading with her by wire not to make a decision until they talked with her, backed down. Others found excuses when she was on the verge of boarding a plane to see them. Another man remembered he was still married.

"Out of all the publicity, I was beginning to hope for a Tommy Manville or a Hollywood contract, maybe. I like dramatics, you see. But I never came close to either," Mrs. Lawlor says.

"What gave me the idea? I was sitting in that chair, cold broke, no job. I suddenly thought this was the way to provide for my two young children and my parents. So I got a lot of publicity, so I got a few night club dates at $500 a week, so I'm broke again. The money was used for doctors bills and other old debts.

"But I'm not too discouraged. There's an attorney in New York who says there's a man in the Philippines and another in France who are interested in me. Maybe I'll be traveling to interview them soon. I may not get married but I'll see the world."

After her fruitless trips to Miami and Ciudad Trujillo, a theatrical agent got her night club dates in Pittsburgh, Detroit, Buffalo and private clubs in West Virginia.

She was billed as "The Wife For Sale." She sang "I Wanna Get Married" and "A Good Man Is Hard to Find."

Most of Mrs. Lawlor's mail came from women who want her rejects or leftovers.

A married woman in Michigan wrote she could deliver her husband and $15,000 within 90 days, in exchange for the addresses of all the men who answered Dorothy's ad in the Hempstead (N. Y.) Newsday. Another asking for help, complained she had lived with a man 10 years waiting for him to get divorced but when he finally did he married someone else.

Others, more motherly, warned Dorothy not to accept any man as bad as their husbands, and they listed the things to watch out for. A woman in Iowa said if Dorothy got her a husband with $10,000, Dorothy could keep $1000 of it.

And finally there was the young lady who wrote: "I am 11 years old. My hobbies are collecting stamps, rocks, tree leaves and writing stories and poems . . . I listen to Arthur Godfrey and 'My Friend Irma.' . . . Would you like to be my pen pal?"

A good man, these days, is hard to find, as Mrs. Dorothy Lawlor, 28, of Hempstead, Long Island, found out. Mrs. Lawlor, mother of two children, advertised for a husband with $10,000. She got lots of publicity (not at all, Mrs. Lawlor), 3000 letters, and some paid-up night club engagements. But the man—wherever he is—was shy either the inclination or the 10 G's

Both Dollars & Sense Go Into a Video Set

By Sonia Stein

IF THERE IS a smudge on the screen of your new projection model RCA television set, look closely and see if it's my thumb print. I remember putting a clutching claw on the plastic rectifier of one set being assembled at the RCA plant in Camden, N. J., the other day.

Actually, it's more apt to be your own thumb print, or that of the sticky-fingered little ones in your household, because the TV receivers are tested and retested a number of times before they leave the plant.

If you can visualize 1/32 of an inch, you may be interested to know that 1/32 of an inch too much or too little wire in the set can upset its performance entirely. If there is an impurity of one part in 30 million parts of the luminescent material used on the tube face, a great tsk-tsking takes place in the plant and the tube goes back to be refinished.

This finicky attitude and the fact that there are nearly 1000 parts in a TV set foiled my original purpose in going through the RCA set and tube manufacturing plants. I had naturally expected to pilfer parts as I went down the line, and rig up my own set at home with the knowhow learned on my tour through the plant.

Five-Week Task

BUT EVEN if I had managed to collect all the parts, including a 10-inch picture tube, in the capacious purse I was toting for that purpose, I would probably have ruined my social life for the winter. What is a two-hour assembly job in the factory takes five weeks outside. Experienced RCA employes who work on the assembly line and every day put the set together from a number of previously assembled sub-units in just two hours, found that it took all of their spare time for five weeks to turn out a set single-handed at home.

The secret is that the sets are not handled from start to finish by any one person. The sets are passed along an 80-man line where each one does, with great speed and efficiency, a simplified task assigned to him. The wonder is that delicate work on a TV set can be handled in this manner. (When the company once tried giving each worker twice as much to do with twice as much time to do it in, plant supervisors found that errors increased four-fold instead of just doubling.)

If a worker blinks an eye and doesn't quite finish his job as the set glides away on the continuously moving belt, he tags the omission with a red ticket. At the end of the line, skilled checkers take care of these unfinished parts and any errors that turn up.

This kind of operation has made it possible for the Camden plant to turn out from 250 to 300 sets a day from each of its two assembly lines. (The figures on production are not given out by RCA, but it does not deny them.)

12 TV Transmitters

TO TEST the performance of the finished set, and some of the component parts (including RCA's pride-and-joy station-selector switch which it shares with other set manufacturers) the Camden plant has 12 complete TV transmitters. These operate on the same 12 channels assigned to video stations all over the country, so that the set's ability to receive programs from stations on all channels can be pretested. Approximately 30 miles of coaxial cable runs through the building to connect the testing units to the small room which houses well over a quarter mil-

Hayes Songs A Reminder Of His Art

By Paul Hume

HAYES: My Songs. Thirty songs, edited, arranged and interpreted by Roland Hayes. 128 pp. Little, Brown & Co. $3.

Last summer I wrote Roland Hayes and asked him if it was possible to secure a copy of his arrangement of the spiritual, "Lit'l Boy". The answer has come in this new publication of songs arranged and illuminated by Hayes and in a new recording of the song.

This collection of 30 songs is divided into three panels: Events of the Old Testament; Abstractions from the Teaching of Both Old and New Testaments; The Life of Christ. The last section is redivided into two parts: Christ's Birth, Boyhood and Ministry; and The Passion of Our Lord.

In his introductory comments, Hayes explains the sources and interpretations of spirituals. His suggestions are for all who wish to sing these moving songs. Before each song, further comments are given about the inner meaning of the text, and its relation to the music. No one can read this book, whether he sings or not, without realizing the depth of Roland Hayes' spiritual insight. No one who has ever heard him sing will want to be without this volume. To those who know his art, it will serve as a reminder of one of the unique artists of our time.

In 1929 Lillian Littlehales, herself a cellist, published a biography of Pablo Casals, then at the height of his career as cellist and conductor.

Vintage Dialogue still Clutters Air Waves

Give a Ham a Cliche He Can Ride

By John Crosby

FOR lovers of rare old vintage dialogue, I have a couple of recent specimens which indicate that cliches are in bloom again. In "The Storm," the CBS television show, Margaret Sullavan was taken on a whirl through New York by the man she came to love and summed up the experience with these splendid old words:

"It's just as if I were seeing it for the first time."

The other night on the Helen Hayes Theater, Louis Calhern, the dope, asked Jessica Tandy, who stood before him agleam with love, what she wanted from him anyhow. "I don't know," she murmured. "Anything! Everything!" That's a truly great, old chestnut, one of the few dramatic lines I know that is absolutely actress-proof. It's an arrangement of syllables any actress from the age of 6 upward can really get her teeth into.

There's another one here, but I have no idea where it came from. It's one of those lines that might have come from anything and it should be spoken with what I like to think of as second-act curtain resignation. "Well . . . if that's the way you want it . . ."

True Versatility

A MAN FROM West Hempstead, L. I., has contributed a fine specimen whose great merit, he points out, is its versatility.

"Yeah . . . yeah . . . now I begin to see."

This one sounds equally well coming from the dying GI. just after the chaplain has explained the brotherhood of man or from the gangster who suddenly discovered his moll has been doublecrossing him all along. It's the Dawning Realization bromide and one of its great advantages is that the same tone of voice can be used (and is used) no matter what situation it finds itself in.

And now for a word from our sponsor. Say, friends, have you tried Bilgepump? A nationwide survey proves that Bilgepump corrects asthma in nine out of ten cases. (What sort of survey was that, chum?) A recent poll shows that 19 out of 20 dentists prefer Bilgepump. (How many of those dentists were going to vote for Dewey?) Yes, friends, scientific research proves conclusively that Bilgepump is better, smoother, faster-acting! (You scientific resarchers seen anything of Dr. Gallup lately?)

NEWS FROM the Land of Make-Believe: The Whiz Quiz program recently gave away an island in Minnesota stocked with wild and domestic animals and containing a house, a power station and a five-year supply of food. It was won by a man from New Jersey. He didn't say what he was going to do with it.

Cryptogram

DURING THE last decade there has been a trend in mystery fiction toward the cryptic which, I'm happy to report, reached ultimate expression last Sunday night in a drama called "The Storm," aforementioned herein. "The Storm," described by CBS as "a tense mystery," which it certainly was, differs from all other mysteries in my memory in that the audience was still enveloped in mystery when the final curtain fell.

My own state of confusion concerning what went on is intense but I'll do my best to explain it. Margaret Sullavan, making her television debut, gets mixed up with a pair of decidedly strange brothers, human cryptograms both of them, and, on a girlish impulse, marries one which should be a lesson in restraint to all impulsive girls.

Immediately after the ceremony, her husband (Dean Jagger), who up to that point sounded rational enough, goes Delphic, uttering enigmatic warnings about his war-crazed brother and remaining mute on all other subjects.

Presently the war-crazed brother shows up and, though I didn't think it was possible, he's even more laconic than the husband. From what little he says, Miss Sullavan and

Barter to Do 'Papa Is All' In Arlington Nov. 24

FOR THE second time this fall the Arlington Farms Auditorium will play host to Virginia's Barter Theater, whose play will be Patterson Greene's comedy of Pennsylvania Dutch life, "Papa Is All." The date is Wednesday, November 24.

Robert Porterfield's celebrated group is being presented under sponsorship of the Arlington Farms Recreation Council. The two leads are being played by Gordon Sommers and Elizabeth Wilson.

Arlington Farms is located just across Memorial Bridge beyond the Lincoln Memorial. Tickets for the play (with properly identified credentials) may be had for a discount by Government employes.

The group's in-town box offices are at Mrs. Stabler's Ticket Mart, 1616 K st., and Lubar's, 1300 G.

In Dual Roles You Get 2 Actors for Price of One

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 13 (U.P.).—Now that the pinch is on the Hollywood pocketbook, the dual role is back in style.

This way a studio gets two actors for the price of one. The guy takes two parts, economizing not only on salaries but on parking space and seats in the studio commissary.

The actor doesn't mind the extra work. He gets extra closeups, and it hardly matters if he upstages himself.

Movie-goers currently can see two Betty Grables in "Lady in Ermine," in which Miss G. acts her own ancestor. Then there's "Hollow Triumph," wherein Paul Henreid is a gangster and psychiatrist at the same time.

How Many Parkses?

COLUMBIA may give Larry Parks a dual role in "Jolson Sings Again." In one sequence Larry plays Al Jolson showing Larry Parks how to play Al Jolson.

Producer Sidney Buchman hasn't decided whether it would spoil the illusion if Larry played Al, with Al's voice, and Larry played Larry. (Maybe Jolson should play Parks with Larry's voice.)

"To Each His Own," another recent flicker, had John Lund as papa and son. Olivia de Havilland was two ladies in "Dark Mirror;" Bette Davis was her own rival in "A Stolen Life." "Wonder Man" had two Danny Kayes.

The economical dual role has been around since a short-reeler technician discovered how to mask half a film, take a scene, wind it back and expose the other half.

One of the earliest two-parters was Mary Pickford. She played "Little Lord Fauntleroy" in kneepants and his doting mother in skirts. This feat of nepotism was repeated when Ruth Chatterton was mama and daughter in "Right to Love." Mary also played a grand lady and her cockney maid in "Stella Maris."

Cartier Plays Here Friday

JACQUES CARTIER will be offering his noted "one-man theater" Friday night at 8:15 in the Sapphire Room of the Mayflower as part of the Charles Carroll Forum series.

His characterizations will include Shakespeare, Louis XIV, Killegrew, Edwin Booth, Mei-lan-fang and Stanislawski.

First choice of seats is reserved for season ticket holders for the forum series, but single admissions will be available at the door. Further information may be obtained from the Charles Carroll Forum Series, Catholic University, Washington 17, D. C.

The Music Box

Albanese Sings Here Today

L. to R.: Ernesto Lecuona, Cuban composer-pianist, in Constitution Hall November 22; Ginette Neveu, French violinist in Washington debut at Constitution Hall this afternoon; George Copeland, noted American pianist, tonight in the National Gallery; Dorothy Stahl and Barbara Troxell, soloists in Mozart's C Minor Mass tomorrow night in Washington Cathedral

NOT listed in any concert program for today is the appearance this afternoon at Washington Cathedral, of Licia Albanese, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera.

There, during the 4 o'clock service, opening the World's Week of Prayer and World Fellowship, Mme. Albanese will sing the Bach-Gounod Ave Maria. The Howard University Choir and the YWCA Choral Club will also sing.

The week is again populated by plenty of outstanding music. Notable items include Ginette Neveu's Washington debut this afternoon. The young French violinist has had magnificent notices wherever she has played. Her program is a fine one.

Tonight George Copeland plays a tremendous program at the National Gallery. Copeland is a pianist, all too little known whose Debussy can stand with Gieseking and Casadesus, and whose Bach and modern Spanish music is equally great.

TOMORROW evening the Cathedral Choral Society lists a brilliant array of music and solists, topped by Mozart's C Minor Mass. Blanche Thebom sings great music by Wolf and Liszt with the symphony Wednesday evening; Thursday, Rudolph Serkin and the Busch Quartet make music together in the Congressional Library. At the same time, Susannah Coleman's music will fill an evening at the Arts Club.

"Re-activated" seems to be the word these days, in Government gobbledygook. That's what's going to happen to the Agriculture Department's symphony orchestra. Under Frederick Fall, the orchestra will be organized in the near future. The Agriculture Choristers, directed by Sumner Spalding, enjoying their early strivings, are planning a performance of Kurt Weill's new folk opera, "Down in the Valley." Full resources (musical) of the department will fall in behind the orchestra and chorus, with soloists coming from the city at large. Looks as if the Department of Agriculture had more sense of responsibility to the town's musical life than some of our professional musicians.

Ernesto Lecuona, Cuban composer and pianist, will take over Constitution Hall on Monday, November 22, with a dancer, three singers, and a piano duo. Lecuona, widely known for his compositions, will appear as piano soloist.

The Washington Music Corps of Public School Teachers will play host to the National Capital In and About Music Educators' Club, next Saturday at 10 a. m., in Jefferson Junior High School, 8th and H sts. sw.

COMPOSERS hereabouts who are interested in performances of orchestral works should contact Hendrick Essers, conductor of the Washington Civic Orchestra.

One such composition lands on each of the orchestra's concerts through the season, which is more than the National Symphony can say.

Music-Q, a monthly guide to good music in Washington and on Washington radio stations, is subscribable through Box 6900, Washington 20, D. C. One dollar and fifty cents a year brings the paper to your door, and entitles you to a subscribers' discount of 20 per cent on all phonograph record purchases.

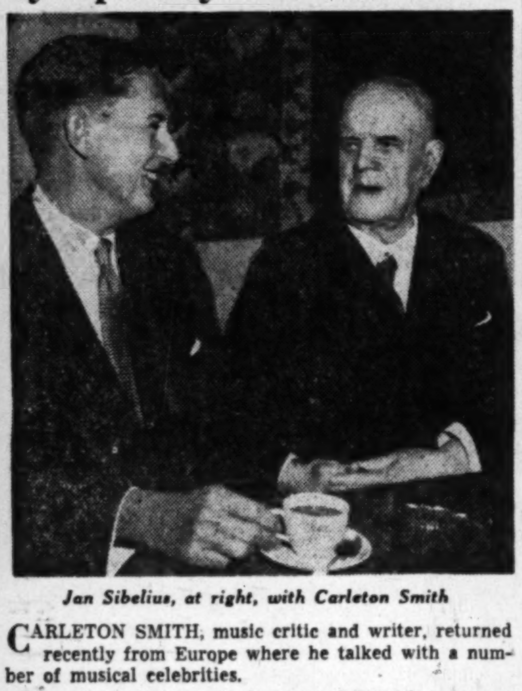
Decade Later, 8th Sibelius Symphony Unfinished



Jan Sibelius, at right, with Carleton Smith

CARLETON SMITH, music critic and writer, returned recently from Europe where he talked with a number of musical celebrities.

In a visit with Jan Sibelius, noted Finnish composer who will be 83 next month, Smith asked about the state of the composer's eighth symphony. (Years ago in an article in Esquire, Smith reported that the symphony was fully sketched out, but not yet worked out in detail.) More than a decade after the score was said to be outlined, it has not yet been heard by a world filled with Sibelius fans.

Orchestras throughout the world have played the symphonies of Sibelius. Complete cycles of all seven have been regular items on the schedules of more than one American orchestra. A phonograph company received enough requests for the works of Sibelius to record and sell seven albums of the Finnish composer's music, on a subscription basis.

Members of the composer's family told Carleton Smith of stacks of manuscripts lying around the studio where the octogenarian still works. Sibelius himself said of the eighth symphony, "It must be better than the seventh." In any event, it's still unfinished. Rightfully pleased with the world's reception of his music, the old giant hopes that someone will play his tone poem for orchestra with dramatic soprano, entitled, Luonnotar. It was written in the mighty period between the fourth and fifth symphonies.

Casals Scorns Franco Spain

Now, nearly 20 years later, with Casals still acknowledged as one of the world's greatest artists, the Littlehales story is brought up to date. Casals' unique art remains today on that mountain peak level where he has maintained it since his earliest years of playing. Today we must consider the man in his unhappy world, as well as the performing artist.

For Casals today is a political refugee from that part of the world he loves most, the Catalonia region of Spain. And Casals refuses to return to a Spain ruled by a dictator whose accession to power he denounced outspokenly for years. More than that, Casals will no longer play in countries where the Franco government is recognized. He says quite simply, "America has done so much; please understand that the policies of your country are against my ideas for my country. I love America, but I could not go to a country which I should criticize."

Who shall say that Casals is acting in anything but the most profound and selfless manner possible? He could make an enormous fortune in a single season in this country. He has been offered magnificent recording contracts, either here or in England. There are few artists who see the picture as does Casals, but then, there are few artists like him in either music or politics.

True, Casals does love America, and America loves Casals. It has been almost impossible for years to buy his mighty recordings of the Bach suites for unaccompanied 'cello—suites which he did more to make accessible to audiences than any other single artist. His recordings, both as 'cellist and as conductor of the Casals Orchestra in Barcelona are still treasured by those fortunate enough to own them.

The Littlehales book falls among several stones. There is far too much irrelevant material about the Spanish setting in a wordy chapter of that name. On the other hand, the general public, whom we hope will be interested in the book, will find little to interest them in the pages of discussion of fingering, or the important but intangible difference between "B double flat" and A natural.

One error in the book is attributed to Casals which is not credible. He is quoted as referring to the eight Brandenburg concertos of Bach, a slip of the printer rather than the great Bach interpreter.. And the list of recordings omits any mention of one of the finest sonata pressings ever made, that by Casals and Horszowski of the F Major sonata of Brahms.

Koussevitsky Has Spirit of Prokofieff

PROKOFIEFF: Classical Symphony; also: Chout: Danse finale. Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Koussevitsky. Victor 1241. $3.50.

For most of his glorious 25-year reign in Boston, Koussevitsky has been one of the few great protagonists of this musical champagne. It was one of his earliest Victor recordings, and I still treasure the two 12-inch singles on which it was pressed long ago.

The first movement has always been taken faster than the composer marks it. But it still sounds all right to me. It takes a rare conductor to play it at Prokofieff's tempo and keep it alive. Mitropoulos and the Minneapolis orchestra tried it for Columbia and failed not only in tempo but in phrasing, over-accentuation, and other signal matters. Golschmann and the St. Louis symphony do it better, but still too heavily. Ormandy misses the spirit of the work completely. This new recording has all the bite, sparkle, and bounce the music implies.

The excerpt from "Chout" leaves me moderately cool but it is a good bit to know about . . .

Saint-Saens: Samson et Dalila. Columbia OP-28. $21.50.

Here is a commendable performance of the entire Biblical opera-oratorio by Saint-Saens, which has for years held its own on opera stages in Europe and America. Any good contralto or mezzo can make herself ovations by singing the three silky arias allotted to the seductive villainess of the piece. Tenors also enjoy working out in the strong man role of Samson, though they are held down to two rather brief scenes.

This recording, made in Paris under the Metropolitan's current French conductor, Louis Fourestier, has a solid cast of fine artists. Helen Bouvier is the gal, Jose Luccioni her long-hair victim. Paul Cabanel is a worthy high priest, and Charles Cambon does well by Abimelech. The orchestra and chorus are particularly good. Miss Bouvier has less of the chesty tone we usually hear in the role in this country, but her conception is good in the work as a whole. If you have been wishing for Samson, here is a fine over-all production. The recording is very good.

The Samson set is one of a number of excellent European recordings, made fairly recently, which Columbia is releasing in this country under its own label. Some notable sets will follow soon.

Ruth Gordon in Fast Comeback

By Jack O'Brian

NEW YORK, Nov. 13 (AP).—Ruth Gordon, fresh from her recent flop play, "The Leading Lady," and Otto Kruger, recently one of the pleasanter aspects of a doleful and abortive comedy by Groucho Marx and Norman Krasna entitled "Time for Elizabeth," will be back on the Broadway boards soon.

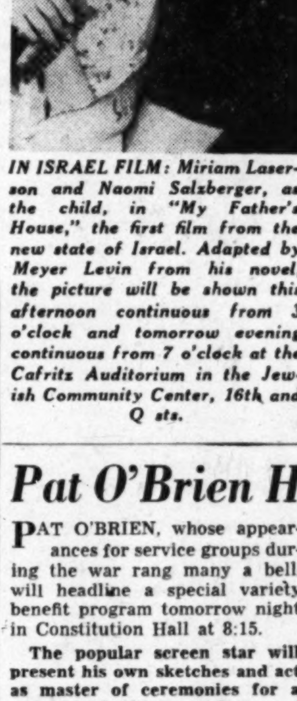
Matter of fact, they'll be co-starring in "The Smile of the World," new play by la Gordon's husband, Garson Kanin, author also of the incumbent, "Born Yesterday" . . . the comedy is set in Washington, 1923, and Kruger will play an associate U. S. Supreme Court justice; Miss Gordon will be the wife . . . There's a third important role to be filled, that of the justice's law clerk . . . Out-of-town tryout is scheduled for late December. [But not in Washington—Ed.] Broadway should have a peek at it in February or so . . . This will be the second production of the Playwrights' Company, first being "Anne of the Thousand Days," which has played host to some technical gremlins that now necessitate an entirely different physical production without turntables and other impressive gadgets as originally conceived by Playwright Maxwell Anderson.

JOHN CARRADINE, also recently of "The Leading Lady," in which he played a drama critic, now plays a ragpicker in "The Mad Woman of Chaillot" . . . Martita Hunt, young British lass who assembled some resplendent press clippings for her acting in "Great Expectations," also will be in the Jean Giraudoux drama, which Alfred de Liagre is producing . . . Vladimir Sokoloff, Nydia Westman and Estelle Winwood also have been signed, plus Clarence Derwent, who lost no time hopping from the swiftly demised "Minnie and Mr. Williams" into "The Mad Woman, etc."

JOSHUA LOGAN has joined Irving Berlin and Robert E. Sherwood in the production of the new musical, "Miss Liberty," into which he will stick his expert nose after he finishes the direction of the new Rodgers and Hammerstein musical, "Tales of the South Pacific."

MARY ANDERSON has been dotted-lined for "Jenny Kissed Me," which will star the very good actor, Leo G. Carroll . . . Broadway show tunes well up on the popularity parade are "My Darling, My Darling" from "Where's Charley," and "Here I'll Stay," from "Love Life" . . . Having understudied Mary Martin in the touring "Annie, Get Your Gun" with such aplomb that many a talent scout proferred contracts. Yvonne Adair finally has signed for "Lend an Ear," starring and produced by William R. Katzell and Franklin Gilbert as coproducers . . . The Hollywood version continues, says the press agent, to packed houses . . . Brock Pemberton is off to London to direct and produce the West End version of "Harvey," with Sid Field in the main visible role.

In CASE any nasty folks have been saying "Magdalena" can't last withal its operatic content, the management sends along the happy information it will be staying on more or less permanently at the Ziegfeld Theater, and to that end has seats on sale well into the new year. . . . Ethel Merman and the whole acting and technical crew and full orchestra of "Annie, Get Your Gun" will give a performance for wounded former service guys at the Bronx Veterans Hospital next Sunday, November 21. . . . It will be the first time in the musical's 2½-year Broadway run that a performance will be given outside the Imperial Theater. . . Patricia Kirkland, daughter of former Film Star Nancy Carroll and Playwright (Tobacco Road) Jack Kirkland, will be in Vinton Freedley's new production, "The Young and Fair."



IN ISRAEL FILM: Miriam Laserson and Naomi Salzberger, as the child, in "My Father's House," the first film from the new state of Israel. Adapted by Meyer Levin from his novel, the picture will be shown this afternoon continuous from 3 o'clock and tomorrow evening continuous from 7 o'clock at the Cafritz Auditorium in the Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts.

Rey at U. M. Dance

Alvino Rey, the guitarist, and his orchestra will appear at a dance in the University of Maryland armory Wednesday night from 9 until midnight for the benfit of the Municipal Police Association of Prince Georges County.

Miss Coleman Offering Her Own Music Thursday

Thursday evening the Arts Club will present a concert of music by Susannah Coleman.

COLEMAN

Works for voice and piano, one and two violins and piano, and piano solos and duos will be included in a program of breadth and variety. The composer will appear as pianist and accompanist in several pieces.

Recent years have disclosed Susannah Coleman's unusual gifts as a writer of songs and a variety of solo and chamber works. Thursday evening's concert includes music which has been heard in Washington before, and some compositions in premieres.

Poems for Coleman songs are drawn from James Joyce, Amy Lowell, Mother Goose, and modern poets. Artists appearing with Mrs. Coleman include Fanny Ross Henbest and Margaret Tolson, pianists; Cecilia Mahoney and Jean Heers, violinists, and Ina Holtzscheiter, soprano.

Pat O'Brien Here Tomorrow

PAT O'BRIEN, whose appearances for service groups during the war rang many a bell, will headline a special variety benefit program tomorrow night in Constitution Hall at 8:15.

The popular screen star will present his own sketches and act as master of ceremonies for a two-and-a-half-hour show of music, dance and comedy.

The benefit is being sponsored by the Washington "City of Hope" Auxiliary to aid the Los Angeles Sanatorium and National Medical Center. The sanatorium was established 35 years ago for the treatment of tuberculosis and has now branched out into treatment for other long-term diseases. Patients from all parts of the country are received without charge.

Tickets for the O'Brien show are available at the Willard Hotel ticket office, Mrs. Stabler's mart at 1616 K st. and in Lubar's, 1300 G st.

Blind Players Do 'Arsenic' Friday Night

MEMBERS of the District Association of Workers for the Blind will present "Arsenic and Old Lace" Friday night at Lisner Auditorium.

Each member of the cast of the play is either totally or almost totally blind. The group has been rehearsing for over three months with Mrs. Ruth Shnider as their director. The roles were learned from braille copies prepared by Mrs. Franklin A. Stenko.

Members of the cast include Lenora Marquis, Lola Ball, William Garrett, Jerome Beuchert, John Schroth, Gustave Johnson, Dorothy O'Day, Vernon Creamer, Irvin Bast, John Paul Jones, Bernard Nichols, Edmund Browning, jr., David Thomas and Edward Bailey.

The performance is a benefit for the group's plan to construct a permanent camp and recreation site for the blind of this vicinity. Mrs. Harold H. Burton, wife of the Supreme Court Justice, heads a list of sponsors which includes Mrs. Truman.

Further information from the association's headquarters in the Albee Building or District 7697.

Play Tryouts

The Midtown Players of the YMCA will hold public tryouts tomorrow night for Thornton Wilder's one-act play, "The Long Christmas Dinner." The lobby lounge of the Central "Y" at 1736 G st. is the setting for the auditions, which will begin at 8 o'clock. Nonmembers of the Y are eligible for parts.

Howard Play Opening

The Howard University Players are presenting "The Wild Duck," by Hendrik Ibsen, directed by Dr. Anne Cooke and with set by James W. Butcher, jr., on November 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, with Spaulding Hall on the Howard campus; curtain at 8:30. For reservations call DUpont 6100.

Pianist Gets Lead Role

Pianist Florence Mercur will play the lead role in a musical short, "No Path to Glory," to be filmed beginning in December in New York and Hollywood.

Cryptic's Very Well, but . . .

I gathered that Mr. Jagger was not to be trusted either. About this time I began to get a little worried about Miss Sullavan, who had been parked in a lonely country house, and Miss Sullavan got a little nervous, too.

Honey of a Storm

MYSTERIOUS letters arrive which upset Mr. Jagger but it is never explained who wrote them or what is in them. The storm of the title breaks—and it is a honey. Miss Sullavan discovers a body in the cellar but she doesn't say whose body and we're never even told who made a corpse of it.

By that time we seasoned mystery fans were well aware that one of the brothers was trying to do in Miss Sullavan and, while we have long since ceased to expect a motive for these psychiatric killings, it has been customary to tell us who to be afraid of. In this case we weren't. Miss Sullavan simply drove off in the rainy night wondering aloud who had laid to rest that body in the cellar and whether his homicidal plans included her.

This is taking the cryptic a little too far. Considerably exasperated, I called CBS the next day to find out who did what to whom and what happened to them. Worthington Miner, who adapted the story and directed the television play, explained apologetically that Miss Sullavan had inadvertently covered an all-important clew, the handkerchief, but even this left an awful lot up in the air.

Notable Job

DESPITE its lamentable lack of explanation, "The Storm" was a handsome essay in terrorism and a notable production if only for its excellent camera work, its lighting and the use of films to give spaciousness and dimension to the small television stages. There were about 3½ minutes of film shrewdly interwoven—street scenes, a scene through a car window and another through a train window, a bus terminal—and so smooth was the transposition from film to live acting that CBS received a lot of phone calls asking if the whole production wasn't on film.

In her television debut, Miss Sullavan was as usual warm and vital, though perhaps a shade too breathless. Her husky whisper has become through the years a trifle too mannered and Miss Sullavan, I think, ought to ease up in that direction. Mr. Jagger, as one of the enigmatic brothers, was required chiefly to be impassive and that he was to a degree rarely seen in these parts since the disappearance of the cigar store Indian, if that's any commendation.

The radio version of Studio One, once one of the most distinguished dramas on the air, is now to be found thinly disguised under the name of the Ford Theater. It's nice to see the old title again in the new medium of television and I hope the old standards will be maintained. CBS plans within a few months to have an hour-long dramatic production of Studio One on television every other Sunday night (7:30 p. m. EST) and to have the television Ford Theater taking up alternate Sundays at the same time. Most of them, I trust, will be a little more explicit than "The Storm."

Simultaneous Telecasting Of Radio Shows Coming

By Wayne Oliver

NEW YORK, Nov. 13 (AP).—You may yet be able to see your favorite radio programs on television.

When the new medium got the go-ahead signal at the end of the war, the predominant school of thought was that television would have its own shows entirely separate from those of radio.

That pattern has been followed for the great majority of television programming. However, there has been a slow but steady increase in simultaneous telecasting of radio shows that may develop into a significant trend.

If the trend should continue, it might bring many top radio stars to the television screen sooner than would be possible if separate shows were presented.

The big factor involved is cost. A good television show costs as much and in many cases more than a comparable radio show. But when a program can be broadcast on radio and televised simultaneously, the total cost is considerably less than for two separate shows, although still more than for radio alone.

Even if television duplication of radio shows should expand, however, it would be regarded more or less as an expedient until several million sets are in the hands of the public. Then sponsors will be more inclined to spend five-figure sums each week to produce shows designed only for television.

An example of the saving through duplication is "We the People," which costs some $9000 a week on the CBS radio network and only $1800 a week more to telecast simultaneously on the CBS video network. On the other hand, "Star Theater" costs about $7500 a week on the ABC radio network and slightly over $7500 for the separate NBC television version.

The visual appeal of straight radio programs is evidenced by the studio audiences of five million a year attracted by programs of the four major networks—ABC, CBS, Mutual and NBC. Network officials say several times that many would see the programs if enough seats were available to meet all requests.

Radio shows now being televised simultaneously include "Break the Bank" and "Town Meeting of the Air" on ABC, and "We the People" on CBS, with "Talent Scouts" due to join the list December 6.

Three of Mutual's top programs originating in Hollywood also are telecast by the Don Lee television station KTSL. A number of individual television stations have been telecasting the programs of radio affiliates.

YOU might think the average person would be more frightened before the television camera than the radio microphone, but NBC's Ben Grauer finds the reverse to be true.

Grauer, in radio since 1930 and television since 1939, says: "I'm amazed by the complete ease of handling people in front of the television camera as compared with radio."

The explanation, he thinks, is that "in television you more closely approximate a natural situation" in which the microphone does not dominate the scene as in radio. Also, he adds, the pace is more natural in television because you know you're being seen as well as heard and don't feel that it's so urgent to "keep the air hot" with conversation.

The radio broadcasting industry, celebrating its twenty-eighth anniversary next week, now boasts 1854 standard stations and 662 frequency stations on the air and some 72 million sets in use. The totals for the newest member of the broadcasting family—television—are 42 stations on the air and about 700,000 sets in use. New radio sets are coming off the manufacturers' assembly lines at the rate of a million a month and new television sets at about 90,000 a month.

New table radio sets with frequency modulation reception include one by RCA Victor for $59.95—$20 less than the company's previous lowest priced FM set . . . . Raytheon's subsidiary Belmont Radio Co., of Chicago plans to come out soon with a new table model television set with 10-inch picture tube. . . . radio repairmen from Maine, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New Hampshire will gather in Boston Monday for three days of briefing on installation and repair of television sets at an industry sponsored town meeting of radio technicians.

Video Gets Along Without Code

New York, Nov. 13 (AP).—Television, unlike its more experienced radio alma mater, has been getting along so far without a code of good program practices of its own. It apparently intends to continue doing so for some time to come.

But pending such developments as gaining more experience, the board of directors of the Television Broadcasters Association has adopted a proposal of its code committee. This, in effect, recommends that for the time being television in general follow the rules of good practices as covered in the codes of the National Association of Broadcasters and the Motion Picture Association.

Radio History Is Traced in Terms of Law

RADIO AND TELEVISION LAW, by Harry P. Warner (Matthew Bender & Co., Albany).

THIS is a history of broadcasting—both radio and television—with all the multiplication of rules and regulations that has marked its development, written for owners of radio stations or anyone interested in the laws and history governing them.

It is an ambitious tome—more than 1000 pages—bound so that changes that affect the subject may be added as they occur. The author is a Washington lawyer who has specialized in radio law for many years.

It deals with all the problems of radio. It tells how to get a license, how to start operation, with all the rules given and discussed. It tells how channels are allocated, gives engineering rules and standards.

It also goes into detail on what can and what cannot be broadcast, with a timely discussion of political broadcasts and the purpose of the rule affecting them.

In this respect it has a chapter on the program standards of the networks as well as those of the National Association of Broadcasters. Current standards of advertising are explained along with the Blue Book effect upon them. It gives a full review of defamation by radio, and the problems incident to it. The general principle of freedom of speech is discussed, with appropriate references.

It is up to date. It deals at length with Frequency Modulation and leaves space for looseleaf additions to this chapter as new developments take place.

In the legal discussions, it gives the basis for regulation of broadcasting, with probable amendments to the Communications Act. All bills introduced in Congress since 1934 are listed, with the last bill explained section by section and the purposes analyzed.

Radio Takes A Look at TV Tonight

lion dollars worth of transmitters.

After the set's innards have been tested, cabinets made at RCA plants in Virginia are lowered over them and attached. The highly polished wood is protected by flannel covers.

Before being boxed at the end of the line, the sets are given a thorough polishing—and refinishing if necessary. The boxing, incidentally, is done with the same cartons in which the cabinets come from Virginia. Already printed when they arrive, they are emptied and put on conveyors which carry them along the ceiling to the end of the line where they come to earth to cover the finished sets.

This same double use of cartons is practiced at the tube manufacturing plant in Lancaster, Pa., which is in all particulars a marvel of smooth operation.

Using many more mechanical devices than is possible in the assembling and wiring processes accomplished at Camden, the Lancaster plant looks like an illustration in a vocational guidance textbook, labeled "modern, air-conditioned, well-lighted factory."

(A second article, about television tube production in the RCA Lancaster (Pa.) plant, will appear next Sunday.)

NBC IS UP to its neck in television but has not made deliberate mention of video on its radio channels to date. However tonight at 11:05 (WRC) the "Living, 1948" series will deal with TV. The script by Lou Hazam, who is often asked to turn science into something both understandable and palatable for NBC listeners, closes with a quote from FCC Chairman Wayne Coy suggesting that it's as foolish to wait for the ultimate in TV set design before buying a receiver as it is to wait from year to year for the ultimate in automobile design. The broadcast is to mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of the invention of the first television camera tube by Dr. V. K. Zworykin of RCA.

CBS, by the way, has just completed a five-day discussion of "You and Television" in its "You and . . ." series conducted by Lyman Bryson. It's heard on WTOP at 11:15 p. m. weekdays.

National Radio Week starts today. Let me see now, on Labor Day we suspend all labor, so during Radio Week why don't we . . . Nah! Can't get any cooperation on that idea.

Judith Evelyn, most famous for her performance in "Angel Street," will play "Camille" tonight at 9 on the "Philco Television Playhouse" over WNBW.

"Esther," by Kermit Love and Robert Moore, is tonight's "Actors' Studio" presentation. Margaret Phillipps, Will Hare and Jocelyn Brando will appear. It's 8:30 p. m. on WMAL-TV.

Agnes Moorehead, who has already appeared on the air four times in "Sorry, Wrong Number," will repeat her performance again Thursday night at 9 over WTOP-CBS.

15 Area Hospitals Get TV

PATIENTS in 15 Washington area hospitals are now enjoying television programs, as a result of the Hospital Television Campaign concluded recently by Bill Herson of Station WRC.

Since August 7, Herson has been asking listeners on his WRC "Timekeeper" broadcasts each morning to send donations. Contributions as the campaign ended totaled $3628.26 which was used to purchase television receivers for the following hospitals:

Naval Medical Center, Glen Dale Sanatorium, Casualty Hospital, Sibley Memorial Hospital, Gallinger Hospital, Freedmen's Hospital, St. Elizabeth's Hospital, George Washington Hospital, Emergency Hospital, Walter Reed General Hospital, Garfield Hospital, Arlington Hospital, Suburban Hospital (Bethesda, Md.), Prince Georges Hospital (Cheverly, Md.), and Providence Hospital.

After purchase of the receivers, a balance of $78.92 remained in the fund. That amount will be turned over by Herson to the American Cancer Society.

All television receivers purchased were made available to the Hospital Television Campaign at cost by local television distributors who also provided installation and service warranty at no cost.

Distaff Side Keeps Richmond Busy

By Marian H. Barre

"OUR GANG" is down in Richmond pursuing the masterpoint in the Old Dominion Tournament which ends tonight at the John Marshall. It's the last tourney the troupers will attend until the Winter Nationals draw everybody to Florida for the big show at Miami Beach from December 4 to 12 inclusive. The Roney Plaza is the hotel chosen this year.

Due no doubt to many social bridge activities of the feminine contingent, more men than women went to Richmond. Late last week only one distaff foursome had filed entry blanks for the open team match today. The lineup of that quartette was Mrs. M. R. Reddy, Mrs. Tom Hamlin, Mrs. H. S. Klein and Miss Kathleen McNutt. Among the male stars playing are Dr. W. H. Gorton, J. G. Stone, C. C. Johnson, Miller Roberts, Dr. N. J. McHugh, David Murray, W. A. Poissant, et al.

Local masterpoint opportunities this week include games at the La Salle Studios tomorrow evening; at the Washington Bridge League Wednesday at 8 p. m. in Hotel Roosevelt; at Euclid Studios, a Saturday matinee beginning at 1 p. m.

Some interesting statistics were submitted by George Beynon at the October executive committee meeting of the ACBL held at the Allerton Hotel; out of 16,777 active members of that organization (exclusive of the western division) there are only 3337 "masters," meaning players holding 10 or more master points. The percentage seems surprisingly small. In a city like Washington, where "nearly everybody is a master," mere rating point games are apt to be disregarded, the tendency being to patronize only the monthly events. This practice could kill the goose that lays the golden egg since masterpoint "sanctions" are extended only to weekly clubs. The whole masterpoint plan may come up for discussion by the new board of governors, which starts functioning on December 1.

Latest issue of the Washington Bridge League Bulletin carries rules governing eligibility for participation in the league's prize series ending on December 29. These contests are for members only. With 17 pair games in the series, each member must play at least 10 games, having at least three different partners during that time; also he must play a minimum of four games within his own group. The A group includes members holding 30 or more masterpoints; all other members rank in the B group. Three prizes will be awarded in each group on the basis of individual percentages, all games being counted without "throw-out" privileges. In the team series, where four prizes in all are in competition, the attendance qualification is 7 games out of the scheduled 10. Both contests began in September.

IT HAS BEEN the custom for the Women's Auxiliary to collect toys each Christmas for Children's Hospital, holding a special game when gifts were accepted in lieu of entry fees. At a meeting of the executive committee on November 10 at Euclid Studios, it was voted to take up the toy collection this year at the regular Washington Bridge League match on December 1 at Hotel Roosevelt. (Members who prefer may make a money contribution instead.) The committee also voted to give a Christmas donation to children who are wards of Central Union Mission. Arrangements for all holiday activities will be completed at the bimonthly meeting of the Auxiliary on November 27, when Mrs. H. G. Campbell will preside.

Programs for the Philadelphia Whist Association tournament on November 20 and 21 are now in circulation; events include women's, men's, and mixed pairs. The games will be held at Hotel John Bartram in the Quaker City.

Recent master point winners:

At the Count Club—a north-south tie between Miss K. McNutt-Mrs. Margaret Fisher, and F. P. Dormandy and Robert Wilson; east-west, Mrs. Elizabeth Count and Harry Shinnick 2d, Mrs. Dora Schwartz and Col. J. G. Seabourne.

At the Agriculture Bridge Club monthly—Mrs. Dixie T. Wright and A. E. Lane, north-west 2d, Mrs. Seabourne and Lynn Carrier; east-west, a tie between Paul Kalavski-Al Camire, and Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Rosson.

At Arlington Farms, Mrs. Helen Evans and Mrs. Florence Ganyard, in one position; in the other—Miss McNutt and Col. Henry A. Walker. Half-points went to Mrs. Bess Nolan, Capt. Alton D. Neale, Mrs. T. M. Boyle and Mrs. Wright.

Idea of Removing Plate Numbers Is Surprising

By William M. Stuart

ALL STAMP collectors interested in plate blocks are surprised at the suggestion to remove plate numbers from mint sheets. Such a move is under serious consideration, it is said. There are so many collectors purchasing plate numbers it is impossible to fill orders promptly, consequently the work of the Philatelic Agency has been greatly hindered.

It is true that postal officials have been considering this question from all angles, but nothing has been heard officially as yet and it is possible no action will be taken.

There are several reasons for the present situation. For instance, the enormous demand for plate numbers from collectors was featured with requests calling for disregard of established agency regulations. The plate block collector at times has been unreasonably critical of the Postoffice Department, many resenting regulations considered the only successful way to handle sales of blocks. Some philatelists believe the removal of all plate numbers, if this should come to pass, could be traced mainly to the enormous demand for such items without due regard to rules and observance thereof.

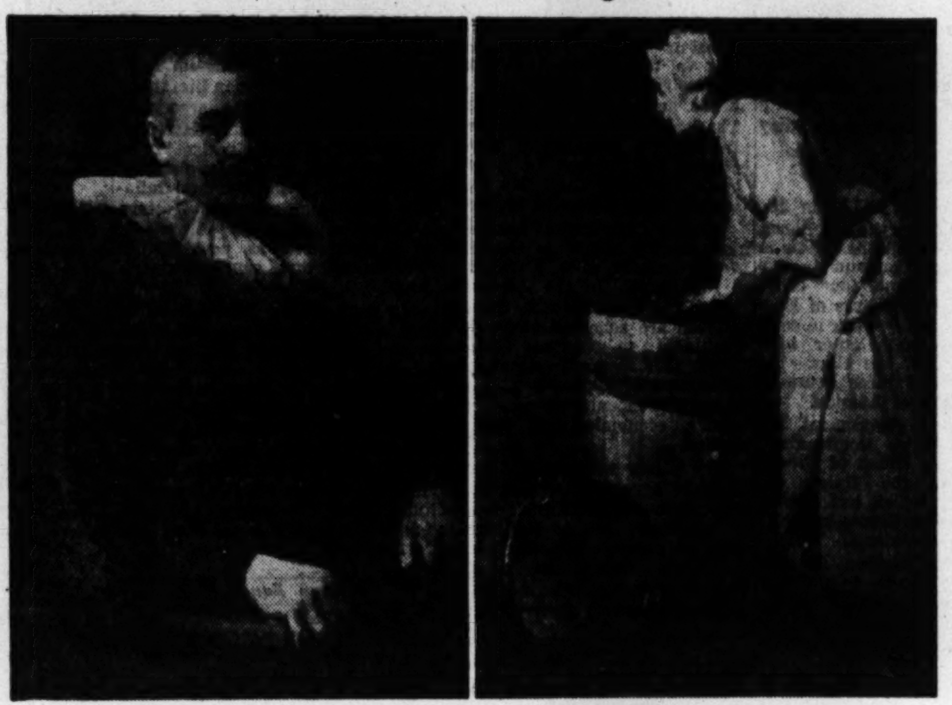
Washington Art Show

1000 Are Called, Only 19 Chosen



Rembrandt's "Man in Armchair," left, and Chardin's "Woman With a Saucepan," both on exhibit as part of the rehung Clark Collection at the Corcoran Gallery

By Jane Watson Crane

THE CORCORAN Gallery of Art, established nearly 80 years ago for the express purpose of encouraging American art, has in Hermann Williams, jr., a director who has bent every effort to live up to the original objective. Three years ago he began a series of annual exhibitions open to all the artists of Washington and vicinity. To make the selections and awards this year, the Corcoran invited an out-of-town jury composed of Dorothy Grafly, Philadelphia art critic, and Walter Stuempfig, jr., Philadelphia painter, to serve with Willis Woods, the Assistant Director.

This jury was evidently in no mood to pick a show representative of the region or to give any quarter to creative effort. They decided to crack down, to use the show as a means of hitting the local artists over the head. The long and short of it is that they chose 19 out of 1000 entries submitted and refused to give any award but one, for sculpture.

The statement which the jury made to accompany this action, is short, terse, and to the point—their point. The key to the point of view is in the first sentence, 'The business of being an artist is a serious one." Throughout there is not one word to indicate that art is a creative process, or as Thomas Mann put it "an enrichment of reality." The jury took its mission seriously, setting its own rigid standards and proceeding with such firmness it is a miracle they came up with any entries at all. One more notch in their level of achievement and everything might have been thrown out.

Purpose to Review

WE CAN picture the contentment on the faces of those who will nod their heads sagely and remark, "Well and good. It's about time!" We submit that to handle a community enterprise of this nature and purpose in the manner chosen by this jury is not well and good—it's ridiculous.

The aim was not to pick a group for posterity, to anticipate the old masters of 1948; but to review the work of this section and to choose, in so far as can be judged on first acquaintance, the accomplishments deemed most worthy of presentation to the community as a whole.

The jury-picked exhibition goes on view November 20. It will be discussed in this column next Sunday. In response to a request by artist groups of Washington and vicinity, the Corcoran has agreed to permit one entry by each individual who submitted work, to be displayed in an entirely separate show. Over four hundred entries will thus be given space, and the community will have the opportunity to do their own reviewing.

Reopening Now

CONSIDERING that the Corcoran Gallery has been engaged in a complete rehanging of the Clark Collection, and the Staff is taxed to capacity with work in preparation for the Biennial, to offer the hospitality of its facilities to a big display of local talent is a concession that entails inconvenience as well as generosity. The Clark Collection, which reopens this weekend, will not be affected. But some of the permanent collection may have to come down to make space for the influx.

Seven galleries were redecorated during the summer to accommodate the 180 Dutch, French, and American paintings in the Clark Collection. Works are hung for the first time in historical sequence, those of the nineteenth century being greatly in the majority.

The Clark group reflects the rage for Corots, which existed at the time among collectors in this country. There is also a strong predilection for the Barbizon School of French painting. Among the Dutch group, Rembrandt's "Man in an Armchair" predominates. Chardin's "Woman With a Saucepan" is another prized possesion. Of unusual interest is a series of panel paintings by Monticelli, a sensitive artist who is not well known, if anything, apt to be under-rated in this country.

The Clark Collection came into possession of the Corcoran in 1926, and was opened to the public two years later, after a special addition had been completed to house it. Besides the paintings, it includes more than 500 other objects. The Herat rugs, which have been on special display recently, are part of the Clark bequest; also sculpture, drawings, tapestries, and a sizable group of items in majolica.

Leesburg Club Show Friday

THE WASHINGTON Sculptors Group has been invited to show in the second annual exhibition of the Hot Sketch Club of Leesburg, Va., which opens in Loudoun County Courthouse next Friday at 8 p. m. and will continue on view through the weekend. This is a departure in two respects. It marks the first time that a group of sculptors of this section has undertaken to organize and transport a traveling show; it is also the first time that the historic courthouse in Leesburg has shown contemporary work. Fifty water colors and oils will be exhibited, in addition to 25 pieces of sculpture sent from Washington. The Hot Sketch Club was organized in 1944; it includes among its members several artists whose work has been exhibited in the big metropolitan centers.

The National Gallery of Art has announced the acquisition of a painting by Ralph Earl, early American portraitist. This is the third oil by Earl to enter the gallery's permanent collection of American art and the first full-length portrait by him. The gift of Mrs. W. Murray Crane, it is a portrait of "Daniel Boardman."

A series of new water colors by Eliot O'Hara, recollections of tours in England, Ireland, and Norway, will be shown at Chequire House in Alexandria startin December 15. The group will include about 35 items.

Putting Covers on Art Ticklish Job

By W. G. Rogers

NEW YORK, Nov. 13 (AP).—Between the framed art masterpiece hanging in a museum or collector's home and the color reproduction of it in a book, there are many ticklish steps.

Nothing must happen to the invaluable painting—that's the first and most important consideration. But something sometimes does, says Charles W. Beck, jr., whose Beck Engraving Co. is perhaps the largest of its kind in this country.

If the painting is highly varnished, it acts like a mirror, picking up every object in the room, including even the photographer. Once Beck's photographer carried a shiny, glittering masterpiece outdoors to try a different light; in the changed atmosphere it began to give off loud, protesting cracks and had to be rushed back indoors into the temperature to which it was adjusted. Another one set down in the bright sunlight got overheated and the varnish started to run.

If the painting is in Chicago or San Francisco and the engraver in New York or Philadelphia, where Beck's plants are located, he has to make at least one long and expensive trip. Or he can borrow the painting, but museums dislike to loan their treasures to shops, and Beck dislikes it, too; once when he had an original in his place, he was so scared of possible damage that he swore never to borrow another.

Rembrandt Toughest

THANKS to more skillful photographers, etchers and pressmen and improved photographic negatives, inks and electrotypes, it's possible to do a much better job now than several decades ago. Even so, Beck acknowledges, the wrinkles aren't all ironed out.

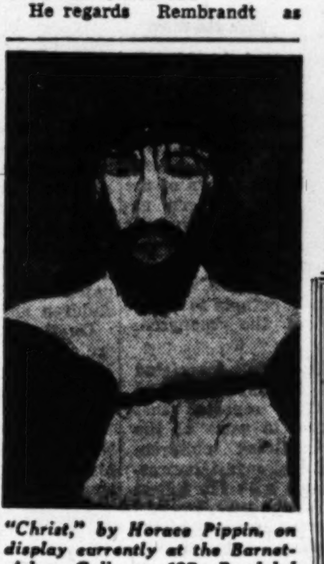
He regards Rembrandt as about the hardest painter to reproduce, because of his heavy, dark passages. The hardest Rembrandt he knows is the National Gallery's "The Mill," which was one of 85 he turned into color on paper for a recent volume about the Washington museum's priceless collection. Beck has never seen two reproductions that looked the same of the celebrated Gainsborough "Blue Boy;" the trouble in reproduction, as it was for the artist himself, is the blue.

Hard to Match

AMONG THOSE where the color proved particularly hard to match are Botticelli's "The Adoration of the Magi," because of the many color details; Giovanni Bellini's "The Feast of the Gods" and Giorgione's "The Adoration of the Shepherds," because of the weight and body of the color; Renoir's "Luncheon of the Boating Party," because of the reds.

To get the brown used in "Joshua Henshaw," by Copley, Beck had to use some color on each of the four copper plates which are required for this, as for every other painting in the volume.

Beck contradicts the occasional museum claim that better color reproductions can be made in Europe than here. The essentials for first-rate results, as he defines them, are the desire to do well, the time, and the money.



"Christ," by Horace Pippin, on display currently at the Barnet-Aden Gallery, 127 Randolph pl. nw.

Stubbs Show At Whyte's

Kenneth Stubbs, of the Corcoran Art School faculty, is having his first one-man show in Washington at the Whyte Gallery. A first impression of these carefully composed canvases in clear color is one of respect for conscientious execution and the knowledge of principles behind the work; of regret that it seems so cold and lifeless.

The painting by Grandma Moses, which the 88-year-old painter kindly donated to the Red Feather Campaign, was shown here in Washington at the National Collection of Fine Arts and has since started a tour of the country. Depicting a children's home, Grandma Moses' oil is being used as symbol and stimulus for Community Chest drives throughout the country.

An exhibition of prints by the Negro artist, Dox Thrash, will be shown through the month at the Smithsonian Division of Graphic Arts. Thrash, through the Federal Art Project in Philadelphia, had the chance to experiment with his media which resulted in a development of his own—the "carbograph," a combination carborundum-mezzotint. Carbographs and etchings make up the present show, an individual display of unusual interest.

The Mexican Embassy is sponsoring an exhibition of paintings of Mexico by a French painter, Maurice Saint-Lou, at the United Nations Club.

not all education comes from books

MAYBE you saw that shocking article in a recent national magazine on some fine boys from fine homes who had inexplicably slid down the road to juvenile delinquency.

In a later issue, the magazine published a letter from a woman reader commenting on the article. Her diagnosis of the trouble: Not a single one of those boys had ever earned a cent of his own!

The Washington Post once had a carrier who arrived at the branch office to pick up his papers bright and early every morning—in a chauffeur-driven Cadillac. That kid didn't need to earn his own money, in the sense that his father couldn't give him all he wanted. But he did need to earn his own, in the sense of giving him the feeling of responsibility, independence, self-reliance that his father wanted that boy to have.

Some Post carriers are janitors' sons; some are the sons of generals. Some need the profits* from their Post routes to help the family. Others use those profits for pocketmoney, or a college nest-egg, or to buy a scooter or go to camp next summer. But all of them have this in common: They learn from their Post routes what no book can teach them. They learn from experience how to handle people, what it means to have an obligation, how the world regards the faithful performance of a task, how to handle money, how to force oneself to stick to a self-imposed duty.

Good lessons for a boy to learn.

The Washington Post

*Post carriers are not employes. They buy their papers at a wholesale price, sell their papers and their delivery service at retail. The difference is their profit. Here is the first introduction most American boys get to the world of free enterprise. Why not give your boy to learn it, too? Phone NAtional 4200 and ask Mr. McKay if there's a route open in your neighborhood.

The Headmaster

U. S. Putting School First In Germany

By Fred M. Hechinger

MUNICH (via Airmail).—At a recent conference of U. S. education officials in Berchtesgaden General Clay moved the reorientation program to a place of top priority. Since there is little point in arguing whether that realization should not have come three years ago, it remains only to be pointed out that priority is hardly sufficient: the crux of the problem today is the fact that we no longer have any real influence over German education.

The time for the "imposition" of a school reform—if such action had even been possible at all—is irrevocably past. Things have deteriorated so far that emphasis on a new "structure" would be wasted effort.

The question now is tactical: How soon can a maximum of democratic, progressive teachers be brought into the schools? How soon can acceptable, new books be offered as support to insecure, young teachers? How soon can the school be opened to all children? How soon can all children hope to become the foundation for teacher-selection?

Fortunately the question of textbook, at least, is now to its final solution. Funds, material and labor for some 16 million are available for the American zone. After three years of heartbreaking delays that battle is about to be won.

Two Big Factors

ALL OTHER questions, however, depend on two factors: when will German officialdom be defeated in its active and passive fight against democracy? When will the universities—still the principal source for the nation's teachers—cease to be strongholds of reaction, if not of outright totalitarianism?

"If I want to discuss an important university matter with a member of the United States Military Government education division, I simply ask for an appointment," said Dieter S., medical student at Munich University. "But if I then try to get some satisfaction from the officials at our own Ministry of Education, I don't even get beyond the secretary's desk. Don't you see that all progressive action dies right there?"

We have continued to delude ourselves into believing that the introduction of free elections has turned Germany into a democracy. In fact, there is not a single official in a single German ministry today who has been elected by the people. All of them are party politicians and practically all of them are graduates of the totalitarian school. By giving them power and responsibility we have succeeded in thwarting the democratic, anti-Nazi German citizen.

"If you wanted a new German military force," laughed one Munich student who had been in the forefront of the fight against Hitlerism and Stalinism, "you'd simply have to take down the present sign at the Ministry of Education and replace it with that of the army command. The personnel is almost interchangeable."

'Less Objectionable'

THAT WAS, of course, a belligerent exaggeration. But in fact one of the men in the top echelon is Dr. Hans Meinzolt, who made his first nationalistic speech in Augsburg in 1936. He was a lieutenant colonel in the army in 1945 and held the position of commander of the Bavarian defense area (Wehrkreiskommandant). As late as October 1945—long after the demise of the German army—he wrote a letter of academic recommendation for a high-ranking fellow officer and signed it "Lieut. Col. Army Reserve (retired)."

On December 13, 1946, United States counterintelligence, in a special report, declared Meinzolt "does not possess the qualities necessary for the development of democracy in Germany." Today it must be admitted that the removal of Meinzolt might not be wise since he is classified by progressive educators as less objectionable than many of his colleagues.

Meinzolt, like so many others, would probably point out that he has never been a Nazi. But it is still not widely enough realized that the German nationalist is as dangerous as the Fascist. "I am a good German," said a student, "but I wish you people would understand the danger of our native nationalism. Germans haven't learned to show national pride without being aggressive."

Started With Bismarck

PROFESSOR SCHUCKING, noted liberal Anglicist at Erlangen, pointed out that the German militaristic, semi-Fascist tradition started with Bismarck and has become an accepted legend. He pointed to the systematic falsification of history which has dominated German teaching since 1870. Coupled with the dictatorial attitude of the German official this background has continued Germany around the same vicious circle of which Hitler was only the final vicious turn.

The only way to lead out of that circle is to break it. Our fear of "undemocratic imposition" has resulted in a weakening of the democratic forces which—no matter how weak already—had survived Nazi oppression. Most American observers agree that there are many Germans who would choose the way of democracy if we had helped them in smashing the official, reactionary crust. That crust, preserved in the name of democracy, is stifling all progress.

Recently a group of students at Munich argued the question of school reform on a radio forum with their professors. One of them, confronted with the official excuse that there was not enough money available to finance the reform, answered bluntly: "Then why can you afford to pay pensions to army officers?"

When the broadcast was presented to the public, this "offensive" reference had been cut out of the record. The Bavarian Ministry of Education had used its power to censor a democratic question out of the state-controlled program.

"You tell us that it would be dictatorial for Military Government to interfere in such German matters," said the student. "But how do you expect the democratic forces to grow and win the upper hand if you simply confirm the dictatorial action of these diehards?"

Liberals Dropping Out

ONE BY ONE the liberal elements are dropping out of the active fight. The majority simply sit back and await the outcome. "I know that the overwhelming majority of my fellow students are ready to be won over to the ways of freedom," said an actively democratic student. "But we need backers against our enemies."

At present even the progressive student at the university is afraid to present protests to the ministry: there have been unmistakable hints that such complaints would be answered with the suspension of scholarships or worse.

Recently a girl student at Munich, mother of three children and former persecutee, permitted herself to be drawn into a political debate with the examining professor. Shortly thereafter she was dropped from the university roll on a technicality of high school prerequisites.

Similarly even those teachers who want reforms refuse to risk their jobs and security by pressing for official action. And beyond that, no effort has been made to inform the teachers or the public of the real aims of proposed democratic reforms.

Unless these facts are realized, there is no hope. Unless our top-level policy of benevolent inaction in the name of democracy is replaced by active support for the democratic, anti-Nazi and anti-Communist Germans, present danger will turn into inevitable disaster.

"I want to see Germany free, of course," said one student. "But if you would leave us now, the Nazis and nationalists would run riot." A trade union leader said grimly: "I want to have an American band play at my funeral, and I expect to live for another 30 years."

Plan Memorial to Bernadotte

East Orange, N. J., Nov. 13.—Plans for the erection of a permanent memorial to Count Bernadotte are being considered at Upsala College, from which he received an honorary doctor's degree in 1939. "Bernadotte's life has become a symbol of the spirit of service and courage in the performance of his difficult tasks," said Dr. Evald B. Lawson, president of the college, in announcing the plan. Several ideas have been considered for the memorial but Dr. Lawson stated it will take time before a final decision is made.

Soldiers of Tomorrow?

Battle Is On for Control of Europe's Youth

By The Associated Press

THE battle of the classrooms is on in Europe.

An Associated Press survey shows it extends over much of the continent. The stakes are the minds of today's school children, tomorrow's soldiers.

In Belgrade, children sing "We Are Tito's Youth." In Rome, a boy can go on a picnic sponsored by his parish priest and hear about the evils of atheism and materialism. Or he can go on a picnic sponsored by Communists and hear all about the class struggle.

In Prague, teachers now teach more Russian than English. Before, it was more English than Russian. In Paris, mothers get prizes for adding to the national birth rate. On the other side of the iron curtain, the new Czech government also pays off for babies.

Abductions, Too?

THERE even have been charges of thousands of children being kidnaped to be indoctrinated. The Greek government claims between 10,000 and 12,000 Greek youngsters, ranging in age from 3 to 14, have been abducted by guerilla forces and removed to Albania, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and other countries.

Show to Benefit School 'Police'

The Mount Rainier-Brentwood Lions Club will present a minstrel show in the Mount Rainier High School Auditorium, Monday, at 8 p. m.

The proceeds of the show will be used by the Mount Rainier-Brentwood Lions Club to purchase raincoats and hats for children forming the safety patrols at the following schools: Mount Rainier Elementary, St. James' Parochial, and Brentwood Elementary.

Tickets will be available at Mount Rainier High School the night of the performance. Information may be obtained by calling either HY. 0066 or WA. 6738.

The United Nations special committee on the Balkans investigated and, along with the Greek government, demanded the return of the children. But the northern nations insisted, as did Greek guerilla leader Gen. Markos Vafiades, that the youngsters were not forcibly removed, that they came with the consent of their parents to escape the "terror of the 'monarcho-fascists'."

From Belgrade, Associated Press Staff Correspondent Osgood Caruthers reported that after listening to some of the transplanted Greek children, "one gets the strongest impression they came with the fullest consent of their parents, who are fighting in the mountains with Markos."

"Obviously," said Caruthers, "many of these people with Markos are Communists and they wish to have their children brought up so. The Yugoslavs are doing the job for them, and do not deny it."

Tito's Books

IN A NATION which has 50 per cent illiteracy, primers tell children about Tito, the Partisans and the "struggle for liberation." Other elementary books emphasize youth's role in the nation's five-year plan.

For children below high school age, there is the Tito-organized "Pioneers," whose members wear kerchiefs, sing Tito songs, gather in clubhouses abounding in pictures of Tito and other heroes of the Partisans.

When a Yugoslav child reaches high school age he is ready to join "People's Youth," a national organization. "People's Youth" is now planning a merger with the "Union of Communist Youth of Yugoslavia."

This, Caruthers reports, will prepare nearly all the country's youth for possible Communist Party membership.

More Russian

IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA, in the land of the Masaryks and Benes, a new education bill has been in force since the Communist coup last February. Now, four hours of Russian and two hours of English are taught every week in commercial and certain other high schools. Before the law, the schedule included three hours of English and two of Russian.

Student self-government is dominated by two Communist-led groups, the Union of Czech Students and the Union of Czech Youth, which has incorporated the Boy Scouts and all other youth movements.

The national concern for the birth rate is reflected in the way the government issues loans of up to 36,000 crowns ($720) to married couples under 35 to buy furnishings.

Interest on the loan is paid by the government, if the couple have one child. For the second, third, fourth and fifth babies, a reduction of 6000 crowns is made in the debt for each baby. A sixth baby brings a credit of 12,000 crowns and cancels the debt.

Babies also mean automatic wage increases for workers, whether employed by the state or private interests. Each employe gets a boost of 150 crowns ($3) monthly for the first child, 200 crowns for the second, and 300 for each additional child.

Vie for Space

IN Italy, the ideological warfare between the Catholic Church and the Communists was dramatized recently during the national congresses of the Girls and Boys of Catholic Action, which brought 500,000 youngsters to Rome.

Both Catholic and Communist youths vied for space on Rome's walls, where they pasted up their opposing posters. The posters of neither side survived more than a few hours.

Recalling early Christian martyrs, the Boys and Girls of Catholic Action marched from the colosseum to Saint Peter's Square, where they were addressed separately by Pope Pius Pius XII.

The church sponsors the Boy Scouts, which Mussolini eliminated to make way for his Fascist children and youth organizations.

On their side, the Communists are busy. Under the aegis of L'Unita, a series of celebrations was held in major Italian cities as part of "Communist Press Month." These were called L'Unita National Holidays," and they combined picnics with programs of sports, games, dances and fireworks—all intended to appeal to youth.

Scene in Britain

UNLIKE much of Europe, Britain's attempts to guide the thinking of its young do not fluctuate with the party in power. However, British policies — past and present—get none the worst of it in the history books.

As a rule, the ministry of education avoids any attempt to select or edit school texts. That's left to the school authorities themselves, but a protest can bring action by the ministry. The last came when a publisher included a few kindly paragraphs for fascism in a text book. A frown from the ministry brought a hurried revision.

Europe's ideological schism is most sharply etched in Germany. In the Russian zone, Marxism is in the saddle. In the American, British and French zones, German children are schooled along lines traditional to western democracies. This means frequent wide differences of approach, fact and interpretation on such subjects as history, economics and political science.

The former wartime Allies also failed to agree on German youth organizations. The Russians wanted to blackball, on a Berlin-wide basis, all groups except the Soviet-sponsored, Communist-controlled Free German Youth movement, which operates in their zone.

ABOUT all East and West could agree on was a purge of nazi-ism and German militarism from school texts and German literature.

American officials charge that the Russians are feeding German children "undiluted Marxism." The Russian revolution is praised to the skies as a monumental milestone in human progress. Western civilization, especially American, is characterized as nothing but imperialism and capitalistic tyranny.

As part of the West's hope of influencing German youth, the American Army got children into baseball and other athletic clubs and sponsored summer camps. The program advanced to discussion groups and "America Houses" and "British Information Centers" where young Germans can absorb Western politics and Western culture through American and British books, newspapers, films and lectures.

Howard A. R. O. T. C. Tops in Competition

The Air Reserve Officers Training Corps unit at Howard University has been rated No. 1 among 14 leading colleges and universities throughout the country in the instruction of Air Force Supply, it is noted by Col. J. Carnes, head of the department of military science and tactics at the university.

The ratings, announced by Air Force officials, are based on results of a testing program conducted by the Air Force in all of the Air R. O. T. C. units in the country.

The testing program was designed to measure the results of the program of instruction in the various ROTC units and to evaluate the courses of instruction in the specialized branches of the program.

Whistle Stopping

The Cubbing Season's On

By Orval Hopkins

MY INSIDE-STUFF man at Southern Pines, N. C., is in with the information that the cubbing season with the Moore County hounds has started. Being from the Great West, where we pick on things more our size, I didn't realize that cubbing meant the hunting of young foxes. (The truth is, I thought at first it said "clubbing," which, of course, could promise all manner of interesting developments. Then I thought it said "cuddling," a term which, though becoming a trifle archaic now, also has almost unlimited possibilities.)

Cubbing it is, though, and this note goes on to say that 25 couples of hounds "can be seen running and baying through the broom sage fields and pine woods in chase of the native gray fox." It's those hounds my poor heart bleeds for. Imagine racing your fool legs off, through the broom sage and the pine, closing in and, with a thirsty cry, pouncing. Only to find your quarry isn't even a fox full-grown. And 25 couples of you, baying like crazy. Why it's hardly a morsel around. The manifest need, men, is not for less fox hunting, but for bigger foxes.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC'S annual lecture series starts next Friday in Constitution Hall with a talk by Murl Deusing entitled, "Safari in Africa" . . . The AAA says that Americans who plan to take their cars with them for pleasure touring in Europe next year will pay $100 less for the transatlantic auto transportation. The North Atlantic Passenger Conference, representing major shipping lines, has agreed to cut round-trip car rates to Europe from $600 to $500, starting January 1 . . . Annual pet show at Pinehurst, N. C., will be held on Thanksgiving Day afternoon on the grounds of the Carolina Hotel . . . Thos. Cook & Sons reports that the Pan-American hwy. will soon be paved as far as the Mexican Isthmus of Tehuantepec, where reside the Tehuana Indians, "whose women rule their menfolk and walk like goddesses." There is, of course, no essential differences between the Tehuanas and the tribes farther North, a minor variance being that in our country the women walk like goddesses whose feet hurt.

TRAVEL USA BULLETIN, which I chided in my gentle way a few weeks ago for running a poor picture of San Francisco, is out this week with a wonderful cover shot of Telegraph Hill and San Francisco Bay, and I'm sure there's no connection . . . Atlantic City is looking for another big invasion on the Thanksgiving Day weekend. Lou Cunningham, tub thumper 1/c, urges everybody to make reservations early . . . The AAA says that if you have ideas about attending the Rose Bowl game (where Oregon probably will play one of those Big Nine outfits), remember that public sale of tickets doesn't begin until about a week before the game . . .

THE BERMUDA News Bureau is up with a group of little pamphlets, one of which is entitled "Playing Is More Fun in Bermuda." It's a cute little folder, but I think that for the benefit of easily confused people, like me, the title ought to be cleared up. As it stands, it's a little fuzzy as to meaning. It patently doesn't mean playing is more fun than working, in Bermuda, for that is a situation obtaining almost every place. It must mean, then, that playing is more fun in Bermuda than it is any place else. I suggest as a title, therefor, "Playing Is More Fun in Bermuda Than It Is Where You Live, Even If You Live in Florida, California or the Islands Off New England."

10 Toll Gates Once Cut Winchester-Staunton Rd.

STAUNTON, Va., Nov. 13.—"Twenty toll gates between Winchester and Staunton slowed us up a bit," the driver said by way of explanation for his 10 p. m. arrival in the latter city.

Twenty toll gates? Between Winchester and Staunton, Va., on the famous Vally Pike On U. S. 11?

"Yes," the driver said. "But that was on my honeymoon in 1908. It's a breeze now."

The speaker was Charles P. Heinemann, retired naval architect turned artist, and the Valley Pike with the 20 toll gates is the smooth, three-lane ribbon that runs the length of Shenandoah Valley.

"Back in those days my wife and I left Winchester before dawn and got into Staunton just before midnight. We made the same trip 30 years later, starting from Gettysburg and getting onto the valley route at Harrisburg, Pa. We came through Winchester and Staunton and spent the night at Natural Bridge—55 miles south of Staunton," Heinemann recalled.

"That's quite a difference," a reporter suggested.

"Oh, the driving's easier, but the scenery can't be improved," the artist said.

Third Excursion

HEINEMANN and his wife were making their third excursion through the Shenandoah Valley 10 years after their second and guaranteed that the fourth trip would not be that far separate from the current one.

"There isn't a place in the country to match it for color in the fall," Mrs. Heinemann spoke up.

Occasion for this visit for the couple who now make ther home in Lynchburg, Va., was to paint Natural Chimneys at Mount Solon, Va.

"The colors," Heinemann explained, "are quite remarkable."

And for a man who never even thought of painting until a year ago, the artist is quite remarkable himself.

"I've had critics tell me that I have a flair for it," he said modestly. "But the only picture I ever finished that I was really satisfied with was one of Natural Bridge."

Five Different Colors

HE GOT color there, too. Five different colors, just as advertised. "I painted in some yellows in the arch and a lady stopped me in the afternoon and said she couldn't see any yellows. I told her it was poetic license, but if she'd come back in the morning she'd have seen that I didn't make that yellow up."

To date the only two paintings Heinemann has done in the Shenandoah Valley are those of the massive arch, Natural Bridge, and almost as gigantic Natural Chimneys.

They won't be the last however. Color is what you need for a picture. And there just isn't any better color than you find in Shenandoah Valley, he says.

Indians Do Sand Painting

Vacationists in Arizona who attend the Arizona State Fair at Phoenix to November 14 will have the opportunity of seeing Arizona Indians demonstrate the art of sand painting.

Because this work with multicolored sands has a religious significance, it is a violation of ancient and sacred ceremonials for it to remain after sundown.

Florida Booming With New Hotels And Motor Courts

Every winter since the end of the war, Florida has announced the construction of additional hotels and apartment houses to provide more accommodations for Northern visitors and this year is no exception.

According to the American Express Co., 255 more hotels and 650 new motor courts have been built in Florida, so that the State now has a total of 86,000 hotel rooms and 28,000 motor court rooms available. All these, 18 new hotels (1900 rooms) and 80 apartment buildings (2282 units) have been constructed in Miami Beach, according to the Chamber of Commerce.

St. Petersburg, on the other hand, reports that the bulk of new building has been in single-family residences.

Ski Paradise

Snowy Alpine heights lure fans

This imposing picture is a reminder that the ski season is just around the mountain. It is a view of Tschuggen slope, in the Swiss Alps, taken from the town of Arosa, one of the highest winter sports centers in Europe. Tschuggen towers about 7,000 feet, and Arosa, with its fashionable hotels, is perched at an elevation of 6,000 feet. Its normal population of 2,200 increases to some 7,000 during the summer and winter seasons. Arosa, with its four ski lifts and two lakes, is a favorite spot for international winter sports contests. Snowbirds who are dreaming of slaloms and christies can now start waxing their skis and checking their gear. "Track!" THE END.

Charles Franklin Kettering

"...Any problem thoroughly understood is fairly simple."

IN THE ENGINEERING WORLD, Charles Franklin Kettering, research consultant and director of General Motors Corporation, is considered first a realist—then a theorist; a fortuitous aftermath of an ailment that for a time in his youth seriously threatened his career.

About to enter Ohio State University in 1896, Kettering's eyes began to fail, the result of strain from overstudy. For the next five years—warned to use his eyes as little as possible — he gained practical knowledge in his chosen field of electrical engineering, first as a telephone linesman and later by constructing the first central-battery telephone system in Ohio. In 1901 at the age of 25, his eyes having regained much of their strength, Kettering returned to Ohio State University to learn the theory of the art he had been practicing.

He's first a realist . . .

This week, the automobile industry, with which Kettering has been closely identified for almost 40 years, winds up a 14-day formal celebration period to mark the hundred millionth motor car to come off assembly lines. That this event occurs in 1948 rather than some years hence is due to a combination of events, not the least important of which is Kettering's self-starter.

Perfected in 1912, the self-starter's effect on passenger car production was instant and far-reaching. From less than 200,000 cars in 1911, the output jumped to more than a million and a half in 1916. More than any single improvement of the automobile, it made the owner-driven car a reality. For the first time, women felt confident that they could drive without a man along to crank the engine. Thus, the number of potential automobile users was more than doubled.

"Most people think of research as one of two kinds," Kettering once told a group of businessmen, "either it is highbrow or nuts." He believes it is neither. To him, "research is an original method of finding out what you are going to do when you can't keep on doing what you are doing now."

He has gone along on this premise ever since the day when, fresh out of college, he applied for a job at the National Cash Register Company. He was asked to develop a motor to run cash registers. According to the experts, it couldn't be done because it would require a motor as large as the cash register to do the job. Kettering knew he could overload a small motor if it ran only an instant and then had rather long periods to cool off between times. Today, the machine is essentially unchanged from the original model. That experience taught him that "any problem thoroughly understood is fairly simple."

Since then, in addition to the self-starter and hundreds of other lesser-known inventions, Kettering has developed or had a hand in perfecting Delco-lighting, which provided cheap lighting for farms; Duco paint, which reduced the time needed to paint cars from 17 days to about three hours; the two-cycle Diesel engine; Ethyl gasoline; Frigidaires; and—of lesser import, perhaps, but a boon to shivering risers — a device for closing windows without getting out of bed.

FUN AT THE Dentists'

ONE SATURDAY MORNING while taking your child to the dentist, you're amazed at the youngster's cheerfulness, and proud that she did not inherit your own mortal fear of the experience. Then you enter the dentist's chambers and you see that something new has been added. The place is brightly decorated. Gone is the dismal atmosphere. Gone are the dated magazines. And, wonder of wonders, the dreaded chair is equipped with stop-and-go buttons, controlled by the patient, to halt the dentist's operations. Finally, when your child eases herself out of the chair, you haltingly approach the dentist. "Say, Doc," you say, "there's a tooth in my mouth—it—it's probably nothing, but would you — well, if you're not too busy . . ."

Filmdom: Looking east on Hollywood Boulevard, its "platinum-plated Main Street," world movie capital stretches to residential section in hills. Grauman's Chinese Theater (lower left) has famous cement sidewalk with imbedded prints of stars' hands and feet. Studios are sandwiched between office buildings or located elsewhere in Los Angeles.

Hollywood: The Town

Film capital is growing more conservative with the years

BY ERNEST LA FRANCE

The making and exhibition of motion pictures, fourth largest industry in the U. S., is facing the gravest crisis in its history. One-fourth of the stars and studio workers are out of work. What Hollywood is like, and how it is meeting growing criticism and the threat of television is a major industrial concern. In a recent article, PARADE polled popular opinion on movies themselves. Continuing the most exhaustive study ever made by a magazine, future stories will study the Hollywood worker, the industry's sensibility to public reaction, the position of the theater owner, the influence of Hollywood columnists, and the fears and hopes of the movie makers themselves.

KAY SULLIVAN, MOVIE EDITOR, PARADE

TWICE A NIGHT, with the regularity of a well-wound clock, 18,000 American movie screens throb with emotion as a lovely and familiar girl, looming 12 feet high, surrenders shyly to the waiting arms of a 14-foot man; a tired old bomber staggers through the typhoon under the hands of a grim-faced pilot; a temporarily unhorsed cowboy, armed with only a mother-of-pearl guitar and a nickel-plated pistol, routes a band of unshaven outlaws; foreign spies slink through the fog on the trail of the Bomb; a youth whose own mother sneered at his ability to play the piano stands up to take the applause of the entire Philharmonic; gangland guns blaze as the get-away car careens past the Tip Top Club.

Source, or at least nerve center, of all these heady goings-on is a sunny Los Angeles suburb of 250,000 men, women and children sprawling its glamorized acres over some 42 square miles of palm and orange tree-studded California valley and hills.

Over-publicized to the point of seeming more myth than municipality, Hollywood is probably the best- and least-known geographical spot in the world. To every movie fan old enough to read the dozen-odd fan magazines, it is the magic home of the stars, where every waitress has a fair chance of ending up with a part opposite Tyrone Power, a $5,000 per week contract, and a Southern mansion with a pink tile swimming pool. To more suspicious adults, after years of scanning newspaper headlines and gossip columns, it has at times seemed a national Gomorrah, where husbands and wives cast off mates as casually as changing hats.

Neither the marijuana-soaked City of Sin nor the paradise of cake-baking starlets, Hollywood is primarily a hard-working assembly line for the manufacture of celluloid drama and comedy. It would be more accurate to call it the Pittsburgh of Fantasy. Sinners and angels are accidental.

In good times (these are not good times), up to 33,000 residents of Hollywood and its satellite suburbs have worked directly for the nine major picture companies—MGM, Warner Bros., Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, Columbia, Eagle-Lion, Universal-International, RKO, and Republic—or for one of the smaller independents which release pictures through companies like United Artists.

Most of Hollywood's remaining 154,000 workers put in regular hours at Hollywood's 4,570 commercial establishments or 2,500 industrial firms, almost all of them directly or indirectly dependent upon and serving the film makers.

Last year, the major studios alone turned out 365 films, and entered 1948 with 159 completed pictures waiting to be shown and 61 in some stage of production. It is not a pace that allows much time for lolling in the sun or continuous parties.

Physically, Hollywood is a handsome, if gaudy, town. Long association with make-believe has given it movie theaters that look like Tibetan lamaseries, laundries that look like castles, gas stations that look like country villas, motels that look like Spanish missions, insurance companies that look like Greek temples, and hot-dog stands that look like hot-dogs, down to the mustard and pickle relish.

At night, Hollywood, the town, tries to live up to the stature of Hollywood, the image. Accustomed (almost obligated) to launching its super-colossal epics locally with massed Kleig lights, banks of flowers, visiting celebrities, searchlights sweeping the sky, and limousines full of stars, it has instinctively adopted the glamor treatment for launching new meat markets, garages, and clothing stores.

By day, Hollywood is business-like and, for fans, disappointing. The famed intersection of Hollywood Boulevard and Vine Street, advertised by over-imaginative (or gag-poor) radio comedians as a West Coast Times Square, is about as lively as its equivalent in Chillicothe, Ohio. Autograph hunters looking for Sonny Tufts or Peter Lawford usually have to settle for the Hollywood Hotel, the outside of the Brown Derby, a string of radio studios, and a row of movie houses. The stars live in neighboring suburbs and towns—Beverly Hills, Bel Air, Brentwood, Westwood, Santa Monica, Malibu Beach, and off in the desert at Palm Springs or on ranches in the San Fernando Valley. When they relax in public, if at all, it is usually at Santa Anita, Ciro's, the Mocambo, Chasen's, Slapsie Maxie's, one of the three Brown Derbies, Romanoff's, the Beachcomber, or the Beverly Hills Tropics. The only major studios in town are Paramount, Columbia and RKO. The others are over the horizon at Culver City, Van Nuys, Burbank, or at Studio and Universal Cities, an average of 15 miles away. Hollywood has the purse strings and the offices. It also has the name by which all are loosely known.

By Eastern, and by most Western, standards, Hollywood is still a brash and youthful town. As far as anyone knows, its first white man was a wandering Spanish adventurer named Don Gaspar de Portola, who wandered down Cahuenga Pass in the year of the Boston Massacre (1770) and found a village of peaceful, non-union Indians totally ignorant of Kleig lights, Goldwyn Girls, or press agents.

First Studio Set Up in 1911

AS LATE AS 1889, when Edison brought out the Kinetoscope and Eastman introduced roller film, it was still an almost unpopulated stretch of orange groves. In 1907, when Col. William Selig, drawn by the promise of 350 days of sunshine a year, set up a studio on a Los Angeles rooftop to feed the newfangled Nickelodeons, Hollywood was still a rustic cluster of bungalows on the road from town.

It was not until 1911, long after New York and Chicago had film industries, that Hollywood's pioneer, the Nestor Film Company, moved from Staten Island to the corner of Sunset Boulevard and Gower Street and began turning out dramas and Westerns in open-air studios.

Once started, Hollywood boomed like an oil town full of gushers. In 1910, when it was annexed to Los Angeles, it had a population of 5,000. By 1920, it had grown to 36,000. By 1930, it had zoomed to 235,000. By 1940, with almost a quarter-million people itself and 27,000 more spilled over into Beverly Hills, 9,000 in Culver City and colonies all over the Los Angeles area, it was a sprawling young giant. Today, still a suburb, it controls the destinies of half a million people. It has only recently been given its own postal address. Long-distance phone operators still answer "Los Angeles."

As the motion picture industry grew, Hollywood became the stamping ground of as varied a crew as ever entered a town ten times its size. The early prospectors, Col. Selig, Adolf Zukor and Marcus Loew, Lewis J. Selznick, Carl Laemmle and William Fox, Eddie Mannix, the Warner brothers, the Schencks, Sam Goldwyn, and Louis B. Mayer, were respectively an upholsterer, a pair of furriers, a jeweler, a pair of clothiers, an amusement park bouncer, a pair of butcher's sons, a pair of drugstore clerks, a glove salesman, and a movie theater owner.

Premiere of movie at Grauman's Chinese Theater gets Hollywood treatment of celebrities and waving searchlights.

"Silent" actors, some of them unable to read or write, drifted in from stock companies, circuses, carnivals, vaudeville and — as in the case of Rudolf Valentino — from jobs as waiters. Old-fashioned, megaphone-carrying directors in sun helmets, leather puttees and riding pants came from as far away as Berlin and the banks of the Danube. In the single decade between 1919 and 1929, some 50,000 girls headed towards Los Angeles. The introduction of sound in 1928, and color in 1932, brought engineers and artists, dance teachers and playwrights.

Harold Lloyd built a $1,000,000 castle; Marion Davies moved into a 90-room manse loaded with enough antiques to fill a museum; Winfield Sheehan and Maria Jeritza built a hacienda large enough to hold a bronze cannon on the fireplace. John Barrymore built a monstrosity blending a bar brought from Alaska, a sun dial from England, an Austrian chandelier, three swimming pools (one for trout), a bowling alley, and a skeet range.

Hollywood is, and always has been, a highly explosive mixture, but there are no signs that it is getting any worse. The Fatty Arbuckle-Virginia Rappe case in 1921 and the narcotics-linked death of matinee idol Wallie Reid brought the Hays Office and attempts to clean Hollywood up. The attempt has largely succeeded.

Hollywood may cure itself. It is changing. Well over half of its present producers, directors, actors, writers, and almost all its top technicians, are college graduates with fairly conservative tastes.

The expensive white elephants built during the 1920's are giving way to more modest, and more remote homes—some in the desert, where glamor does not reach. Hollywood may at last be growing up.

Swami Yogananda's "Church of All Religions" is typical of California's sects.

To an insider, the neighbors are famous and the famous, neighbors

INSIDERS SEE a far different Hollywood than the town of plush clubs on Sunset Strip, the sleeping-pill suicides, and the searchlights sweeping the sky to herald new drug stores.

Arthur Arthur, screen writer of Columbia's "Song of India," Academy Award winner for distinguished documentary achievement in "Seeds of Destiny," neighbor of Betty Grable and Kay Kyser and a Hollywood resident since 1936, sees it as a home town.

Reporting for Parade, he says: "To the vast majority of people who make up Hollywood, it is a town where kids and family life are much more the daily routine than dinner at the Brown Derby or a date at the Mocambo.

"We who live here are far more likely to run into our favorite star over at Doc Tobias' waiting room, where she has taken her little girl for a whooping-cough shot, or at the Children's Bootery, where we last saw Lana Turner with her youngster.

" 'Hollywood,' in ordinary usage, is a word that conjures up a mad montage of pin-up pretties, champagne bubbles, split-second marriages, and all the normalcy that goes with hanging by the toenails from a flying trapeze.

"The bubble-water dances in the wine glasses in Hollywood as it does in a lot of other places, but you'll find more Hollywood people per evening jammed up in a little Sunset Boulevard ice cream parlor called Wil Wright's—waiting for the usual sodas and sundaes—than in the widely ballyhooed club a couple of doors down.

"During the war, there was no more popular pin-up than Betty Grable. But when Hollywoodians came across her picture on a barracks wall, it merely reminded them of Mrs. Harry James back home in the house on the corner of Heather Road, with a little girl named Victoria. (Now there's a second little girl named Jessica.)

Where the Commonplace is Common

IT'S A FAR MORE common experience to open the morning mail and find an invitation to attend someone's tenth wedding anniversary than it is to open the morning paper and discover that some marriage is breaking up. Mrs. Goldwyn taking a walk up Coldwater Canyon with her husband, Sam, or Mrs. Cagney picking up some books at Martindale's for her husband, are more in keeping with the Hollywood scene than are the divorce courts.

"Far more typical of Hollywood's evening activities than its parties is a group of million-dollar names seated around a table in the headquarters of the A. F. of L. Screen Actors Guild worrying about the picture industry's serious unemployment situation, or a Sunday night showing of a 1928 epic at the Academy Award Theater where present-day stars sit and chuckle as they see themselves in 'bit' parts.

"An animated dinner-table conversation between Deborah Kerr and Dinah Shore often turns out to be about the fact that they both have the same dentist. A top-salaried director hurrying down the street is often just on his way to a Masonic meeting. Kay Kyser and a group of stars huddling into the late hours are not engaged in anything more racy than going over plans for a circus to raise money for a hospital building fund. Jean Hersholt and screen executive George Bagnall, meeting at the Masquers Club, are there in their capacity as trustees of the Motion Picture Relief Fund.

"Under the ballyhoo, Hollywood people have genuine emotions. One of the busiest phones in town is in Jack

Schwab's drugstore — Hollywood's equivalent of the 'corner drug store' —where we call for news if we know anyone is too seriously ill for the family to be disturbed by a call home.

Stars Lead Everyday Lives, Too

WE MEET STARS at unglamorous places: Bob Hope at the Church of the Blessed Sacrament with Mrs. Hope for the christening of a friend's child; George Jessel standing in line at a teller's window at the Bank of America in Beverly Hills; Anita Louise in the Elgee Market next door, trying to decide whether to order rib roast or lamb chops; Van Johnson grinning into the window of a pet shop at puppies playing in the sawdust; Loretta Young in the Young America shop, picking out dresses for her daughter. Sonny Tufts in Nate & Al's delicatessen, snatching a sandwich on the run; Red Skelton coming out of the Camera Shop with a new bunch of snapshots. There is so little difference in their general dress and deportment that the average tourist wouldn't distinguish the screen people from any others.

"Hollywood is a second-generation (even a third-generation) town for a great many picture people — with all the roots and ties that long residence means. Will Rogers, Jr. is a Beverly Hills newspaper publisher. Lon Chaney, Jr., Noah Beery, Jr., and Alan Hale, Jr., are now active film actors in their own right. June Lockhart, daughter of Gene Lockhart, is back in Hollywood as a star after a success on the New York stage. Louella Parsons' daughter, Harriet, is the producer of 'I Remember Mama.'

"There is a solid level below the hoopla and froth. The vast majority of today's screen crop have noted the unhappy histories of so many who have preceded them. Those who stay have a hard-headed business sense about keeping their savings. Fred MacMurray is known as one of Hollywood's keenest business minds—with large real-estate holdings developed under his personal supervision. Joel McCrea is as successful as a cattleman as he has been as an actor. Sonja Henie and Claudette Colbert have business acumen that has made them independent of glamor.

"Hollywood today represents something very different from the lurid impression that helps set the pyrotechnic pattern in the public mind. The evolution has actually come about so gradually that for millions of people it scarcely has been noticeable. But the vast majority of us who reside here know Hollywood for what it is—just Main Street with a certain amount of platinum plating. We like to think of it as Our Town. We want it to survive."

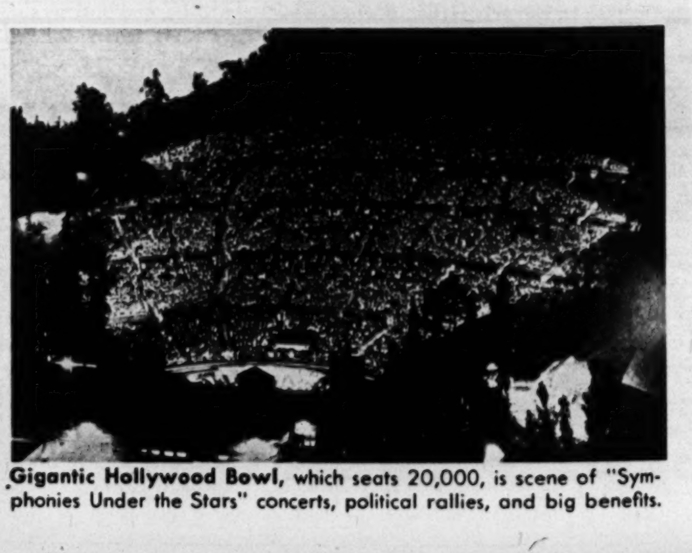
Hollywood Palladium, on Sunset near Vine, is mecca of middle class in search of fun. Dancing to name bands goes with $1.85 meal.

Average citizens live in modest, well-kept bungalows. New spurt in population since war is bringing apartments, multiple-dwelling units.

Meeting of Screen Writers Guild, conducted by 2nd Vice President F. Hugh Herbert, irons out problems. Even top stars belong to unions.



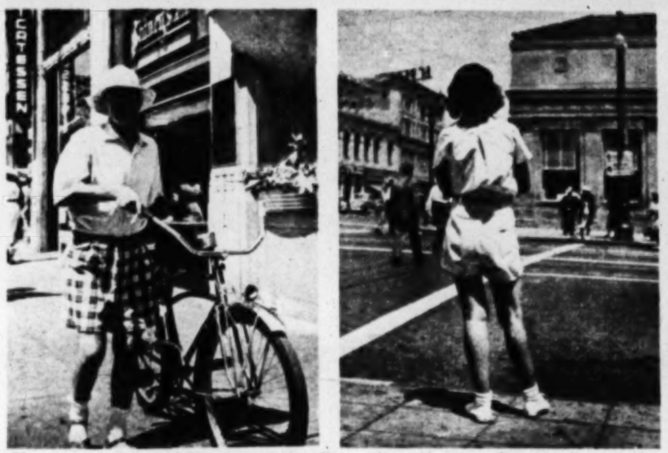
Gigantic Hollywood Bowl, which seats 20,000, is scene of "Symphonies Under the Stars" concerts, political rallies, and big benefits.

TO ITS PLAIN CITIZENS, HOLLYWOOD IS HOME

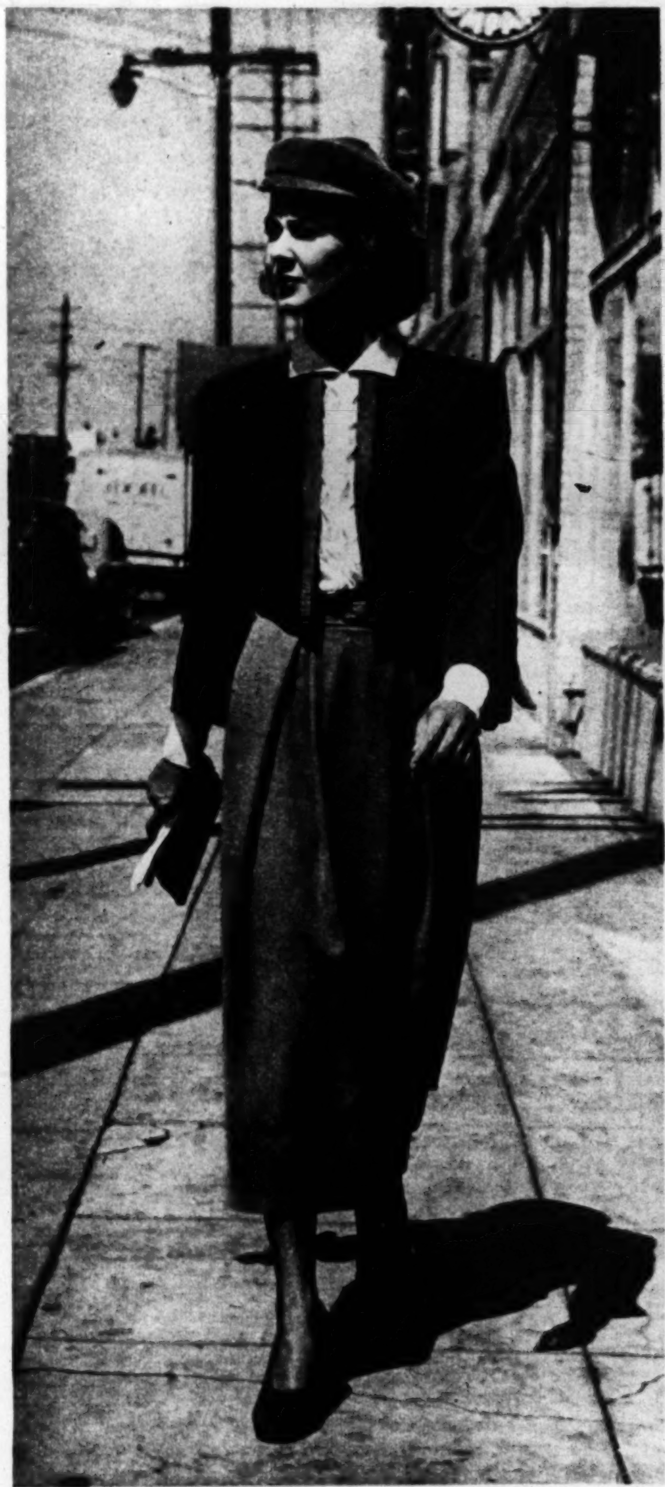
HOLLYWOOD IS FAR MORE THAN the city of stars. It is also the city of average people, young and old, some of them wealthy, some of them beautiful, many of them well-off, and more of them getting along on their skills than on their looks.

It has almost as many churches (81) as motion picture producers, and the regular Roman Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish churches far outnumber the strange sects that grow in California. Hollywood also has two colleges, three junior and three senior high schools and 18 elementary schools. The Hollywood Presbyterian Church has the biggest membership in the U. S.

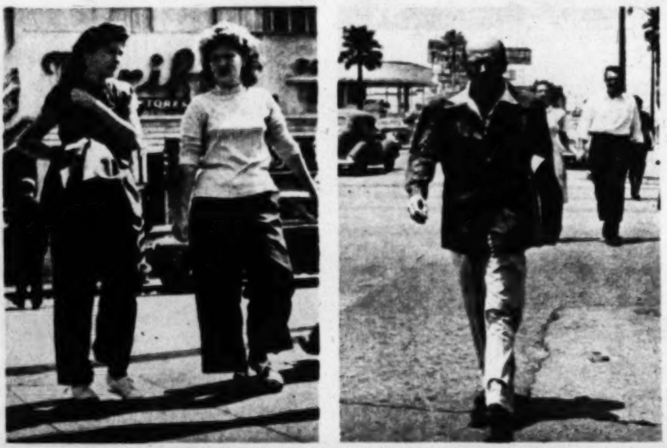
Movie money has made Hollywood second only to downtown Los Angeles as a market place. It is second only to New York as a radio center; probably second only to Paris as a fashion center. To people who live there, it is more than that. It's home.



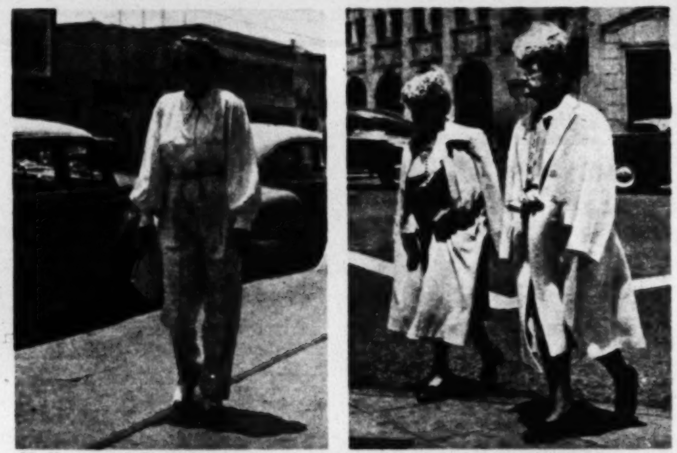
Shorts, worn by old-time vaudeville cyclist "Humpty Dumpty" and unknown Miss (right) are extremes of Hollywood's al fresco street dress.



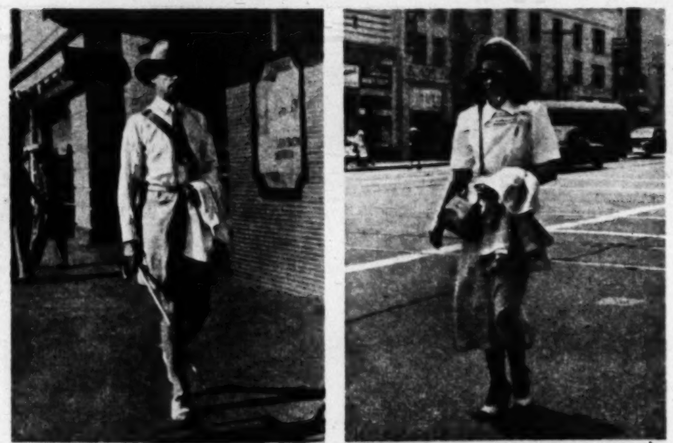
Star Betsy Drake out for walk on Melrose Avenue goes unnoticed in town where glamor is commonplace. Conservatism is becoming smart.



Sweaters, popular with teen-agers flocking to town for screen fame, are designed to attract movie scouts. Men go tieless in sports togs.



Hollywood housewives, comfortably shopping in slacks, contrast with formal elderly ladies, probably in town for local radio broadcasts.



Dressed for tropics, probable Britisher strolls down Vine Street. Dark goggles (right), once trade-mark of stars, are now common. THE END.

You can make over your Living Room with a new rug and a plan ...thanks to Alexander Smith

Mrs. Bernard Daxon, of Kearney, Nebraska, tells how the Daxons made an old room new—with an Alexander Smith Rug, and a decorating plan from Clara Dudley, your color-scheme consultant at Alexander Smith.

I'd taken our living room for granted, with its aged rug and artless color scheme, until Kathryn grew up to her first formal dress. But a fifteen-year old girl looks at things with fresh, seeing eyes. And when Dax, my husband, and I took a really good look at the room we live in most, we decided Kathryn's fifteen-year-old eyes saw right. The room was more homely than homelike.

The old rug in the living room deserved a pension. Kathryn offered to help buy a new one with money she earned detasseling corn last summer. Naturally, Dax and I wouldn't let her. But we figured out what we could afford to invest in a nice new rug, and then went to see our friend, Harold Swan, who owns our furniture store here in Kearney.

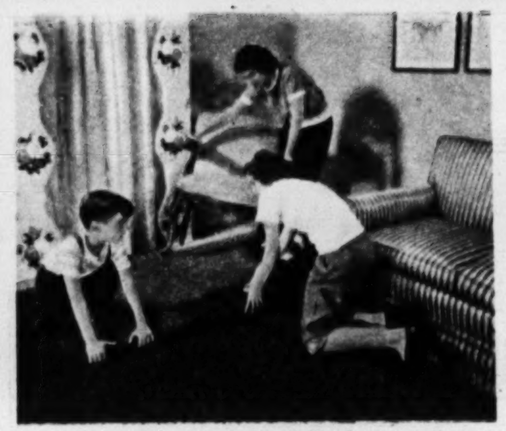
COPYRIGHT 1948, ALEXANDER SMITH & SONS CARPET COMPANY

We chose a Floor-Plan Rug from Alexander Smith—one of those wonderful broadloom rugs, ready-made in room sizes. Ours is 9' x 13'6"—$119.50, or $23.90 down and the balance monthly, if we wanted terms. Mr. Swan told me that Clara Dudley, Alexander Smith's color-scheme consultant, would work out a decorating plan just for us. He gave me her Workshop Questionnaire. I filled it out that very day and mailed it to her.

Clara Dudley worked out our color-scheme starting from the rose tone-on-tone rug we'd bought to go with our pink walls. She sent me fabric and paint samples... even a room-plan for our furniture. Then we all rolled up our sleeves and got down to work.

Grandma Daxon, Jimmie's best friend and most sincere admirer, looked on while Jimmie unpacked the loveseat—our only new piece of furniture. Grandma homesteaded in the Nebraska sandhills back in 1906. Pretty things mean as much to her as to Kathryn.

The most fun was the window. Dax is an engineer, and Gerry, our 12-year-old, can do anything. The two of them managed this chintz-covered frame. Clara Dudley suggested we paint one wall blue-grey, to make the room seem larger.



Gerry and Jimmie helped Kathryn roll out the rug. Isn't it amazing—the difference a good rug makes in a room, from the moment it's down! You can feel the improvement. As Kathryn says, "A rug is the base of a room's decoration."

~~RUG CUSHION~~	6^{30}

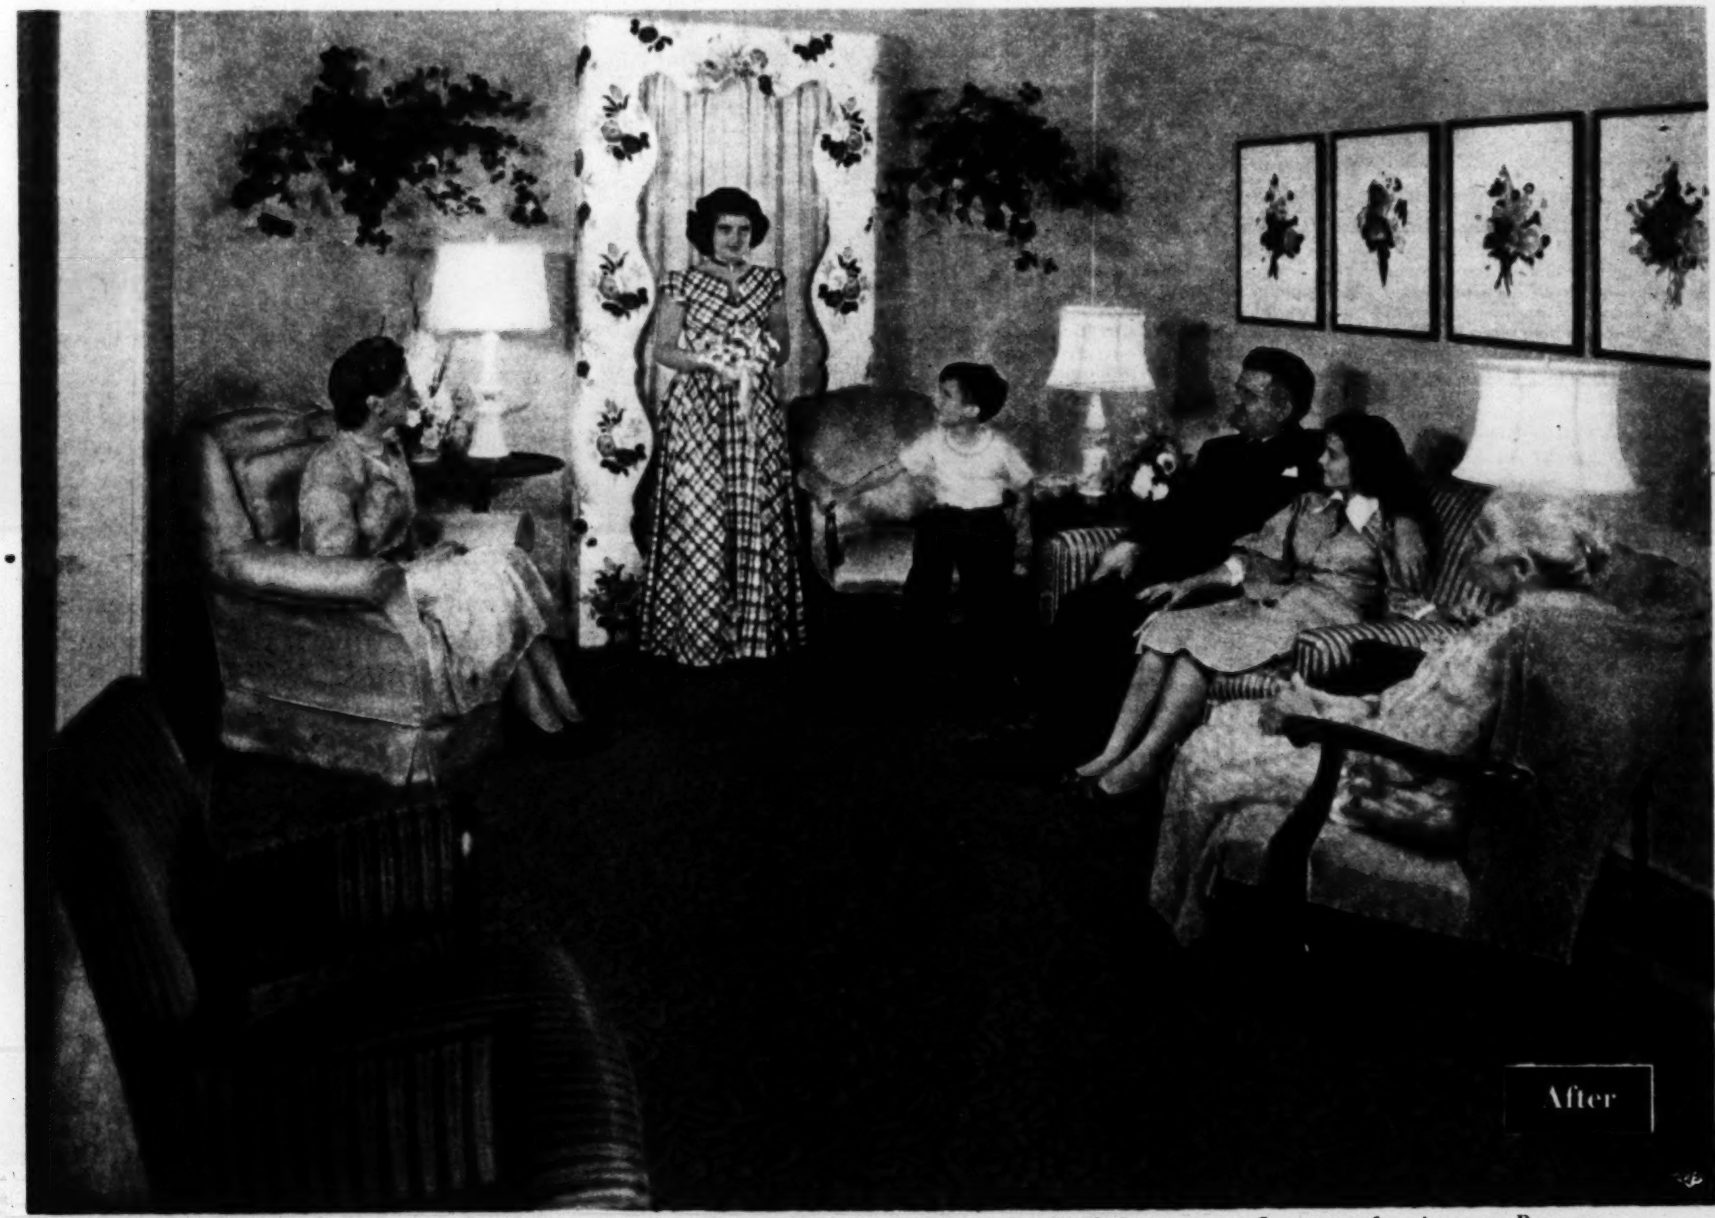
We could have frittered away, so easily, the money we've invested in our home. But we're so glad we have something substantial to show for our money. We can't imagine, now, how we could have lived in that old room so long.



Our beautiful new room means more to Kathryn, I think, than her first real date did—corsage and all. How she loves to bring her friends home, now. Our Alexander Smith Rug, of course, is a beauty. It, alone, would have done a lot for our living room. And Clara Dudley's plan for us is exactly what we'd have dreamed up ourselves, if we'd just known how. Jimmie says, and we all agree, "We're the luckiest family in Nebraska."

Let Clara Dudley help you, too. Go to your favorite store. Buy your Alexander Smith Rug. Ask for Clara Dudley's Workshop Questionnaire. Fill it out and send it in for a decorating plan worked out just for you. Or, for Clara Dudley's new, FREE, color-idea book, "Colorama," full of practical ideas to use in your home, write Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Company, Dept. SY-5, 285 Fifth Avenue, New York 16, N. Round Table

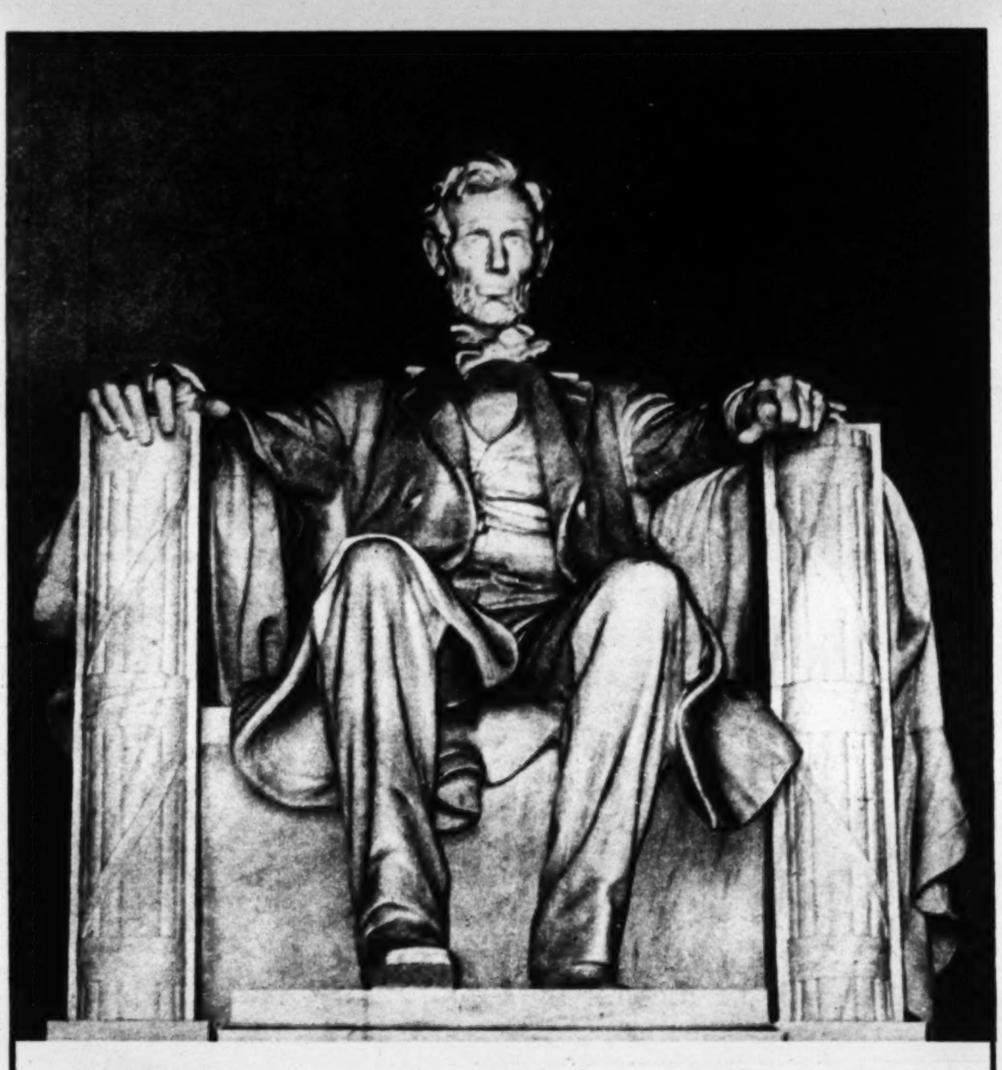
Next week, PARADE's Round Table examines education. Don't miss it.



I do the very best I know how . . . the very best I can; and I mean to keep doing so until the end. If the end brings me out all right, what is said against me won't amount to anything. If the end brings me out wrong, ten angels swearing I was right would make no difference."

—ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

What Men Live By

David Guy Powers has a formula for creative living

YOU, TOO, SAYS DAVID GUY POWERS, a New York educator and author of "Live a New Life"*, can have a new and more abundant life. It happens every day.

Constantly, Mr. Powers maintains, "men move from obscurity to greatness, from poverty to wealth, from despair to accomplishment, from failure to success."

The talisman which accomplishes these wonders, Mr. Powers believes, is this: these men have captured the vision of a new life.

To achieve this vision and put it to work Mr. Powers has prescribed a formula. The secret of personal success, he holds, lies in man's ability to forget the past, to select a goal which will bring a new and more abundant life and to relate each day to this goal by constructive meditation.

"Think creatively," advises the author, "don't be satisfied with the accepted way. Inquire if a better way is possible and strive to be creative in thought rather than cautious. Then organize your thoughts. File things in your mind instead of merely storing them."

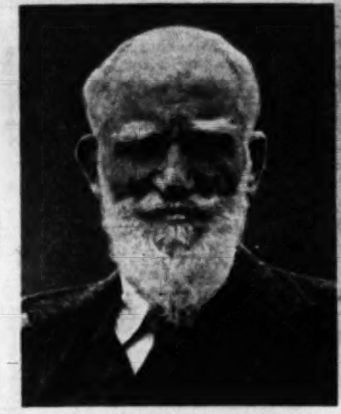
The great secret of leadership, in Mr. Power's opinion, lies in the exceptional man's desire and ability to think not alone in terms of himself. "To exercise command successfully," he writes, "the leader must be the best man in every respect in his organization, and recognized as such by the men under him. He must be interested in their welfare, their food, their troubles. He must be the 'father confessor' to whom they will go for help. In the words of Abou ben Adhem, he must be the one who loves his fellow man."

"If you would lead men," he concludes, "share the vision of your enterprise—and the profits. Share the responsibility for if you cannot delegate authority, you are destined for failure. And share your problems, too, for wisdom is the property of the man nearest the problem."

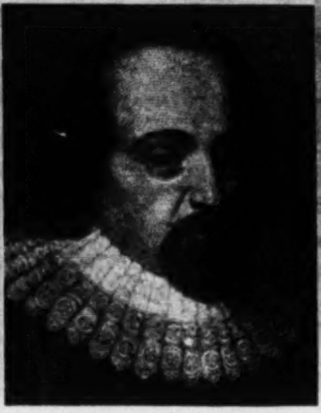
*"Live a New Life," by David Guy Powers. Published by Doubleday and Co. Inc., Garden City, N. Y. $1.96.

14 PARADE NOVEMBER 14, 1948

These men have built success around a keynote of principal...

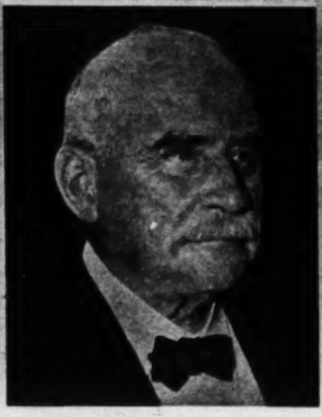


"DOGMATIC REITERATION" is Bernard Shaw's byword for success. "For ten years now," he says, "with pertinacity and obstination I have been dinning into the public head that I am an extraordinarily witty, brilliant and clever man. That is now part of the public opinion of England and no power on earth will change it."



"THE SKILL OF SILENCE" and the art of understanding were of equal importance to Francis Bacon who wrote: "The silent man heareth many confessions, but who will open his mouth to a blab or a babbler? Talkers are commonly vain and credulous; for he that talketh what he knoweth will also talketh what he knoweth not."

UNDERSTANDING among people was the dream upon which President Roosevelt built his life. "We are faced," he once wrote "with the pre-eminent fact that, if civilization is to survive, we must cultivate the science of human relationships—the ability of all peoples, of all kinds, to live and work together at peace."



TRUSTWORTHINESS was the standard by which Banker J. P. Morgan measured men. "I have known a man to come into my office and I have given him a check for a million dollars though I knew he had not a cent in the world," he said. "But a man whom I do not trust could not get money from me on all the bonds in Christendom."

ONE RULE guides Paul-Henri Spaak, premier of Belgium: "Each human being has something . . . which deserves attention, and when discovered it becomes an enrichment of your own person. Nothing is gained by using this ability only occasionally. Make it a permanent trait, and you have the key to understanding." THE END.

DOG-GONE CUTE: A Fuller Brush man we know doesn't worry about being bitten by strange dogs. When he rings a doorbell and a housewife answers, he takes out his samples. HUMAN NATURE: Several police stations in Oklahoma City now boast unbreakable glass doors. Nothing to do with prisoners escaping. Captain Frank Thurston explains that after paying traffic fines, citizens have a habit of slamming doors angrily. Broken glass cuts down profits alarmingly . . .

OBSERVATION WARD: When Claire Luce's new evening gown failed to arrive in time to attend a Broadway theatre opening, she wore a black skirt, wrapped a pink scarf around her and had half a dozen envious socialites ask for the name of her brilliant new dressmaker . . . The name of the assistant manager of the Fulton Theatre in New York is George M. Cohan. He's an uncle of the original Yankee Doodle Dandy . . . The big idea was to have readers tell 'em apart. A note from V. F. Howell of Pecos, Texas, is too good to keep to ourselves. Said our faithful reader, "In picking the criminals from the actors, I found five right and only two wrong. Or was I wrong? I have come to the conclusion, after re-studying pictures that the two actors I marked wrong are out of jail only by the grace of God. And by all means should be locked up!" . . . (P. S. Could it be that reader Howell was only kidding? . . .

Tuna: Hooking sea giants is rugged sport

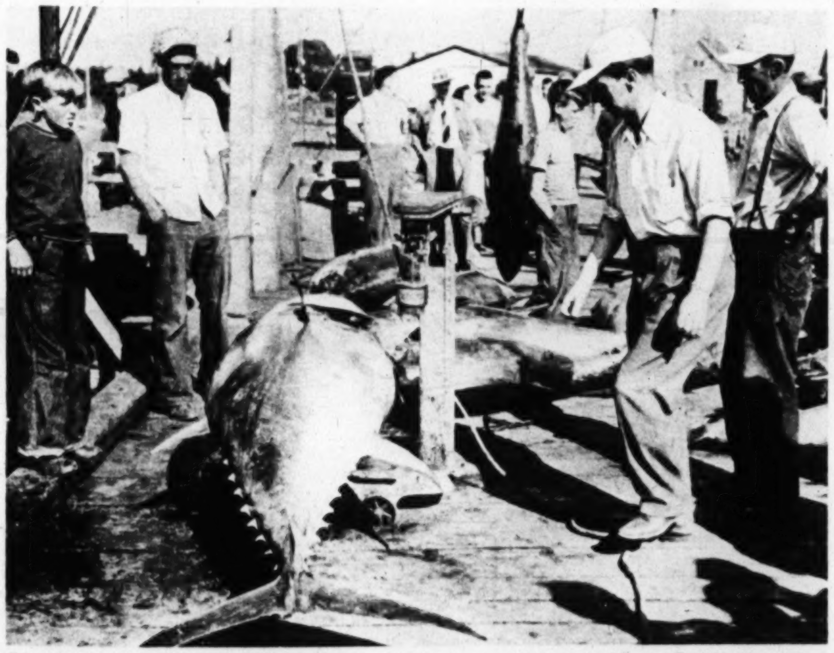
IF YOUR IDEA OF a good time is sitting in a bobbing boat and getting doused with salt spray while battling a fish about the size of a small horse, by all means take up tuna fishing. This hairy-chested diversion brings some of the world's best anglers to Wedgeport, Nova Scotia, annually, for the International Tuna Cup Matches.

During late Summer and early Fall, schools of giant bluefin tuna, or "horse mackerel," weighing up to 1,500 pounds, invade the boiling tide of Soldier's Rip to feed on herring. They migrate thousands of miles from somewhere in the South Atlantic—the exact location is a mystery. Voracious after the trek, they strike swiftly at bait. This year, contestants boated 22 fish, weighing 11,319 pounds, in three days.



Big fellow taxes scales as Elson Boudreau (foreground), head of Tuna Guides Association, weighs for scoring points. U. S. team beat Argentine, British and Cuban teams.

STOP—
loosening your skin!

MAKE THIS TEST! You will be shocked to find out how loose your skin really is!

DO THIS! Sit before your mirror. Do exactly as the girl is doing in the picture above. If folds of skin roll up under your eyes, you have loose skin! This loose skin may easily wrinkle too soon causing you to look much older than you really are!

Millions are actually loosening delicate skin tissues around their eyes in the very act of creaming their skins.

But this old way of skin care is rapidly being discarded. Well informed women are adopting skin care that ends destructive rubbing.

My Lady Esther 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting. No more need for rubbing at all. Think what this means!

When you use my cream that requires no rubbing, you are not loosening your skin—you are not deepening fine lines! In short, you stop helping your skin to grow loose and older looking. You help to preserve tone, elasticity and smoothness your skin naturally has.

Clearer Skin, Too, The First Day

What's more, I can promise you a clearer skin the first day you stop rubbing dirt-laden cream back into tiny skin crevices and into pore mouths.

Here's why. The cleansing ingredient in Lady Esther 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting—it has the power to surround each tiny particle of stale make-up and grime and separate it from the skin. It literally lifts dirt away from your skin! No destructive rubbing is necessary—just smooth it on and tissue it off!

What to Expect

Your first trial will convince you that my 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting (no more rubbing) and that it makes your skin far cleaner than before, without rubbing.

So get any size jar—even the smallest size is ample to prove that you don't have to rub your skin any more to clean it.

And remember, this one cream does 4 things for your skin. Besides self-acting cleansing—it smooths!—it aids the natural pore-refining process!—and it makes a perfect powder base!

Lady Esther

Drifting with dead engine soon after hooking tuna, contestant Lou Marron, Brielle, N. J., one of the U. S. team, is in trouble. He tried to continue fishing from craft, finally signalled for press boat to help.

Changing to press boat, left, Marron (rear center, light jacket) clutches rod and continues to fight.

Furious battle follows as Marron, on broken chair, crying, "Come to Uncle Lou," plays raging bluefin.

Ace anglers test their skill

LIKE A WAR-TIME CONVOY, the 20 powerful, 40-foot tuna boats of the Cup Match fleet churn out into Soldier's Rip, off Wedgeport. The engines throb and roar as they fight the surging, eight-knot tide. So strong is the current that the boats are almost standing still, despite the fact that the propellers are kicking up a foaming wake. Each boat carries the fisherman and his crew — the captain, the "gaffer" and the "chummer." The gaffer helps the angler with his gear. The chummer throws pieces of chopped herring or mackerel (called "chum") over the side to attract the tuna, or trolls a lure line on which perhaps a half-dozen herring are tied in tandem. Crew members may gaff a fish or help boat it, but no one is permitted to touch the line while the contestant is playing the tuna.

The fisherman wears a shoulder harness, to which is anchored his five-foot, laminated bamboo or hickory rod and the huge reel, with its hundreds of yards of line. Seated at the stern he awaits the fishing signal—a pistol shot fired aboard the judge's boat. At the signal, he swings

TUNA FISHING GEAR

Tackle, built for rugged wear, represents a sizeable investment, some affluent anglers spending anywhere from $500 to $2,000 for their gear. Good average gear —rod, hook, reel, line and leader —costs about $600. Hook generally used is of Norwegian steel, about five inches long, costs 35 cents. It is attached to line by 15-foot leader of stainless steel wire. Bait is herring or mackerel. For angler, fish's backbone is removed (so that fish will wiggle in life-like fashion when drawn through water) and hook sewn inside. Reel has from 300 to 800 yards of line, is fitted with brake and ratio gear. Angler can reel in at high speed if tuna dashes toward boat. Tuna boat is shallow draft, can go forward or astern at equal speeds. At Wedgeport, tuna fishermen can rent boat and gear, services of crew of three, for $40 per day.

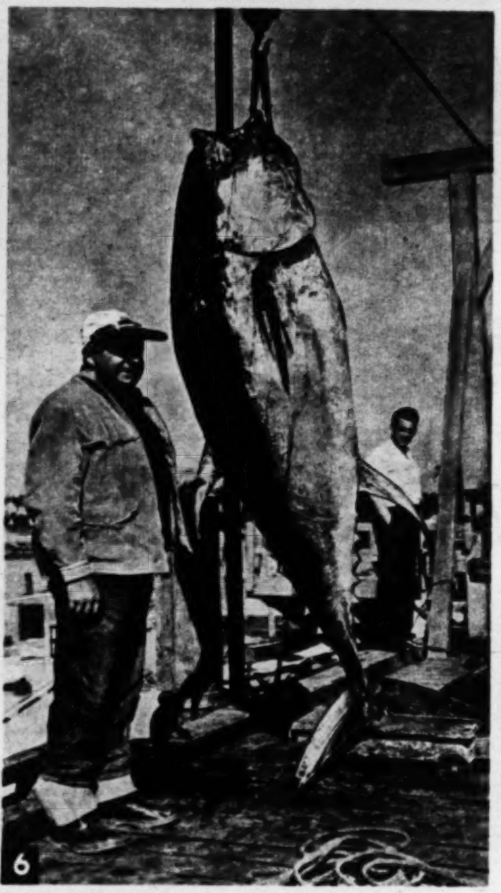
Victorious after long, exhausting struggle, Marron (hatless) helps crewmen bring giant fish alongside.

Boating requires combined efforts of Marron and his crew. Latter may help only in gaffing and boating.



Prize, 647-pound bluefin, was disqualified because Marron hooked it in one boat, landed it in another.

in Nova Scotia cup match . . .

out his line, baited with a whole herring, and braces for the strike.

When the tuna grabs the bait and makes his first run, the crew breaks out a yellow flag as a signal for other boats to keep clear. Heading for deep water, the big fish lunges away at a speed that can whip the line off the reel at the rate of 60 miles an hour. Eventually, the tuna will break surface and begin circling the boat — a sign that he is tiring. This is a crucial moment. The angler must fight for all that his gear—and his own strength—can stand. If allowed to get his wind back, the tuna may sound again and prolong the battle. A contestant once fought a bluefin for 62 hours.

Braking, slacking and reeling, the angler gradually wears the tuna down as the boat slowly closes in. Suddenly the boatmen plunge their gaffs deep into the monster, and blood reddens the water. All hands heave and tug the prize into the boat. A white flag replaces the yellow one to signal a catch. After the weighing at the dock, the day's winner traditionally cuts his initials in the tuna's glistening side.

Final day's weighing showed that U. S. team scored 4,530 points to win Alton B. Sharp trophy. Points are based on fish caught and poundage. Fish are given to boat crews, who sell them to cannery. THE END.

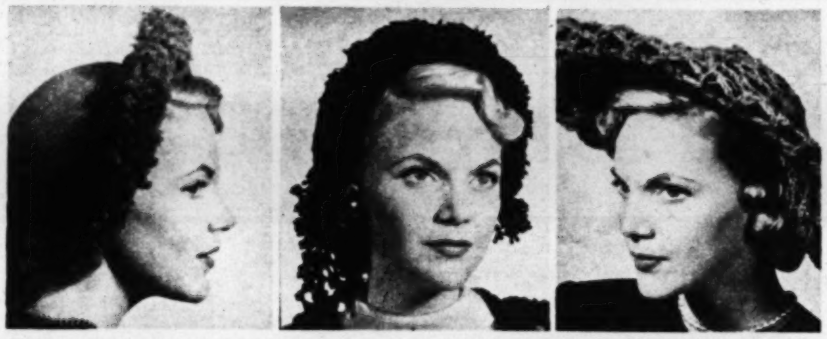
Dressy halo hat looks almost like a furred cloche but it's simply the crown of a worn-out felt covered with clipped lengths of yarn in which crocheted roses nestle. The entire hat may be made in one day, using solid or variegated yarns.



Three ways to brighten up your winter wardrobe and economize, too: yarn fringe sewed on felt bonnet brim (left) is allowed to dangle down back; half hat covered with crocheted rosettes (center) has matching, old-fashioned stole; a big-brimmed hat (right) takes on a new look with an all-over crocheted net of yarn.

A Touch of Yarn

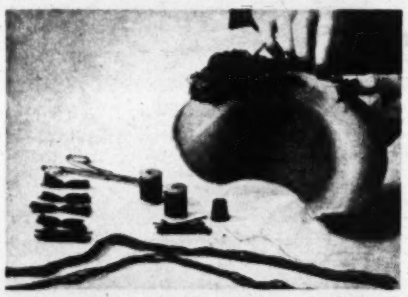
With yarn trimmings, last year's hat can look new

IF YOU HAVE AN OLD HAT in the closet, (and who hasn't?) don't throw it away. Take a leaf from the bright pages of Sally Victor's millinery book and trim it yourself with yarn. Miss Victor, whose hats are always fashion favorites, features a number of yarn-trimmed felts in her Fall collection. The tricks she does with yarn may be copied by anyone. The equipment needed: old hats, some Bear Brand Afghan yarn, a crochet hook, needle and thread.

Short yarn fringe sewed at close intervals all over the crown or on the brim of a hat lends it a fur-like look. The fringe is made by looping several lengths of yarn together, cutting it into two-inch lengths which are tied together, tacked directly on the hat felt.

Last year's pet big-brimmed hat may be completely changed by draping a "fisherman's net" over it. The net should be crocheted of a bright-hued yarn, approximately 24-inches square. Tuck the excess net under the brim.

Companion for your yarn-decked hat could be a smart shawl or stole, crocheted as long or as wide as fancy dictates. Trim it with yarn roses, circled with fringe. For an extra fillip, sew jet beads right in the center of each rose.



Loops of yarn tied with thread, clipped, are set close for moss effect. THE END.

Variations From a Mix

Which will you bake first? Marble, spice, gold or white cake, upside-down cake, crisp peanut-butter cookies?

Follow the directions and bake . . .

ADD MILK, STIR AND BAKE, take from the oven a perfect cake! You see, the new white cake mixes move us to poetry! Try these easy variations:

To make Marble Cake, prepare white cake mix according to directions on the package. Divide batter in two parts. To one part add 1½ squares (1½ oz.) unsweetened chocolate, melted, and ¼ cup milk; mix well. Place by tablespoons in greased and floured 8-inch tube pan alternating chocolate and white. Run a knife blade through batter to make an attractive pattern. Bake cake in a moderate oven, 350°F., 35 to 40 minutes.

Gold Cake: Add 2 unbeaten egg yolks and ½ cup milk to white cake mix. Stir to blend; beat briskly one minute. Add remaining ½ cup milk; beat one minute. Bake in greased and floured loaf pan in moderate oven, 350°F., 45 to 50 min. When the cake is cool, frost with orange icing.

Use A Mix For Frosting, Too

For a handsome birthday cake, bake white cake in two layers; fill and frost with fudge mix, following package directions for soft frosting.

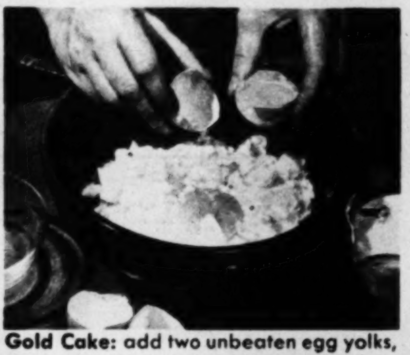
Fragrant Spice Cake: Add ¾ tsp. each allspice and cinnamon and ¼ tsp. nutmeg to cake mix before adding the milk.

Upside Down Cake: Spread ¼ cup melted shortening in deep, round cake pan; top with ½ cup brown sugar. Arrange drained canned, crisp-cut crushed pineapple and a few Maraschino cherries on sugar. Pour in cake batter. Bake in moderate oven, 350°F., 40 min. Remove from pan; cool. Frost sides with confectioners' sugar icing, made with syrup from canned crushed pineapple as liquid.

Peanut Butter Cookies are easy: Add ⅓ cup peanut butter and ½ cup milk to cake mix. Beat well. Drop from teaspoon on cookie sheet. Bake in moderate oven, 375°F., for 8 to 10 minutes.

You start with the same prepared mix

Upside-Down Cake: Pour cake batter over melted butter, brown sugar, fruits.



Gold Cake: add two unbeaten egg yolks, then milk. Use egg whites in frosting.

Marble Cake: add melted chocolate to ½ of batter. Marble alternate spoonfuls.

Spice Cake: add spices to cake mix. Mix well before adding milk as directed.

Peanut Butter Cookies: add milk and peanut butter to the mix; beat. THE END.

Winner of "I Speak for Democracy" contest in Wichita was Joan Olden, 15, who won radio from ex-Governor Andrew F. Schoeppel.

DEMOCRACY SPEAKS

In Wichita, six students define our heritage

THROUGHOUT THE UNITED STATES THIS WEEK, thousands of high school students will be telling the rest of the country just what democracy means to them.

They will be competitors for four top prizes in the second annual "I Speak for Democracy" contest, the feature event of National Radio Week, which begins today. The contest, which last year drew 25,000 entrants from 41 different states and won scholarships, wrist watches and a trip to Washington for four school girls, is sponsored by the U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Broadcasters and the Radio Manufacturers Association and is endorsed by the United States Office of Education.

In preparation for the contest, the city of Wichita, Kansas, recently jumped the gun on the rest of the nation. In its own school system, Wichita held an elimination competition on the meaning of democracy, chose six winners who battled again at a luncheon sponsored by the local chapter of the Junior Chamber of Commerce. The winner was Joan Olden, a 15-year-old sophomore at Wichita's Cathedral High School, to whom the concept of democracy meant "government based on dignity and freedom."

Six definitions of democracy . . .

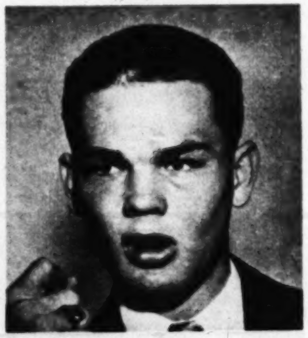
Democracy, in the opinion of Russell Watson, 17, "is a light that was kindled in ancient Greece, began to blaze more brightly when King John was forced to sign the Magna Carta and developed with full glory in the Constitution of the United States." To carry this light, we must choose to lead us "men with the most brilliant minds, finest religious convictions and highest ideals—that is our great need."

Prize-winning Joan Olden, looking at America's past, found that "she has never advocated wars of aggression but has always been ready to defend our democracy. I feel that if World War III must come the citizens of my country will again take up arms to save these rights and privileges for me and my posterity. I know that they shall always be ready to fight any enemy that opposes these rights."

The spirit of the people has a special meaning to Mary Ann Wolter, 17, Wichita runner-up. "If you could spend some time in a country that had no freedom," she said, "your eyes would be opened to the gifts of democracy. More frequently would you recall the deeds that kept us free, the spirit, which fills the hearts of Americans, voiced long ago by Nathan Hale, who offered more than his life for his country."

"Today," said Kearney Wells, 18, "democracy is fighting for its very existence throughout a troubled world. Daily we see totalitarian beliefs and ideologies make rapid strides yet we as Americans have the greatest product in the world to sell. To sell it successfully, we must entrust the destiny of our nation to men qualified to serve the best interests of the people of democracy. In this way we will go forward."

The words of Emma Lazarus, inscribed on the Statue of Liberty, personify democracy to Kathleen Treat, 17, who repeated them: "Give me your tired, your poor; your huddled masses yearning to breathe free, the wretched refuse of your teeming shore; send these, the homeless, tempest-tossed, to me. I lift my lamp beside the golden door." "That," Kathleen said, "is the way I spell democracy."



To Robert Reed, 19, democracy is "an intangible thing, a feeling in the air. You feel it in the school building, you hear it in the classrooms and you see it in the faces of the students. There is no room for intolerance in the America our fathers planned . . . and those who embrace it are following not their fathers but someone else. Let us serve democracy with our hearts, speech—and with action." THE END.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES
by GEORGE WUNDER
THIS DOES IT! IF I EVER GET MY HANDS ON CHUM FUN, BOY HUMORIST, HE'LL DIE—LAUGHING OR NOT!
PLEASE, CHAZZ! HE COULDN'T HAVE REALIZED WE WERE SEARCHING FOR HIM. HE COULDN'T KNOW WE'D SEEN THE PAY-OFF ON THE CAT-DOWN-THE-BACK-OF-THE-NECK STUNT HE'D PLAYED ON THAT THUG OR THAT WE'D FOLLOWED THE MAN TO THIS ALLEY.
MAYBE, BUT AT LEAST HE COULD HAVE SHOOK HIS RATTLES BEFORE HE DROPPED THAT STRING OF FIRECRACKERS AND ROUSED HIS GUARDS—JUST AS CHOPS AND TERRY WERE TRYING TO LOCATE WHICH HOUSE HE WAS HELD IN.
CAN YOU SEE WHERE TERRY AND CHOPS ARE?
THEY'RE BOXED INTO THAT DARK CORNER—AND THE PAIR WITH THE THIRTY CALIBER HEMSTITCHERS ARE GETTING INTERESTED.
HEY! A ROCK... COULD BE...

Prince Valiant IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
BY HAROLD R FOSTER
Synopsis: PRINCE VALIANT HAS COMPLETED HIS QUEST; A FOUL NEST HAS BEEN CLEANED OUT. BUT HE FEELS NO PRIDE OR JOY FOR THE DEED WAS DONE BY TRICKERY, DECEIT AND BETRAYAL. SICK AT HEART HE ORDERS THE PRISONERS IN THE DUNGEONS TO BE BROUGHT BEFORE HIM.
THE DANK, DARK DUNGEONS GIVE UP THEIR PITIFUL CONTENTS. OF ALL THE HORRORS OF THIS TERRIBLE PLACE THE CONDITIONS OF THESE VICTIMS IS THE WORST FROM KNIGHTS HELD FOR RANSOM, THEIR WOUNDS UNTENDED, TO POOR CREATURES FORGOTTEN THROUGH THE YEARS, THEY TOTTER IN.
NO RECORDS HAVE BEEN KEPT OF THEIR CRIMES AND NO CRIME COULD JUSTIFY THEIR LONG TORMENT. VAL SETS ALL FREE!
HIS DEPRESSION LEAVES HIM; TO END THE RULE OF THE MAD TOURIENS WOULD JUSTIFY ANY METHOD! THEN KING ARTHUR'S KNIGHTS ARRIVE WITH THE CAPTURED ARMY AND VAL'S JOB IS DONE.
THE DISPIRITED ARMY WITH WHICH KING TOURIEN SET OUT TO ENSLAVE THE WORLD RETURNS HOME UNCOMPLAININGLY, FOR NOTHING COULD BE WORSE THAN THAT WHICH THEY HAD ENDURED UNDER THE KING'S RULE.
THE KING'S ADMINISTRATOR TAKES OVER AND ANOTHER KINGDOM IS ADDED TO ARTHUR'S GROWING DOMAIN.
-VAL STARTS HOMEWARD IN COMPANY WITH A GROUP OF KNIGHTS, AND EACH DAY THE GROUP GROWS LESS AS EVERY PATH AND CROSSROAD BECKONS SOME YOUNG WARRIOR TO RIDE IT AT ADVENTURE.

WE HELP MYRTLE WITH HER HOMEWORK
A MAN BUYS A DOG FOR TWENTY DOLLARS AND SELLS HIM FOR THIRTY DOLLARS AND PAYS TWO PERCENT COMMISSION ON THE PROFIT. HOW MUCH HAS HE LEFT?
THAT'S EASY, MYRTLE! JUST TAKE TWO PERCENT OF THIRTY AND SUBTRACT IT FROM THE PROFIT!
NO, FREDDIE! THAT'S NOT RIGHT. IT'S TWO PERCENT OF THE PROFIT!
READ IT AGAIN, MYRTLE! I DON'T SEE WHY THE MAN PAID A COMMISSION IF HE SOLD THE DOG, HIMSELF
CAN'T YOU HELP THEM, SLUG? YOU SOLD A DOG ONCE!
YEH, BUT THERE WASN'T ANY PROFIT!
GEE WHITH, AUNT THUTHIE! DON'T YOU THMELL THMOKE OUT HERE IN THE KITCHEN?
I HOPE IT ISN'T MY ROAST!
I HOPE SLUG DIDN'T TOSS A CIGARETTE IN THE WASTE-BASKET!
I HOPE IT ISN'T ME THEY'RE SELLING!
THEY'D NEVER GET THIRTY BUCKS FOR YOU!
